The Franklin Theatre, Allentown, has been sold by A. C. Werner to Stanley Wiligorski and Lewis Magners, who are now operating the house. This was the last of the theatre holdings of Mr. Werner, who formerly controlled a chain of picture houses in Allentown and Reading.

The North George Street Business Men's Association, of York, has elected C. C. Pippin, manager of the Strand motion picture theatre in that city, one of the chain operated by the Nathan Appell Amusement Enterprises, as president for the ensuing fiscal year.

Martin J. O'Toole, of Scranton, former head of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, was one of the prominent visitors in Harrisburg on the occasion of the inauguration of Governor John S. Fisher, on January 18. Mr. O'Toole was accompanied to Harrisburg by one of the cameramen of the Comerford chain of theatres, who shot pictures of the inaugural parade.

A plot, 75 by 90 feet, at Lee and Dix Courts, Scranton, has been bought by the Meco Realty Company of that city, in which the principal financial interest is said to be held by M. E. Comerford, head of the big Comerford chain of theatres. The property is centrally located near the Hotel Casey, and the price is said to have been $100,000. No plans for the immediate development of the plot have been announced, but there are rumors it will ultimately be used as part of the site of a new legitimate theatre.

John S. Fisher, the new Governor of Pennsylvania, at this writing had given no intimation of whether there will be any change in the personnel of the membership of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors. While very few changes have as yet been announced in the personnel of any of the departments of State government, the Governor has let it be known that he does not contemplate any very sweeping changes among departmental employes. The Censorship Board of three members is a bureau of the State Department of Public Instruction.

The Garden Theatre, Frackville, is to be enlarged in the coming spring, when a number of improvements will be made to the building. The seating capacity will be increased to 900. The plans are being prepared by J. B. Thompson, architect, of Philadelphia.

William G. Smith, formerly Independent motion picture producer and distributor and now manager of the Pittsburgh branch of Tiffany Productions, will be married to Miss Roslyn Becker on February 27, 1927.

Salt Lake City

THE new film building which is being erected on East First South Street of this city, and is to be occupied by F.B.O., Warner Brothers, Columbia Pictures, and United Artists, is expected to be ready for occupancy by April 1st.

The American Theatre here is undergoing preparations for the opening performance of the Vitaphone and "Don Juan," which will take place January 29th. Walter Mueller, engineer for the Vitaphone Corporation, is in this city in charge of the installation. A new screen is also being purchased in this connection:

Walter S. Rand, manager in this city for United Artists, has left here for Butte, Mont., and will make all of the important cities in that State before he returns.

M. J. Weisfeldt, Western Sales Manager for F.B.O., is visiting the Salt Lake exchange.

L. F. Brown, owner of the Isis and Oak theatres at Preston, Ida., is among exhibitor visitors here this week.

L. T. Tidler, manager of the local Columbia office, is making a trip of several weeks' duration into the Idaho country.

W. K. Millar, recently of Portland, Ore., has made connections with the Columbia Exchange in this city and is making his initial trip this week throughout the southern section of Utah.

S. B. Steck, of the Lyceum Theatre, Ogden, Utah, is in this city looking over the new season's product.

Paul Burger, assistant general manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, left here for Los Angeles after having spent several days at the local exchange.

Otto Schmidt, owner of the Colonial Theatre at Idaho Falls, Ida., is spending several days in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Guggins of the Casino Theatre, Gunnison, Utah, are also visiting here for a few days.

All of the exchanges along Film Row here had a fire drill this week with the Salt Lake Fire Department.

C. J. Hamal, salesman out of the Pathe office, had his car turned over recently while on a trip in Southern Utah, but, fortunately, was not hurt seriously.

D. S. Mitchell, division manager for Universal, came to this city from San Francisco to spend a few days at the local exchange. Mitchell and Branch Manager W. J. Heineman made a trip out of the local exchange.

Commissioner Harmon and Lou Peery, of the Egyptian and Ogden theatres at Ogden, Utah, were in town, lining up their new pictures for last week.

E. K. Dodge, operating Dodge Hall at Challis, Ida., is in this city, booking the new season's product. Dodge is here in the interest of the Challis Commercial Club, in an attempt to induce motion picture producers to become interested in the scenic value of that country.

Special Home Office Representative Ben F. Rosenberg is again visiting the local Fox Exchange.

B. F. Winzeler, owner of the Liberty Theatre at Tremonton, Utah, is among exhibitors conferring with local exchange managers here, as is S. R. Johnson, of the Rex Theatre at Castle Dale, Utah.

J. E. Ryan is in this city in the interest of his Liberty Theatre, at Brigham City, Utah.

Miss Nell Schrieber, owner of the Rialto Theatre, at St. Anthony, Ida., has returned after spending a few days here.

John Rugar, of the Orpheum, American, and new Egyptian theatres, at Park City, Utah, is a visitor here this week.

San Francisco

BRUCE CHESTER of the Veterans Film Service, New York and Chicago, was in this city January 15th to 22nd and conferred with Manager C. L. Theuerkauf of the Cameo Theatre.

Plans are being prepared for a $750,000 Class A theatre, hotel and store building for Ackerman & Harris and G. A. Oppenheimer. It is to be erected on Mission Street near 19th and will be 124 ft. wide.

Recently Mrs. L. E. Kennedy, wife of the branch manager of the local Pathe Exchange, was hostess to the ladies of the exchange in her home.

John Peters, Lyric Theatre, San Jose, has completed the installation of new Simplex Projectors.

R. C. Barthel, who has conducted theatre supply stores in the North, has been appointed branch manager in San Francisco for National Theatre Supply Company.

E. A. Smith of the Granada has announced that this theatre he manages installed new Simplex equipment.

Eugene W. Castle of the Castle Films was a local visitor recently.

S. Barusch, formerly with Warner Bros., is now connected with the Imported Pictures Corporation of this city.

W. W. Kofeldt, president of Imported Pictures Corporation, has returned from a trip North.

Ellis J. Arkush, who now owns five theatres in the Peninsula section, adjacent to San Francisco, has decided to construct two more. One in Palo Alto will cost $250,000 and one in Redwood City will cost $300,000.

Henry Pincus, manager of the Casino Theatre, was presented with an engraved pencil the first of the year, not because it was the beginning of a New Year, but as part recognition of his work.

Cleveland

ARTHUR EHRLICH has been appointed manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer branch office in Cleveland. He succeeds Harris P. Wolfberg, who has been advanced to district manager. Ehrlich has been with the Cleveland Metro - Goldwyn-Mayer exchange for seven successive years. He started out as salesman under C. E. Almy. From salesman-at-large, he was made city salesman and office manager, a position which he has held for five years.

Mrs. Georgia Moffett, secretary of the Cleveland Film Board of Trade, is recovering from an operation that, fortunately, didn't prove to be as serious as was forecast. The whole Film Building was in a state of excitement over her illness, for Mrs. Moffett's popularity rests upon her personality as well as upon her equitable management of the Board of Trade.

Francis X. Bushman (himself) was a visitor in the Film Building one day last week. Without any heralding he walked into the First National and Universal exchanges and exchanged greetings with friends.

A general toss-up in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer division managers' affairs has resulted in the following changes: Harris P. Wolfberg, who has been promoted from manager of the Cleveland exchange to division manager, has been given the Western division, succeeding Jack Flynn, who comes out here as Eastern Central division manager; while George Hickey, who covered the Eastern Central division, will have the Coast division.

Had Hull, F.B.O. exchange manager in Indianapolis, is hereby extended the sympathy of his Cleveland film friends. Hull's nine-year-old boy was drowned last week while coasting in the park. He lost control of his sled and it shot into the icy waters of the park's lake. A seventeen-year-old boy dove after the child and lost his own life in the vain attempt to rescue him. Mrs. Hull is a sister of Norman Moray, manager of the Cleveland exchange for Warner Brothers.

J. V. Wolcott, prominent Cleveland exhibitor, was owner of the Main Theatre, Scoville Avenue and East 25th Street, only a very short while. He bought the house in the fall, and last week sold it to J. E. Evans. Wolcott still has the Standard.

An investigation is on foot to discover whether it's a germ indigenous to the local Paramount Exchange, or whether it's something brought in from the outside, but the fact remains that with the exception of only two, every girl in the exchange at the present time is engaged to be married. Marie Gordier, in command of the switchboard, is the latest to succumb. She met her Waterloo out of the film trade. Paul Rauch is the name of the lucky man.

H. C. Purcell, First National Home Office representative, is spending the week as a working guest of the local First National exchange.

The Film Building register doesn't get much use on days of impassable roads, when driving is bad. However, a few out-of-town exhibitors were signed up, among them being Oscar Smith, Apollo Theatre, Oberlin; Harry Trifelos, Liberty, Canton; M. Moran, Lincoln, Youngstown; H. T. Palmer, Lyric, Fairport Harbor, and A. H. Abrams, Mozart, Canton.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio theatres, was in New York all of last week.

E. J. Higley has come out of Toledo to become assistant manager at Loew's Park Theatre, Cleveland. William Gilliam is house manager.

Lowell Cash, manager of the New Broadway Theatre, one of the largest houses in the Universal-Brody Circuit, was elected first vice-president of the 30th Ward Better Business Men's Club, at a meeting held last Friday. After the meeting Cash took the officers of the club in a body to the Imperial, the latest link in the U.-B. chain.

Harry Charnas has notified the home office of the Standard Film Service Company that he and his party, consisting of the missis and the boy, have arrived on the Coast and have started to work on their six weeks' vacation. Harry's Western address for the six weeks' period will be the Warner Brothers' Studio in Los Angeles.

M. R. (Duke) Clark, special representative from the Paramount home office, had a fine opportunity last week to see Ohio at its worst. He and Local Exchange Manager E. H. Brauer took a trip around the State to pay their personal respects to some of the exhibitors and in order to do so they had to battle with man-high snow drifts, and icy sidewalks. Otherwise, the trip was a complete success.

The Broadvue, located at State and Broadview roads, is Cleveland's newest photoplay house. B. Z. Levine and Ernest Schwartz, the owners, held an invitational opening last Friday evening, at which all of the 2,000 seats were occupied. A special program of prereleases was secured for the occasion. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program. The Broadvue is complete in every detail. Its equipment is composed of the best and latest materials. Nothing has been spared to make the house artistically and physically comfortable. The tendency in Cleveland, at this time, is to build large and commodious neighborhood houses. The small neighborhood house is passing. These new houses are built to compete with the large downtown houses, and are designed to keep neighborhood folks in the neighborhood. Combination programs are offered at popular prices. This program will also prevail at the Broadvue.

Tim Roberts of the White Way in Mansfield made that rare thing, a New Year's resolution, a resolution which he is keeping. He resolved to play bigger pictures at his theatre during 1927 than ever before. And so far he has done it. The first of the pictures of this type he played was "Three Bad Men" and the results were so satisfactory that he's sure his resolution was sound.

J. J. Mellert, a motion picture exhibitor of Cleveland from the beginning of motion picture history, has sold his Clark National Theatre and at the present writing is out of the exhibition field. If he follows in the footsteps of others who think they've had enough of the theatre business, he'll be back in the fold within a few months. Joseph Bakoski is the new owner of the Clark National.

Bert Botzum, who owns and operates the Orpheum, Canton and the Strand, Canton, was in New York last week. It is said he went east to negotiate for the Warner specials and for Vitaphone for Akron and Canton.

Messrs. Felter and Frederick, new managers of the Linwood Square Theatre at Norwalk, who took the house over from John Stool about six weeks ago, were in town last week on their first booking expedition.

Harry Dodge, central division manager for Famous Players-Lasky, was in Cleveland over the week-end preparatory to holding a division managers' meeting here on Monday. Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Columbus and Cincinnati were represented at the gathering.

Ross McVoy, who came out of Geneva, N.Y., a few months ago and took over the almost extinct Marvin Theatre in Findley, has proven that the old adage, "while there's life there's hope," applies to theatres as well as to humans. He first redecorated the house. Next he installed a first-class orchestra. Then he mapped out a combination vaudeville and motion picture policy with two changes a week at popular prices. And after that he went out and told the world all about it. He has exploited a good share of his pictures. He bills all the surrounding territory. And now the theatre looks so healthy that you'd never know that only a few months back the motion picture theatre diagnosticians gave up all hope for its recovery.

Meyer Fischer, president of the Fischer Film exchange, independent distributor, wants the exhibitors of Ohio and Kentucky to know that he will have prints of the one-reel Edgar Guest pictures ready for distribution the beginning of February.

Des Moines

J. L. BROOKER is now running the Paramount Theatre at Winterset. He bought the house from Bean and Prussia.

Another change of houses is that of the house at Monroe. G. A. DeHoet, who has had the theatre for some time, has sold out to Jas. McChesney. Mr. McChesney is lining up pictures for the new season.

The two theatres at Monticello have been consolidated. E. T. Landis owned the Princess there, and A. O. Lambert the Opera House. The houses will now be run in partnership, Mr. Landis announced.

Rube Wagel, booker for Producers Distributors, has just left the hospital and will soon be back at work. He has been ill for some time with stomach trouble.

C. L. Niles of the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company was a visitor in Film Row. This company is negotiating for several more theatres.

C. D. Hill, district manager for Producers Distributors, has been visiting the Des Moines office.

Several Iowa theatre men have been burned out recently. The Home Theatre at Eddyville was destroyed by fire and the Dreamland Theatre at Carson, Ia., is temporarily closed because of damage done by fire.

The offices of Tiffany in Des Moines are now in charge of P. Wintroub who comes from the Omaha office. William Wintroub, his brother, is manager of the Omaha exchange.

The Orpheum Theatre at Oelwein was recently purchased by the Eastern Iowa Theatres Company. The theatre was bought from L. E. Van Dollen.

The Royal Theatre at Charter Oak, which was owned by J. C. Jordan, has been sold. Leonard Bramson is the new owner. He plans to make a few changes in the theatre.

A bunch of tongue twisters was collected on the document which recorded the sale of the Empress Theatre at Chelsea from Kupka, Harback and McNall to C. C. Twisel. The deal was recently transacted.

Milwaukee

THE Parkway Theatre on Lisbon Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., one of Milwaukee's finest outskirt theatres, has been sold to the United Theatre Circuit.

The Parkway was formerly owned and has been operated for the past five years by the Parkway Amusement Company, E. W. VanNorman being the manager and part owner.

E. W. VanNorman has no plans for the immediate future, but will doubtless re-enter the exhibiting field. He is at present president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin and a member of the Milwaukee Censorship Board.

The Lorraine Theatre, which was recently opened by M. Stuck, is now under the management of Walter F. Rourke.

R. K. Mosiman, who manages the Rex Theatre at Oshkosh, was a recent Milwaukee visitor.

Fred Knispel, district representative of P.D.C., is spending a few days in the Milwaukee exchange.

Paul Bushong, owner of the Community Theatre, Gladstone, paid his first visit to Film Row during the week. Mr. Bushong has assumed active management of the theatre and came in to straighten out his bookings with various exchanges.

The Radio Theatre has again changed hands. It was recently taken over by Goetz Bros. and last week was signed over to I. Dexter.

Dick Honeck has been appointed manager of Saxe's new South Side theatre, the Plaza, which is to open in a week or two. Mr. Honeck was formerly assistant manager of the State in Racine.

The three-cornered fight among the Mikado, Capitol and Strand theatres at Manitowoc it is reported, will narrow down to two theatres in the near future.

Emil R. Franke has been made manager of the State Theatre to succeed S. P. Kennedy. Mr. Franke was formerly assistant manager of the Palace-Orpheum, after which he was associated with the State-Lake Theatre in Chicago as assistant manager.

The opening of the new Saxe Oshkosh Theatre at Oshkosh is scheduled for February 5th. The new Saxe Ambassador at North and Farwell is being rushed to completion and is expected to open in the spring.

Dan Kelliher of the Princess at Elkhorn and the Majestic at Lake Geneva, made his regular visit to Film Row on schedule this week.

M. J. Weisfeldt, well known to local exhibitors as the district manager for F.B.O., has been transferred to the Pacific Coast, where he will assume his duties as sales manager. Cleve Adams, who visited the local F.B.O. exchange on Thursday, has been appointed to succeed Mr. Weisfeldt as Mid-West sales manager.

The opening of the new Fischer Theatre in Portage has been delayed a few weeks by the cold weather.

Carl Beglinger and son, Carl, of the Majestic Theatre at Appleton, were in the city and called at the various local exchanges.

Ed. White, cashier at the Pathe exchange, has just purchased a new Whippet.

Frank Hensler, manager of the Omaha M-G-M branch, who was visiting the local exchange, has returned to Omaha.

Another new suburban theatre for Milwaukee is planned in the Layton Park district, in opposition to Charles Washachek's Layton Park.

Progress office, not to be outdone by the Milwaukee Auto Show, is staging a little auto exhibit of its own in the form of a smart little (very little) roadster, fully equipped, which graces one corner of the office.

J. Vander Vaart, manager of the Vander Vaart Theatre at Sheboygan, and his son, were in Milwaukee to visit the Auto Show, and incidentally visited Film Row.

P. M. Cain of the Falls Theatre, Sheboygan Falls, was among out-of-town exhibitors in the city this week who attended the Auto Show.

The steel structure of Charles Pylet's new $100,000 Shorewood Theatre in Shorewood, Milwaukee's northern suburb, is being erected.

George Kohn, field representative of F.B.O., has just returned from a trip to the Michigan peninsula. He reports the weather cold and the snow deep.

The foundation has been laid for the new Universal Theatre in Kenosha and a crew is active on the structure of the old Rhode Theatre, where, it is reported, Saxe will build a new house..

Al Picker, manager of the Rex and Rialto at Ironwood, is happy again these days, having settled his legal difficulties with the Goetz Bros. who are now confining their principal activities to their new theatres in Milwaukee. Al says he is planning to build a beautiful new theatre in the spring.

Several important developments are looked for in the spring on the upper peninsula. Several of the more important towns are slated for improvements in the way of modern theatres.

Jack Hayes, former famous columnist on the Kansas City Star, special writer for the Chicago Herald-Examiner, and late of the Universal organization, has joined forces, pro tem, with M-G-M as exploitation representative for Wisconsin and Upper Michigan.

Elmer Huhnke, salesman for First National, has returned from an extensive trip through the Michigan peninsula, and reports roads in Michigan to be in very good shape. Snow plows and scrapers, road wide, keep the highways open and level for fast driving. Every city and county on the peninsula is accessible to the motorist despite the unusually heavy snow, according to Mr. Huhnke.

P. Peterson, manager of the new Club Theatre at Niagara, spent a few days in the city this week. The Club Theatre, which was opened about the first of the year, is a model civic recreational center. In addition to the theatre, which has a capacity of about 500, the new building houses club and lodge rooms available to local fraternal orders, a dance floor, general lounge, women's lounge and rest rooms, showers for men, women and boys, bowling alleys, billiard room, a refectory and candy kitchen. The lobby of the theatre is luxuriously furnished. A new Orthophonic Victrola and a radio have been installed to make the foyer even more attractive. The Club is considered a model community center, equipped to satisfy the needs of a far larger town than Niagara in a most competent way.

Out-of-town exhibitors in the city this week included Frank Nowacheck, who manages the Adams Theatre at Adams; Francis Kadow of the Mikado Theatre at Manitowoc; R. Leach of the Opera House, Hartford; L. Thurwachter of the Park at Waukesha; Jack Hickey, manager of the Grand at New Lisbon; and Ray Zerbel, manager of the Delft at Marquette, Mich.

Indianapolis

WITH the acquisition of the Howard and Arcade theatres, the Goulden-Feldman Theatres, Inc., now control eight theatres in Indianapolis territory.

The Goulden-Feldman Theatres, Inc., one of the fastest growing circuits in Indiana, was organized March 1st, 1926, when the Capitol Theatre was acquired.

The Capitol is a downtown theatre which formerly was operated by the Columbia Burlesque Wheel, and also by the Shuberts. After some remodeling and decorating the theatre was opened at an admission of 15c with pictures, continuous from 9 A.M. to 11 P.M.

The Emerald, Laurel, Jewel, Illinois of Indianapolis, and Alhambra at Terre Haute, Ind., soon followed and now the Howard and Arcade of Indianapolis, Ind.

Louis B. Goulden, president and general manager of Goulden-Feldman Theatres, Inc., is an old-timer. In 1908 he opened his first theatre at Jefferson, Wis., and later branched out to Milwaukee, where he operated the Cozy, Hippodrome and Owl theatres, later becoming president and general manager of the Northern Feature Film Co., and the Federal Feature Film Supply Corp. of Chicago. For the past eleven years he was manager of the Indianapolis office of Celebrated Players Film Corp., which position he held until he resigned to devote his entire time to the theatre circuit.

F. E. Hammer and Donald Hammer, owners of the Colonial Theatre at Peru, have taken over the Grand picture house, through a lease from Bruce Carr. Policy will be continued.

Donald Hammer, son of F. E. Hammer, local manager, is employed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corp.

The proposed 1,800-seat capacity Fountain Square Theatre to be included in a building at Shelby and Prospect Streets, has been leased by Fred Sanders, theatre operator, for ten years.

Peerless Realty will erect the structure this spring. The fireproof building will be surrounded by business houses. Frank B. Hunter and Bennett Kay are architects.

The $450,000 building will make the second modern South Side theatre to be erected in the next few months.

A group associated with Fitzpatrick and McElroy, Chicago promoters, has obtained a ninety-nine-year lease on a site for a new $400,000 structure at Woodlawn and Virginia avenues. Seating capacity will be 1,850. Both will be movie houses.

A resolution of regret on the death of State Recording Secretary, Mrs. James W. Salsberry, was adopted by Indiana Photoplay Indorsers.

W. J. Price, formerly connected with Fox and First National in the East, has succeeded Joe D. Levy, who has been transferred, as manager of the Indianapolis exchange of United Artists, 408 N. Illinois Street.

Milton Caplon, of New York, formerly connected with the home offices of Warner Brothers Film Classics, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Distributing Corporation, has been temporarily assigned to the Indianapolis branch of Renown Pictures, Incorporated.

Caplon, who is in charge of reorganizing the Indianapolis exchange, succeeds R. W. Abbott, who resigned.

Miss Marion McCullough, manager of the Indianapolis Film Board of Trade, returned last week from Chicago and Milwaukee where she attended meetings of the Film boards.

Atlanta

ERNEST EMERLING, manager of Loew's Temple Theatre in Birmingham, came over to Atlanta for several days this week. Mr. Emerling, who was accompanied by Mrs. Emerling, paid Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. James a mutually enjoyable visit Wednesday during which much pertaining to Loew theatres, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer product and general conditions in the amusement worlds of Atlanta and Birmingham was discussed. Mr. James is manager of Loew's Grand Theatre in Atlanta.

Mack Jackson, owner and manager of the Strand Theatre, Alexander City, Ala., visited Atlanta last week on a business trip.

Before he adopted Alabama for his home, Mr. Jackson lived in Atlanta for many years. Seven years ago he established his home and his business in Alexander City, where he operates the Strand.

Harry G. Ballance, district manager for Famous Players-Lasky, with headquarters in Atlanta, left the latter part of the week for a brief business trip to Nashville, Tenn.

F. L. Alig, auditor in the Atlanta office of National Theatre Supply Company, who was operated on last week for appendicitis, was reported this week as convalescing nicely. He is at St. Joseph's Infirmary.

George Chester, of the Enterprise Film Corporation, was in Atlanta this week, having arrived from Charlotte. While here, he conferred with Major John W. Quillan, president of the company, whose headquarters are in Atlanta.

L. B. Remy, of Dallas, Tex., who is in charge of affairs in the South for William Fox, stopped over in Atlanta last Wednesday while on a business trip through the territory. After a conference here with George Allison, head of the Fox local branch, Mr. Remy left for Oklahoma.

Earle E. Griggs, exploiteer for Universal, left last Sunday for Birmingham, Ala., where he assisted at the opening of the Empire Theatre, the new house operated by the Marvin Wise Enterprises.

John W. Mangham, Jr., branch manager of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, with headquarters in Atlanta, after a trip the early part of the week to Rome, Ga., left Wednesday for a brief tour of the Tennessee territory.

Bruce Snyder, of Bessemer, Ala., who operates two theatres there, was a visitor on Film Row this week.

J. T. ("Jimmy") Monnier, general manager of the Si-Non Circuit, with theatres at Demopolis, Marion, Uniontown, Eutaw, York and Greensboro, was a Birmingham visitor last week.

Manager C. R. Everett, of the Palace, Jacksonville, Ala., has installed a heating plant in his theatre, which greatly adds to the comfort of his patrons.

Hugh Smart, formerly manager of the Noble, Anniston, has been transferred to the Strand, Montgomery, where he will be under that genial showman, Hoxie C. Farley. His successor at Anniston is Thomas Y. Walker, a young live wire, who has worked his way up through the ranks from usher to house manager and is one of the most conscientious and hardest workers in Alabama.

F. T. Banks, of the Lyric Theatre, Anniston, paid Atlanta a flying visit last week.

One of the most successful exhibitors in Alabama is Mrs. A. H. Watson, who operates the Strand, at Montevallo, the seat of Alabama Women's College. Mrs. Watson has been in the show business for about ten years, and is respected and loved by all residents of the town and vicinity. She has been signally honored in always having the trust of the college heads, who are very careful to see that their charges are under proper chaperonage, which Mrs. Watson provides at her theatre, as well as selecting the best in motion pictures for their delectation.

J. M. Vernon, of Brownville, Ala., is soon to open up a modern motion picture theatre seating about 500. The house will have up-to-date equipment of high standard. January 20 is the tentative date for the opening.

Grover Wise has taken over the Cameo Theatre in Avondale, here in Birmingham, and will spend several thousand dollars redecorating and improving the house.

Louis Rosenbaum, of Muscle Shoals Theatres, Inc., operating the Princess and Majestic, of Florence, Ala., the Palace at Sheffield, and the Strand at Tuscumbia, visited Atlanta last week.

C. B. Hendon, of the Lyric Theatre, Townley, was in Birmingham recently.

It is reported that C. T. Bobo, of the Dreamland Theatre, Scottsboro, Ala., will build a new house this Spring to seat 800.

Tony Sudekum, head of the Crescent Amusement Company, Nashville, Tenn., and prime factor, likewise, in chain theatre enterprises of Alabama, paid a flying visit to Huntsville, Ala., recently, to look over his latest acquisitions, the Grand and Jefferson theatres.

Ernest F. Ingram, of Ingram's Theatre, Ashland, Ala., paid his respects to Atlanta's Film Row last week.

J. W. Cramer, operating the Rainbow Theatre at Opelika, Ala., has sold out his interest in the Liberty Theatre at Roanoke, Ala. Mr. Cramer has been in ill health and therefore unable to give both houses the necessary personal attention.

Atlanta exchanges were well represented in Birmingham during the past week. Among representatives calling on Birmingham exhibitors were, A. R. McRae, of F.B.O.; Matt Whitham, of Fox; Bill Specht, of Liberty-Specialty; O. K. Bourgeois, of Pathe, and J. W. Greenleaf, of Universal.

The Casino Theatre at Tuscaloosa, Ala., is scheduled to open the latter part of the week. A stock company will occupy the house for a time, but it is understood that pictures will be included in the policy. Manager Stallworth, who has been ill for some time, is now up and about looking after details incidental to the opening of his new house.

Baltimore

THE State Theatre, which is being built here at Monument and Castle streets, is expected to open some time in March, according to the present plans. The bowling alleys, which are a part of the theatrical enterprise and housed in the same building, have been opened to the public. Frank Durkee is back of the project. He is head of the theatre companies operating the Palace, Belnord, Grand and Forest theatres in Baltimore.

Frank Braden, who has been acting as publicity representative for Loew's Incorporated, here, controlling the Century, Valencia and Parkway theatres, has resigned to go to St. Louis to join a winter circus as its publicity man. Charles L. Winston has succeeded Mr. Braden from Loew's State, Boston.

A letter mailed 30 years ago from Asbury Park, N.J., by Mrs. J. M. Shellman, wife of the motion picture editor of the Baltimore Sun, was received by her mother, Mrs. Randolph Winslow, wife of the famous surgeon, on Sunday, January 23, when an old mail box in the vestibule of their home at 1900 Mt. Royal Terrace was taken down. The letter had become wedged in the bottom of the box and had remained there for 30 years.

It is expected that the new Universal Exchange Building, Washington, D.C., will be opened about February 15. A party will be given by M. Van Praag and the Universal Boosters' Club as the opening event for exhibitors and other exchange men in the Capitol City. The new building is located next to the former Universal exchange building, New Jersey Avenue and K Street.

The Washington, D.C., offices of Gotham and Columbia Pictures have combined and hereafter productions of Gotham and Lumas and Columbia will be handled out of the Columbia exchange. In charge of the sales and distribution forces will be William P. Dutton, who has managed the Columbia exchange there for some time. Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia will be included in the territory covered by that exchange.

Due to her father being ill in Little Rock, Ark., Lily Plummer, formerly employed at the Washington, D.C., Pathe office, has returned to her home there.

An operation on the throat on J. S. Wolf, representative of Producers Distributing Corporation, Washington, D.C., was performed recently, but he has recovered and is back at work now.

Louis M. Metzger, office manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange, Washington, D.C., has gone to the Detroit office of that company.

A motion picture theatre to cost about $125,000 is to be built in the business district of Fredericksburg, Va. It will measure 54 by 170 feet and have a seating capacity of 1,200 persons. The site for the building was purchased recently by the Pitts' Realty Corporation.

Jake Wells, whose moving picture interests in Virginia were purchased by Wilmer and Vincent recently, has bought the Carolina Terrace Hotel property, Henderson, N.C. The reported price was $150,000. He plans to develop it.

The Capitol Theatre, Danville, Va., which is rapidly nearing completion will be opened within the next few weeks, it is said.

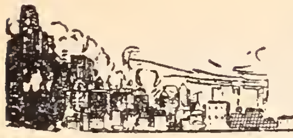
An orchestral organ has been installed in the Jefferson Theatre, Charlotteville, Va., by the Kendler-Zimmerman Corporation. The organ chambers were placed in the space formerly occupied by the upper boxes.

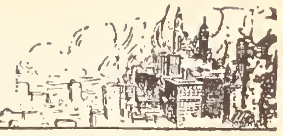
A theatre building in Charlotte, N.C., will soon be remodeled at a cost of about $142,000 according to a report from that city. The architect who designed the plans for the reconstruction is William Peeps.

A theatre to have a seating capacity of about 900 persons will be built in Pocomoke City, Md., by Frank H. Bartlett of Berlin, Md. Motion pictures will be shown principally, but a stage will be built in so that all kinds of entertainment can be given.

A building to contain offices, stores and a theatre to cost about $350,000, has been designed by J. M. Cahoon, architect, for Edgeville, N.C.

In the plans of George Shafer and Edward Hazlitt, of Wheeling, W.Va., for business block containing stores, offices and a nine story hotel, a theatre is included.





New York and New Jersey

THAT the several children's societies in this zone are still active in the matter of checking the admission of minors to motion picture theatres is evidenced by bits of conversation picked up here and there among our local showmen. These seem to apply mainly to those exhibitors whose theatre properties are classed as neighborhood houses, sections of the city where the society's agents seem to have directed most of their energy in haling a number of theatre owners to court where the cases were shortly disposed of; some of them getting off more or less lightly in view of the recent Montreal disaster, and others becoming involved in further court hearings of a more serious nature. According to two or three exhibitors, who have experienced being haled before the court officials, they will not take any further chances admitting youngsters who appear to be under age. Determining age, however, seems to be rather difficult at times; particularly in this flapper era when sophisticated young ladies of fourteen step up to the ticket booths and demand and pay for an adult admission ticket.

On Monday, January 4, fire in the basement of the Lyndhurst Theatre, a motion picture house located at Lyndhurst, N.J., damaged the theatre and two adjoining stores to the extent of $25,000. An explosion in the theatre's heating plant is said to have caused the blaze. Ice on the pavements seriously affected the efforts of the firemen to subdue the conflagration. The theatre was unoccupied at the time.

Local exhibitors will recall the Lyndhurst as at one time having been owned by John Collins, former M.P.T.O. of N.J. official. Mr. Collins, it is said, put mostly "his all" in the house when he built it, only to have it proved to him in the future that the location was not all that it should have been for a lucrative return on his investment. Later on, the Lyndhurst was turned over to Dahnken and Clark and subsequently closed until the present operators, the South Bergen Amusement Company, took it over.

Pelham Lynton, that fast working Pathe-Jersey salesman, probably knows as much about the Lyndhurst's history as most of them. Lynton says, "I was there when the house opened, and I was there when she closed." And that's that.

Irving Gerber, spokesman and right hand man of William Salkin, the latter a rising film potentate of New York's East Side, advises that Salkin's new Eagle Theatre, 103rd Street and 3rd Avenue, will definitely open on February 20th The new house, built with the care and foresight which Mr. Salkin usually displays when launched on a theatre project, is particularly well located, is one of the stadium type with about 1,350 seats and is modern in every detail. William Salkin has lived in this neighborhood for the past seventeen years and in addition to the new Eagle owns and operates two other theatres in the same territory. It is said that this circuit will also break ground for one or two more houses in the near future.

Holy Week is the time Sam Perry of Englewood has chosen to suspend operations while the Englewood undergoes an entire redecorating of the interior, change of seating arrangement, etc. Mr. Perry has contracted with the American Seating Company for a shipment of brand new heavily upholstered chairs and will also do away with the middle aisle, thereby adding to the seating capacity by two or three dozen. New stage furnishings and side wall drapes have been installed by the Novelty Scenic Studios and have greatly added to the appearance of the Englewood's auditorium. Only a week or so ago the new marquee, patterned after the one which adorns the front of New York's Paramount, was completed and hung, so it looks as though Mr. Perry has practically built himself a new theatre.

The Isle Amusement Company, a Staten Island theatre circuit owned and operated by Chas. Moses and Irving Johnson, are at present building two large motion picture theatres, one at St. George and one in West New Brighton. This company also owns the Strand at Great Kills; the Richmond, at Stapleton; the Liberty, at Stapleton, and the Ritz Theatre, Port Richmond.

Joe Hornstein recently spent several days in Washington, D.C., in the interest of the National Supply Company, of which he is the Eastern zone manager.

The Cherokee Theatre, 81st Street and 1st Avenue, New York City, will reopen in the near future. The Cherokee seats about 600 and was formerly owned by Joe Steinkritz.

The reason that Milton Kronacher absented himself from the Pathe exchange office last Tuesday and that on his return to duties the following morning, it was observed that he would occasionally bow his head and groan, can be easily explained: You see, one of Milt's favorite nieces, Miss Renee Marks, formerly with Famous-Players and Tiffany, set her wedding date for the night before and Milton did his best to assist at the following reception. The former Miss Marks and her husband will make their home in Syracuse, N.Y.

Back from Texas but a short time, Wm. Atkin is again in harness at his old position superintending the Bohemian Annex, Rex Theatre and the 58th Street playhouse.

Two of our prominent local theatre owners are basking in the pleasant Florida sunshine. One is Harry Blinderman, partner in the ownership of one of New York's largest circuits, and the other, Miss Henrietta Schneir, proprietress of the Central Theatre and various beauty parlors on Manhattan Island.

A recent court decision relating to the Strand Theatre, Red Bank, N.J., was instrumental in that house reverting to its former owner, J. Clark O'Connor. As near as can be ascertained, the Strand, which was built and previously operated by Mr. Clark, eventually came under the control of the Walter Reade circuit, after which the theatre ceased to operate. Through some mixup or other, the control of the house has passed out of the hands of the Reade Enterprises and it is reported that Mr. Clark will again open the house for business.

Last Sunday, both Red Bank and West Orange theatres were open and unmolested by blue law agents seeking to uphold the old State vice and immorality act; in fact it is said that the mayors of these two Jersey communities are altogether in sympathy with an open Sunday and with the latest open Sunday bill before the State Legislature, it seems possible that the difficulties which have confronted Jersey exhibitors in the past and at present will undoubtedly be adjusted to suit all.

Another testimonial given a popular theatre circuit executive was the recent birthday dinner tendered William McChesney, general manager of the Walter Reade Enterprises, when all circuit employees dined Mr. McChesney and presented him with a handsome and appropriate gift. The event was in celebration of McChesney's thirty-fifth year.

February 15th is the definite opening date of Stanley Sobelson's Elmora Theatre, Elmora, N.J.

W. L. Stewart, proprietor and manager of the Patricia Theatre, London, Ontario, for many years, has retired from the business and has gone to the Southern States for a long holiday. Before his departure he was presented with two handsome traveling bags from the Musicians' Union and the Projection Machine Operators' Local.

A veteran exhibitor has passed out of the picture in Canada, this being A.A. Cooper, for the past eighteen years manager and proprietor of the Lyceum Theatre, Huntsville, Ontario. Mr. Cooper has leased the Lyceum to D. Strano and Hugh Richardson has been appointed house manager by Mr. Strano. Mr. Cooper has retired from the moving picture business to devote his attention to mining interests in Northern Ontario.

A. Broadley, projection machine operator at the Patricia Theatre, Leamington, Ontario, has become a theatre owner, having bought the Star Theatre at Tilbury, Ont. He will continue to have charge of the booth in the Leamington house, however.

The Lonsdale Theatre, Vancouver, B.C., was broken into by thieves, who removed the safe to the sidewalk and left it there unopened, apparently having become frightened by approaching traffic. Manager Harper reported that this was the second time that the safe had been carried out by unknown intruders and not opened.

The Canadian Theatre, St. John Street, Quebec, of which Joseph Paquet is manager, is being altered to meet legal requirements and will re-open shortly, it is understood, when the changes are approved by the Department of Public Works.

A number of changes have taken place among the managers of suburban theatres operated in Toronto by Famous Players Canadian Corp. Ben. Geldzaeler, manager of the Parkdale Theatre, Toronto, for years, has been promoted to the post of general supervisor of suburban theatres by Famous Players.

Jack Quarrington, who has held forth at the Beaver Theatre for practically a decade, has been appointed manager of the Parkdale in succession to Mr. Geldzaeler.

Harry Smith, manager of the Teck Theatre in the Eastern section of the city, has been appointed manager of the Classic, also in the East End.

Jack Laver, who has had charge of the York Theatre for some months, became manager of a new North-End theatre, the Bedford Theatre.

Claude Alexander is the latest on the staff of head office of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, to step into double harness. He has returned from his honeymoon and is back at work.

The hockey team of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, opened the season in the Ontario Capital with a brilliant victory over the Toronto Daily Star team in the Toronto League at Willowdale Arena by the score of 2 to 1.

Manager W. P. McGeachie of the Algoma Theatre at Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, tells an interesting story of mishaps regarding the recent record cold snap in Northern Ontario. He says that the crunching of snow under foot was so loud that conversation was impossible. Every time you took a breath your nostrils froze together, making breathing impossible. Anchor ice got into the turbines at the power plant, throwing the city into darkness. After reaching home in the dark, he decided to have a warm drink. By the light of a candle he discovered that the water pipes in the house were frozen.

Yet he loves the Canadian winter.

Chicago

CHICK HARVEY, manager of the new Varsity Theatre, Evanston, is planning to hold an anniversary party in the Rose Ballroom of the theatre next Saturday night, and a large number of film men are expected to participate in the festivities.

Bert Fischer of the Park and Mozart theatres, Milwaukee, came to Chicago last week to arrange for purchasing an organ for the Lincoln Theatre, which he recently acquired and is remodelling.

Gerald Gallagher has been appointed manager of Balaban & Katz's Central Park Theatre. For some time past he has been manager of Lubliner & Trinz's Pantheon.

Manager Felix Mendelsohn, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, left Saturday for a vacation trip to the Bermudas. He expects to be back at his desk within three weeks. During his absence Sam Berger of the home office will be in charge of the Chicago exchange.

Ascher Brothers are planning to open their handsome new Sheridan Theatre, at 4038 Sheridan Road, on February 10th. It is to be a twenty-six hundred seat de lux theatre.

Pat Garon of National Screen Service was here for a conference with Branch Manager Young this week. He later plans to attend the exhibitor's convention at Des Moines and also visit Milwaukee.

Divisional Manager Le Roy Alexander of Universal, accompanied by his wife and Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Mitchell, made a special trip to Los Angeles to participate in Carl Laemmle's sixtieth anniversary celebration. Mr. Alexander expects to spend a fortnight vacationing on the coast before returning to Chicago.

Hudson & Rule have taken over the Gayety Theatre at St. Elmo, Ill., formerly operated by L. E. Johnston.

S. E. Pirtle has sold his Dixie Theatre, Vandalia, Ill., to Harry Tanner, of Pana, Ill.

The Dreamland Theatre at Roodhouse, Ill., which recently burned down, is being rebuilt and will be ready for business the latter part of February.

District Manager Wesley Bachmeyer and Lester Stern, manager of Fox's Detroit exchange, were Chicago visitors this week.

Eddie Carrier, who has a host of friends in Chicago, sends a clever New Year's greeting card from France. He apparently is enjoying Paris.

Joe Wolf, field representative of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who is doing special work in Milwaukee, was a Film Row visitor last week.

Many friends of O. A. Robinson, of the Clarendon Theatre, Morocco, Ind., will regret to hear that his wife is seriously ill.

Lee Marcus, general sales manager of F.B.O., spent several days in Chicago, making his headquarters at the local exchange. Mr. Marcus is making a tour of F.B.O.'s Central West exchanges.

Midwest Sales Manager Cleve Adams left this week on an extended tour of exchanges under his jurisdiction and will probably be away from Chicago for a month.

George Miller, manager of Simansky & Miller's Lido Theatre in Maywood, is back on the job after being confined to his home by illness for several days.

Coincident with the affiliation of V. U. Young's houses, the Palace, Orpheum, Gary and Broadway, and Pete Kolaris' houses, the Grand and Cosmo, all of Gary, Ind., with his booking circuit, Earl Johnson has changed its name from Johnson Theatres, Inc., to Illinois and Indiana Theatres, Inc. James Gregory's Gaiety at Ottawa, Ill., is another recent addition to this circuit, and it is understood that within a few days ten more houses will put the buying of their pictures in the hands of the Illinois and Indiana Theatres, Inc. Twenty-three houses are now members of this buying chain.

A two-story building, to contain a two-thousand-seat motion picture theatre, twelve stores, a bowling alley and apartment, is planned for the southwest corner of Clark and Villa streets in Villa Park, by Fridstein & Company. It is stated that work will start at once. This is the second motion picture project recently announced for Villa Park.

E. B. Deer, treasurer of F.B.O., stopped off in Chicago for a visit with Midwest Sales Manager Cleve Adams and Manager Jack Sampson. Mr. Deer is en route to the coast, where he will spend some time at the company's studios.

Jules Moss, former purchasing agent for Lubliner & Trinz, is back in Chicago after a vacation spent in California. It is understood that Mr. Moss plans to make a new connection which will keep him in this city.

The Lyric Theatre at Streator, Ill., is now running only on Saturday and Sunday. It is operated by the Eastern Illinois Amusement Company.

Charles Ryan has resigned as manager of H. J. Merle's Irving Theatre, with which he has been connected for the past year, to accept a position with James Coston of the Coston Circuit. Mr. Ryan will direct theatre activities of a string of residential houses, of which Mr. Coston is president. Mr. Ryan is a veteran in theatre management, having been connected with this branch of the industry for the past seventeen years.

Kansas City

JOHN NOLAN, branch manager of the Fox Exchange in Kansas City, is the new chairman of the Kansas City Joint Board of Arbitration. Mr. Nolan has been one of the most ardent workers for the betterment of working conditions between exhibitors and exchanges in the Kansas City territory. The board, which was disrupted for two weeks recently by a "walk-out" on the part of the exhibitor members, now is functioning smoothly.

The first party of the M-G-M Club, composed of the manager, assistant manager, salesmen, bookers and secretaries of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange in Kansas City, will take place next Saturday, which will include a screening, dancing, orchestra and refreshments. James Shorgl, booker, is president of the club.

Two years ago in Dayton, Ohio, Miss Jean St. Clair and Mohamid Ben Wagneman, who now are at the Garden Theatre, motion picture and vaudeville house of Kansas City, made a wager to the effect that the first to get married before January 15 would forfeit a gift, to be decided later. No sooner had the time limit elapsed this week, than the couple went to the courthouse in Kansas City and were married.

"We at least saved the expense of buying those gifts," Miss St. Clair smiled.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were C. W. Goodell, Pastime, ferson, Princess and Grand, Springfield, Mo.; Frank Weary, Farris Theatre, Richmond, Mo.; G. L. Rugg, Weston, Mo.; Ed. Peskay, Penn Theatre, St. Joseph, Mo.; Herb Thatcher, Abilene, Kans.

A new and "chic" head of bobbed hair made its appearance in the M. P. T. O. Kansas-Missouri headquarters at Kansas City this week. It was that of Miss June Metcalf, secretary.

Ira Cohen, former district manager for Fox in Kansas City, waved a farewell to friends and departed for Cincinnati, where he is Fox branch manager.

Miss H. LeGender, former cashier of the Paramount branch in Des Moines, Iowa, has joined the personnel of the Kansas City Paramount branch.

Les Durland, film veteran of Kansas City, will be the new booker for the Tiffany Productions, Inc., branch when the new office of that company is completed in Kansas City.

Max Rother, Fox home office representative, was a Kansas City visitor. C. M. Parkhurst, booking manager at the P. D. C. branch, is the father of an eight-pound baby girl—and it is not a bouncing baby, he vows.

C. W. Allen, P. D. C. salesman, sold a block of pictures to a Kansas City theatre the other day, which, he contends, entitles him to

THE Empress Theatre at Shenandoah, Ia., has been sold to B. B. Holdridge by C. J. Latta, who was heralded last year as the most honest advertiser in this country. Latta advertised a picture he was showing as a poor one and warned his patrons that they would be dissatisfied. However, the picture did capacity business and patronage was increased by the warning.

J. B. Abrahamson, who has owned the Rialto Theatre at Murdock, Minn., for two years, has sold the theatre to John DeMarce, who operates the Viking in the same town.

Frank McCarthy, recent purchaser of the Pleasant Hour Theatre, Brookings, S.Dak., has improved the interior of the building and renamed it The Grand.

The Winfred Theatre, Winfred, S.Dak., has been taken over by Dwight Goodrow and pictures will be shown on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Charles Hill of George, Ia., has reopened the Royal Theatre which was closed some time ago because of lack of business.

The Lyric Theatre at Lakota, N. Dak., is being operated now by E. T. Sloan, who used to operate the house several years ago.

The Nujoy Theatre, Ashton, S. Dak., has been closed indefinitely by W. E. Cole, manager, because of lack of patronage.

The motion picture theatre at Lake Norden, S. Dak., has been sold by Henry Horten to J. A. Salo and O. C. Vik.

The Crystal Theatre building at Waterloo, Ia., which was burned recently, is to be rebuilt soon according to H. A. Maine, who manages the building.

S. R. Wood, owner of the Bijou Theatre, Tioga, N.Dak., was a recent visitor at Minneapolis exchanges. Among other visitors at the exchanges were J. S. Schreiber of the Grand Theatre, Breckenridge, Minn., and Harvey Day, home office representative of Educational Pictures.

Two new projectors were recently purchased by Dick Baseen of the Arcade Theatre, Minot, N. Dak.

The Leeds Theatre, Leeds, Ia., is being managed by Mrs. R. O. Brownell, recent purchaser of the theatre.

C. T. McIntire has sold the Princess Theatre at Berthold, N.Dak., to Ralph Lautenschlager.

The Isis Theatre at Webster City, Ia., was destroyed by fire last week with damage estimated at $50,000.

The Miller Opera House at Farmington, Ia., and the New Grand Theatre at Greenfield, Ia., both opened for business recently.

The Lyric Theatre at Sioux Falls, S.Dak., has been purchased from S. A. Goethal by Ralph N. Jones, who formerly owned houses at Sturgis and Sioux Falls.

W. A. Twamleyn has bought the Community Theatre at Platte, S.Dak., from Frank Delire.

Palmer J. Soughstad has been named manager of the New Grand Theatre at Northwood, N.Dak., by H. B. Olin, the owner.

A new theatre is being built at Albany, Minn., by Jerry Wertin, who now operates the Winter Theatre in that town. The new house will have a seating capacity of 400 and will be completed by June 1st.

Mrs. Cora Thompson, who closed the Opera House at Dodge Center, Minn., last summer, has opened up the theatre again. She also operates the Opera House at Kasson, Minn.

First National has established an exploitation department in connection with its Minneapolis exchange. Charles McCarthy, a former theatre owner, will be in charge.

The Minneapolis branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer received a visit recently from Felix Feist, general manager; A. F. Cummings, his assistant, and S. A. Shirley, district manager. They remained in the city two days studying conditions here.

Leonard Leigh, one of the best known organists of the Northwest, returned recently to the Capitol Theatre, St. Paul, from the Garrick, Duluth. Stan Segelbaum, manager of the Capitol, arranged a novel introduction for Leigh.

Pictures were taken of Leigh's arrival at the St. Paul station where he was greeted by many friends and in front of the theatre. These pictures were shown at the theatre while the orchestra played "Cheer, Cheer, the Gang's All Here." Then the console of the giant Wurlitzer raised into view slowly. Leigh was given tremendous applause.

Dr. Francis T. Richter, well-known blind organist, has been transferred from the Strand, Minneapolis, to the Capitol, St. Paul. He succeeds Miss Elsie Thompson, who will assist Eddie Dunstedter at the State, Minneapolis.

Mrs. Etta Ruben Frankel died in a St. Paul hospital last week. She was the sister of I. H. Ruben of Finkelstein & Ruben.

Seattle

HUGH W. BRUEN, general manager of the new Northwest Theatrical Enterprises, consisting of ten suburban and one downtown picture houses operated for the Universal Pictures Corporation, last week announced the opening of executive offices on the top floor of the Securities Building, adjacent to Film Row. The Northwest Theatrical group was formerly the Pacific Theatres, Inc., and included a group of suburban exhibitors in practically every district of Seattle, taken over a month ago by Universal.

Frank Quictt, former booker at Manager L. A. Samuelson's local Pathe exchange, resigned last week to accept the position of sales representative with Jack Lannon's Greater Features exchanges. He has been succeeded by Art Grantz, booker at the Pathe office in Portland, who holds the enviable record of having been a Pathe employee for more than nine years.

Another addition to the Greater Features force is A. Clatworthy, who will represent Mr. Lannon's office in Eastern Washington, Western Montana and Northwestern Idaho. Mr. Clatworthy was formerly associated with Manager Mat Aparton's local Universal sales force.

Ray Grombacher, theatre magnate of Spokane, paid one of his infrequent visits to Film Row last week. He is making plans for the presentation of a number of extended run productions at his Liberty Theatre during the coming season.

J. F. Burke, auditor for the Educational Pictures Company, was a visitor at Manager J. A. Gage's local Educational office last week. Mr. Burke left his New York headquarters only a short time ago, and is on his first tour of the exchanges in a number of months.

Harry S. Schenck, business manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, spent a short time in this territory recently. He conferred with Manager Ben Fish of the local M-G-M branch office, and H. C. Weaver, president of the Weaver studios in Tacoma.

Charles W. Harden, manager of the United Artists branch office, returned from Portland last week and announced that within all probability an Oregon exchange will be opened within the near future by his company. Present plans indicate that Harold Harden, C. W.'s son, who is now booking in this city, will assume the Portland management. A location at Twelfth and Hoty streets, adjacent to the Warner Brothers building, is under consideration, according to Mr. Harden's reports.

The entire film industry of the Northwest offered its condolences last week to Ray Graham, associated with F. W. Graham in the theatre business at Shelton, Wash., when it was learned that Mrs. Graham had died in childbirth last Saturday night.

The Legislative Ball, held in Olympia, the State Capital, last week, was attended by a number of film and theatre representatives, among them being Mr. and Mrs. James Hone, executive secretary of the M.P.T.O.W.; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Bruen of the Northwest Theatrical Enterprises; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Bradt of the Roycroft Theatre; and Mr. and Mrs. Clyde A. Walker, of the Northwest Motion Picture Record.

Philadelphia

A GENERAL shift has been made in Stanley managers along Market Street. Lew Williams, who has been managing the Family, has been transferred to the mechanical department and has been succeeded by J. McSweeney, who was formerly manager of the Savoy. Herb Simons, for some time assistant manager at the Arcade, has succeeded Mr. McSweeney at the Savoy. Roy Myers, who has been managing the Grand Theatre, Chester, for the Stanley Company, has recently tendered his resignation.

Charlie Segal has completed arrangements for the opening of his new theatre at Ogontz and Chelton avenues on February 5. Al Myers, a well-known newspaper man who has been connected with the Public Ledger and the Daily News, will act as house manager.

Jules Catsiff, purchasing agent for the Stanley Company of America, who has been suffering from a nervous breakdown, has returned from a three weeks' vacation spent in Bermuda, much improved in health.

Lester Adler, special representative for Harold Lloyd Productions, spent a few days in Philadelphia recently with Percy A. Bloch, Philadelphia branch manager for Famous Players.

Public Relations New F&R Dept.

Blanche MacDonald, Former Twin City Newspaperwoman and Publicity Expert, Placed in Charge of Organization Work

FINKELSTEIN & RUBEN, an organization controlling more than a hundred picture theatres in the northwest, recently announced the organization of a department of public relations. The purpose of this department will be the establishment of salutary contacts between the theatres and the public and the promotion of various enterprises looking towards the creation of good will.

Miss Blanche MacDonald, former Twin City newspaperwoman and publicity expert, has been placed in charge of the department.

Although Miss MacDonald has been at her new post only a short time, she has already set machinery in motion which will, before long, bring definite and concrete results. Thoroughly competent and inspired by a tremendous enthusiasm over the work in hand, Miss MacDonald has already launched a vigorous campaign of cooperation and education in the northwest.

"The department's primary aim is the building up of good-will and the establishment of valuable contacts with various organizations in the northwest which have, or should have, a vital interest in the movies," Miss MacDonald explained last week to an interviewer. "We hope to be able to show the public how 'the wheels go round,' just what problems are encountered by the exhibitors, and to cooperate at every step with organizations which are concerning themselves with the movies. The staging of benefits for organizations seeking to raise funds will be one part of the work, of course, but there are many other ways by which we plan to create a closer bond of friendship and good-will between the theatre and the public."

Co-operates With Women's Clubs

Miss MacDonald is shrewdly concentrating on the women's organizations and on the problem of entertainment for the children in launching her program. One of her first steps will be the promotion of Saturday morning programs for the youngsters which will feature films carefully chosen with an eye to wholesome juvenile entertainment. Efforts will be made to interest various women's organizations in this work, and to make them feel that the problem of selecting worthwhile entertainment for the children is a mutual one. It is planned to stage these Saturday morning programs at the neighborhood theatres as well as at the downtown houses.

Blanche MacDonald

As a beginning, Miss MacDonald is already arranging a Lincoln's Day program for Saturday morning, February 12, at the Garrick Theatre in Minneapolis. Letters giving details of this performance will be sent to the Parents-Teachers associations, Boy Scout officials, the Women's Cooperative Alliance and other women's organizations, and cooperation of a number of clubs has already been assured. The Daughters of the Revolution is especially interested in this work. Nominal admission charges will be made, although they will hardly cover the expense to which F. & R. will go to stage these special children's performances.

"I feel that there is a wide field for patriotic programs of this sort," says Miss MacDonald. "Holidays sometimes mean little more to the children than a day of freedom from school. The programs which we will arrange should help to drive home the significance of the day."

Arrangements are also being made for a special Washington's Birthday program for children.

Miss MacDonald has already called on the chairmen of a number of moving picture committees affiliated with women's clubs and welfare organizations of the Twin Cities. She is explaining to them that F. & R. is constantly working in the interests of better pictures, and the firm is vitally interested in any work which will help solve the problem of providing appropriate entertainment for the children. These chairmen have already expressed heartfelt approval of the F. & R. campaign, and have promised their utmost cooperation in the work. Miss MacDonald also plans to address women's meetings and club gatherings in order to cover the field as thoroughly as possible.

Theatre "Educational Tours"

As an example of what may be done along this line, Miss MacDonald has already arranged a tour of the State Theatre, Minneapolis, for members of the moving picture committee of the Fifth District Federate Women's clubs. These members will be shown through the State Theatre on the morning of January 27, will be taken "back stage," and the mechanics of house management and exhibition will be thoroughly explained to them. Other tours of this sort will be arranged, and in this way the public will gradually grow to understand the complexities which confront an organization of the size of Finkelstein & Ruben.

Miss MacDonald will also make it a point to encourage house managers to form close contacts with the communities served by their theatres. This can be done by cooperating with commercial clubs, churches, and various improvement societies. If the managers will take the trouble to widen their circle of acquaintances and seek out various community leaders, she feels that much will have been accomplished towards the creation of good-will.

"We want Minneapolis, St. Paul and the entire northwest to feel that the newly established department of public relations is an 'open door' to our firm," Miss MacDonald explained. "We invite suggestions and complaints, and will endeavor in every way to create a mutuality of interests between public and exhibitor. Here is a great field which has remained virtually untouched, and the possibilities in it are tremendous."

Miss MacDonald was considered one of the ablest newspaper women in the northwest when she was a feature writer on the "Minneapolis Tribune" more than a decade ago. Recently she has been publicity secretary of the Hennepin County Tuberculosis Association, and has conducted a number of successful publicity campaigns for that organization. During the war she had charge of publicity for the New York Federal Food Board. After that she was with the advertising department of Namm's department store in Brooklyn, and from there went to the Frank Presbrey advertising agency in New York City.

Long Run Predicted for "Kid Brother" at Broadway House

HAROLD LLOYD'S "The Kid Brother," his newest comedy for Paramount, opened its Broadway engagement at the Rialto Theatre, Publix's long-run house in New York, last Saturday. It follows "Sorrows of Satan," which played a three weeks' engagement at the Rialto.

The Lloyd picture drew capacity crowds on its opening day, and the Rialto has since continued to attract large houses for all performances of "The Kid Brother." It is accompanied by "Georges Bizet," a one-reel "Famous Music Master" film, and Rialto Cinemevents, on the program of the Rialto.

"Chinese Jade" with Dix Feature at Paramount

"Chinese Jade," a John Murray Anderson presentation, with an unusually attractive setting from the Far East, is being offered in conjunction with "Paradise for Two," starring Richard Dix, at the Paramount Theatre, New York, this week.

The presentation features dancers, singers and tumblers, all of whom are made up to appear as if carved in jade. The entire presentation is set to Chinese music. The role of the jade goddess, the central figure, is performed by Ada Forman. Other attractions are the Chantal Sisters, a piano duo; Jesse Crawford's organ solo; Paramount News, and "We Must Be Thrilled," a Castle film.

Nora Bayes Starts Tour of Loew Circuit

Nora Bayes, famous vaudeville headliner, began her tour of the Loew circuit last week at the State Theatre, St. Louis, where her thousands of admirers in that town registered keen enjoyment of her vocal offerings. She made her biggest hit with her rendition of "That's a Good Girl."

Don Albert and his orchestra played "The Crystal Gazer" as an overture. The screen attractions were "The Magician" and "Anything Once."

Sees Growth of "Little Theatre" as Outstanding Development of 1927

THAT the growth of the little theatre movement for "presentation of pictures of high artistic merit but limited appeal" will be the outstanding development of the next twelve months, is the prediction made by Eric T. Clarke, general manager of the Eastman Theatre, Rochester, in the column, "Movie Musings," of which he is acting as "guest conductor" for a period of a few weeks, published in the Rochester "Democrat and Chronicle," in the issue of January 16.

1. The outstanding development of the next twelve months will be the growth of the Little Theatre movement for presentation of pictures of high artistic merit but limited appeal.

2. The influence of German art in films will be reflected in marked advancement of camera work, lighting and effects.

3. The original scenario will compete more effectively with the present vogue for adaptations from stage, novel and magazine.

4. Imported films, particularly the massive, spectacular subjects, will find a wider acceptance among American audiences.

5. The special road-show productions, such as "Ben-Hur," "The Big Parade" and "Beau Geste" will continue to exercise a tremendous appeal, and in the field of program pictures, smart comedies with ultra-modern settings and costumes will come strongly to the fore.

6. Presentation will show development along its present lines, with deliberate departure from the vaudeville style of offering and a steady trend towards the creation of acts devised and produced for picture theatres only.

"Musical Pirates" Rodemich Act at Grand Central

Gene Rodemich and "His Merry Maniacs" presented "Musical Pirates" at the Grand Central Theatre, St. Louis, Mo., the week ended on January 21st.

Gene Austen was featured on the program and was given a big hand at each appearance.

The theme adopted by Gene enabled him to demonstrate how jazz melodies are stolen from the classics, while other operatic offerings were syncopated to display their possibilities for the more popular style of music. Gene and his maniacs were togged out as buccaneers.

The screen attraction was "The Blonde Saint."

Sixth Anniversary Program Featured at Stanley

The Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, is now observing its sixth anniversary with a special program, including the feature, "Blonde or Brunette," and Van and Schenk, the well-known singing team, providing a most attractive offering.

The week of February 7th the Stanley has engaged Fokine and Fokine and their ballet to augment the Metro-Goldwyn production, "Faust." This program will be one of the most pretentious that the Stanley has put on since its opening.

Prologue Staged for "Night of Love" at Strand

An elaborately staged prologue, featuring choral and solo singing and dances, is being offered this week in place of the Strand Frolic at the Strand Theatre, New York, which has "The Night of Love" as the screen attraction.

The prologue reproduces one of the castle scenes in the photoplay, and shows a huge banquet table arranged at the foot of a stone staircase leading to the throne of a Spanish noble, who appears in costume similar to that of the villain in "The Night of Love." The Mark Strand Ballet Corps offers a gypsy dance, interpolated between the choral numbers and solos by a tenor and soprano. The settings and costumes, the sumptuous effects of which are heightened by unusually attractive lighting, were designed by Henry Dreyfuss.

Gala Premiere for Beatrice Lillie Film in Toronto

The Canadian premiere of "Exit Smiling," in which the star is Beatrice Lillie, in private life Lady Peel and a former Toronto girl, took place at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, starting January 22nd, and assumed the proportions of a gala presentation, under the direction of John Arthur, manager of the Uptown. Beatrice Lillie is appearing at the Fulton Theatre in New York, but arrangements were made for her to make a flying trip to Toronto to see her first picture in her native city.

"Ruy Blas" Capitol Overture

The Capitol Grand Orchestra of the Capitol Theatre, New York, this week added Mendelssohn's "Ruy Blas" to its repertoire. The work was substituted for the Tschaikowsky concerto offered the past two weeks in connection with "Flesh and the Devil," which is playing a third week.

Postpone "Don Juan" Engagement

The first-run engagement of "Don Juan" in Cleveland, scheduled for the Stillman Theatre the week of January 23rd, has been postponed. "The Winning of Barbara Worth" has been substituted as the attraction for the current week.

"Beau Geste" Ends Cleveland Run

"Beau Geste" is playing its third and last week at the Ohio Theatre, starting its concluding week January 23rd.

Loew's Grand Dance Contest Popular

Large Entry List for "Black Bottom" at Atlanta Theatre

The "Black Bottom" dance contest launched by Manager Thomas H. James, of Loew's Grand in Atlanta, in conjunction with the Atlanta Georgian, registered an immediate hit with a large portion of the Atlanta populace. The entry lists, which were opened last Monday, had attracted no less than 250 entrants by Wednesday. On that day the entrants appeared at the theatre for lessons in the dance, which were given by Lee Arnold, dancer, who appeared in connection with Al Lentz, and his Tuneful Comedians, one of the featured acts on the stage bill at the Grand.

Widespread publicity through the tie-up with the Georgian has helped the stunt. This week the contestants appear in an elimination program. The audience at each of three daily performances is picking the winner of that particular performance, who will receive $5 in gold and be entitled to take part in the final contest, which takes place at the 7 o'clock show Saturday evening. The winner of the final will be presented with a silver loving cup.

Theatre Mezzanine Becomes Toronto Social Center

Jack Arthur, director of presentations at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, Ontario, parent theatre for Famous Players in Canada, pointed out that, despite the super-shows provided by the Uptown, a number of women do their entertaining on the mezzanine floor of the house, which is gorgeously fitted with handsome furniture, rugs, paintings, statuary and other costly furnishings. They gather in parties in the mezzanine where they chat and sew during an afternoon, meantime listening to the symphony orchestra and the grand organ. They seldom enter the main body of the house, these women, it is said.

"Pa" Weaver Subs for Son at Kansas City Theatre

When Cicero Weaver, youngest member of the Weaver Brothers "Arkansas Traveler" act at the Orpheum Theatre, Kansas City, became ill last week it remained for "Pa" Weaver, 72 years old, to take his place. And he did just that, despite his comparative unfamiliarity with the stage as an actor, making a genuine hero out of himself in the eyes of the press and audiences for three days.

Elinor Glyn Appearance is Attraction at Granada

One of the largest crowds ever attracted to a theatrical event in San Francisco, assembled Saturday, January 15th, in front of the Granada Theatre, one of the Publix houses, when Elinor Glyn appeared in person on the stage in connection with the premiere of her latest story for the screen, "It," in which Clara Bow is starred.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

WALTER DEWITT, formerly assistant manager to Russell Rache at Loew's Victory Theatre in Evansville, Ind., has succeeded the latter as manager of that house. DeWitt's appointment to the managership of the Victory followed the recent resignation of Rache, who left the Loew organization to join West Coast Theatres, Inc.

EDWARD J. MELNIKER has been transferred from the Roger Sherman Theatre, operated by the Loew interests in New Haven, Conn., to become manager of Loew's Regent in Harrisburg, Pa. He succeeds Russell A. Bovim, who has been promoted to the managing directorship of a new Loew theatre in Canton, Ohio.

CARL HUTCHINS has been appointed manager of the Regent Theatre in Arlington. He was formerly with the Hoffman houses in Somerville, Mass. Hutchins, in addition to being a good manager, is a good singer and can fill in a program to advantage when the occasion arises.

Publix Managers Meeting Held in Kansas City

Missouri, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska were to be represented at a two-day conference of Publix managers at the Kansas City Athletic Club building this week. Sam Katz and S. R. Kent, Publix executives, were expected to outline future plans and policies of the organization. A large part of the meeting was to be devoted to the asking and answering of questions pertaining to technical problems.

Theatres Upstate Hit by Heavy Snowstorm

One of the worst snowstorms in several years swept over the Albany territory last week and cost the exhibitors thousands of dollars. Over two feet of snow fell during the afternoon and evening, and no theatre could boast of more than a handful in the way of an audience. At one theatre there were exactly sixteen persons.

Temple to Issue House Organ

The management of the Temple Theatre, Butte, Ont., has announced that "Temple Theatre Town Topics" will go to press and be released about the middle of this month. It is to be a neat little theatre booklet devoted to theatre news, theatre thrills and information for the pleasure and convenience of the Temple fans.

Plays Return Run at Cleveland

"The Big Parade" playing its second Cleveland engagement at $1.50 top, is doing capacity business at the Metropolitan, according to word emanating from the Loew offices. It's a continued engagement, of course, and will continue as long as the attendance continues.

Whiteman Sets New Allen Record

Paul Whiteman chalked up a new house record for the Allen Theatre when he played there last week. Extra performances were given on the opening Sunday and on the closing Saturday as well.

Albany First Runs May Add Acts

Other Houses May Follow Strand in Presentations Policy

At the Mark Strand in Albany, N.Y., during the past week, a presentation act entitled "Voices of America" was well received by capacity audiences. The act includes about twenty-five persons, and is presented as an ensemble of trained voices.

Since the Mark Strand became one of the Stanley chain of houses, these presentation acts have become a permanent feature at the house, and are proving big patronage attractions.

Some of the other first-run houses in Albany, having witnessed the success of these presentation acts, are now talking of remodeling their interiors to the extent that they can have a stage on which these acts can be given.

State, Schenectady, Will Offer Stage Numbers

The State Theatre in Schenectady, N.Y., owned and operated by Farash Theatres, Inc., is preparing to stage presentation acts along with the regular picture program. James Roach, general manager of the company, announced last week that an order had been placed for new drops, electrical effects and other fixtures, which will be used in connection with the presentation acts. It is understood that the changed policy of the house is due to an effort being made to meet the competition afforded by Proctor's new theatre, about two blocks distant.

Short Comedy Bills Score Hit at Butte Theatres

In the observance of "National Laugh Month" the Montana theatres are working with short subjects and with comedy to the exclusion of the long reels of more serious nature.

That the public enjoys a change of this kind is evidenced by the big crowds that fill the playhouses at each showing. The Rialto Theatre in Butte under the management of W. J. Sullivan last week offered an "All-Comedy Circus" that went over big. Nearly a dozen all-comedy features were listed on the bill.

Stock Presentations Under New Policy at Dominion

There has been a change of policy at the Dominion Theatre, Winnipeg, one of the older downtown houses of the Manitoba capital. Manager E. E. McLaskey has established a high type of tabloid musical comedy and dramatic stock productions, and these are presented in conjunction with complete moving picture programs of feature and short subjects.

Vaudeville Last Half at Avon

A new policy has been adopted by the Avon in Watertown, N.Y. During the first four days of each week pictures will prevail, and for the remainder of the week there will be vaudeville.

2250-Seat Astoria Nears Completion; will Show Films from All Countries

THE Astoria, London's newest film theatre, dance salon, and cafe, is nearing completion and will shortly have a grand opening. The theatre will show films from all countries, its inaugural program including as the chief item "The Triumph of the Rat," starring Ivor Novello. "Don Juan," with John Barrymore, and "The Better 'Ole," featuring Syd Chaplin, have been secured, among others, for early release.

Historical Site

The palatial Astoria building is the creation of the Berkely Syndicate. It stands on the site of what was for many years Crosse and Blackwell's grocery factory in Charing Cross Road, at the Oxford Street end, and is thus right in the heart of London theatreland. Farther back in London history this spot was occupied by the White House.

Designed on Roman lines, the Astoria is a noble example of the Pompeiian style at its best period. The frontage of the new building, which has taken a year to construct, has five floors, and the entrance to the circle and stalls is flanked by a convenient range of shops.

Another entrance to the dance salon is in the Renaissance style. The approach to the cinema theatre is through a spacious circular hall, and in the 25-foot wide vestibule are vari-colored marble pillars. Particular attention has been given to the lay-out of the pay boxes, so that there may be no delay in booking seats, and marble staircases give ample access to all parts of the theatre.

Clear Vision

The arrangement, adornment and lighting of the hall provide a restful feeling to the eye, and the absence of pillars and other obstacles gives an uninterrupted view of the screen from each of the 2,250 seats. The proscenium opening is 44 feet wide, and, in view of the exigencies of modern film presentation, the most elaborate and ambitious settings can be accommodated on the stage. The newest system of concealed ever-changing colored lighting is employed, and the most approved forms of heating and ventilation have been installed.

A constant stream of fresh air is pumped into the building, and this supply is warmed or cooled according to the time of the year. Comfort is the keynote throughout, and every seat in the house is in the new tub style, which gives ample knee and arm room. The stalls floor has a width of 90 feet, and there are frequent gangways, making it easy to reach any seat.

Ballroom Underneath

The ballroom is below the theatre and is approached by two staircases of carved oak. It is a superb example of decoration in the Italian Renaissance style, and its rich colorings are reflected in the mirrored walls. The Astorians, a very accomplished orchestra, will supply the music. Surrounding the floor of sprung oak is a spacious lounge promenade, and overlooking the dance salon is a restaurant under the charge of a famous chef.

Two Phila. Theatre Co.'s Granted Charters

TWO theatre corporations have just been granted Pennsylvania charters at the Capitol in Harrisburg. One is the South Philadelphia Theatres Corporation, of Philadelphia, and the other is the J. H. Kenny Amusement Company, of Pittsburgh.

The Philadelphia concern is incorporated to buy, sell, maintain and operate theatres, the capital being $5,000 and par value $50. The incorporators are Harry Green, 25 shares, treasurer, of 1120 Wyoming Avenue, Philadelphia; Abraham E. Altman, 631 West Sedgwick Street, Philadelphia, 25 shares, and Robert Fiau, 2518 Diamond Street. Philadelphia, one share.

Morris Shaman, 3812 Forbes Street, Pittsburgh, is the treasurer of the Kenny Amusement Company, of Pittsburgh, organized to maintain and operate places of amusement. Other incorporators are B. Kopp and A. H. Holzapel, Pittsburgh, one share each; Joseph H. Kenny, 349 shares.

Silversheet does not discriminate against the side seats or the balcony seats. It shows the picture uniformly bright to all sections of the house, making all seats equally desirable. This is the result of its surface being specially constructed for your individual theatre by J. Otto Knobel, the world's master screen builder. Still, Silversheet costs no more than ordinary screens.

Projection a Feature of New Proctor House

Importance of Good Equipment Stressed in New 3,000-Seat Schenectady Theatre

THE most modern equipment for the projection and showing of motion pictures has been installed in the new Proctor Theatre in Schenectady, N. Y., which has a seating capacity of 3,000 persons, and which was recently opened, following an expenditure of over one million dollars, and a year's work in construction. The theatre ranks as the largest house in the Albany-Schenectady-Troy district, and while devoted primarily to vaudeville entertainment, the motion picture end is to be emphasized to a marked degree at all times.

Model Projection Booth

The projection room at the Proctor Theatre is a model of its kind. The room dimensions are 28 by 9, with a rewind room adjoining, measuring 6 by 9 feet, while the rheostat room has a measurement of 5 by 6 feet. While iron stairways lead to the projection room, the house management is so proud of the equipment that the room is frequently opened to visitors.

The equipment includes three Simplex projectors, double bearing movement, Hall and Connolly high intensity lights, Type C. There are two Mestrum spotlights, the only two in Schenectady, with color effects in front. There is also one Brenkert-Detroit double deck dissolver, the type being known as the Brenkert combined effect, slide and flood light projector, model F-3. The equipment for the showing of pictures also includes two 250-ampere Westinghouse generators. The projection room is in charge of Frank J. Heigel and George Costello, members of Local 314.

The rewind room is probably the best in Schenectady. The equipment includes the Fulco reel safety apparatus, as well as a Griswold film splicer. There are nine reel cans.

The rheostats are of the multiple coil type, manufactured by Hoffman and Sons of 522 First Avenue, New York City. The throw from projection room to screen is about 135 feet at a 13-degree angle. There are two screens, one painted on the regular drop and another for the presentation of feature pictures, and the work of Ernest Miettimen, of New York City.

Arcade Deceives

From the front, the entrance to the theatre gives no idea of the magnificence and luxury, and likewise, of the size of the house, owing to the fact that there is an arcade running between two streets, and from this arcade the real entrance leads to the theatre. The arcade is in Italian marble, and a dozen or more small shops attract the eye of the theatregoer.

The house was designed by Thomas W. Lamb, of New York City. The interior is of the one-balcony type, the orchestra and balcony having a combined seating capacity of approximately 3,000 persons.

The idea of luxury and comfort is instantly conveyed as one enters the theatre through the use of unusually heavy carpets and subdued lighting effects. The color scheme is in green and gold with wall coverings in black and gold damask, the hangings being of cerise velvet.

Particular attention has been paid to the rest rooms for men and women, these far outranking in their magnificence anything of their kind between New York and Buffalo. The ladies' room is particularly beautiful in its contrasts of white and gold and the walls of damask. The men's room is in dark walnut with furnishings of a corresponding color.

The theatre is heated by an oil-burning system, and with particular attention paid to a most modern ventilating system. In its initial announcement the house management stated that first-run pictures would be shown at the same time they are being presented on Broadway in New York City.

S. M. P. E.'s Spring Meeting at Norfolk, Va.

A COMMUNICATION from L. C. Porter, secretary of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, states that at a meeting of the Society's Board of Governors, held last Friday, Jan. 14, it was decided to hold the regular spring convention at the Hotel Monticello, Norfolk, Va., on April 25, 26, 27 and 28.

Many new and interesting subjects will be brought up for discussion and an unusually large attendance is looked for.

Saxe Amusement Co. Plan New Beloit Theatre

The Saxe Amusement Enterprises are planning a new theatre in Beloit, Wis. Negotiations have been closed for property along Grand Avenue, which includes the old First Baptist Church property. It is estimated the theatre will cost about $350,000, and will have a capacity of 2,000. Construction is to begin this summer. The building plans indicate several stores on the first floor of the theatre building, and offices on the second floor.

Hudson Theatre Company Enlarging Circuit

H. H. Frieder, of the firm of Frieder and Grossman, of Hudson, N.Y., while in Albany, N.Y., last week booking pictures, announced that the company would open a new theatre in Norwalk Conn., on or about March 1, and furthermore that they were now breaking ground in Brooklyn for a new motion picture theatre there. The company is operating two theatres in Hudson and does all of its booking out of the Albany exchanges.

Mark Strand Interests Seek Worcester Site

Negotiations are under way by the Mark Strand interests to obtain a location for another motion picture theatre in Worcester. They now operate the Strand Theatre there. It is understood that the Rice Building on Main Street is under consideration, and that the plan calls for a modern theatre and office building on the site.

Franklin Theatre Co. Expands Circuit

Announces Erection of 3,100 Seat House at Reading, Pa.

Announcement is made in Reading, Pa., that a $500,000 theatre, to seat 3,100 persons, will be erected on the present site of the Arcadia Theatre, in that city, by the Franklin Theatre Company, which is controlled by Ben Amsterdam and Louis Korson, who operate a chain of about ten theatres there. Though building operations will begin at once, the Arcadia, which is the oldest Reading picture theatre now in existence, will continue in operation until about June 1, when it will be closed to permit the finishing touches to be made to the new building.

The new structure will cover a plot 88 by 270 feet, and the cost of construction will be $400,000. The value of the site is placed at $100,000. C. H. Schlaegel, of Reading, is the contractor, and the architect is W. H. Lee, of Philadelphia.

The building will contain three stores in addition to the theatre. The main floor of the auditorium will have 2,300 seats, and there will be 800 seats in a balcony. There will be a large pipe organ, and arrangements for taking care of an orchestra of forty pieces. There will be a stage of a depth of 35 feet, sufficiently large to permit the presentation of vaudeville and legitimate attractions.

Four New England Theatre Firms Incorporate

South Norwalk Amusement Co., at South Norwalk, Conn., has been incorporated with $50,000 capital. Max Ginsberg, 17 Cross Street, Beacon, N.Y., is head of the corporation.

Plaza Theatre, Inc., has organized at Fall River, Mass., with capital of $10,000 preferred and common of no par value. Incorporators are Philip L. Markell, Simon W. Markell and Betty G. Selya.

Norport Theatre Corp. has been organized at Bridgeport, Conn., with capital of $5,000. T. E. Halle, 69 Foxall Street, Brooklyn, heads the company.

Independent Theatre Supply Co. has been incorporated at Boston with 300 shares of no par value. Incorporators are Edwin E. Hosmer and Grace B. Hosmer, of Boston, and Daniel Dalziel, of Quincy, Mass.

Sunday Opening for New Theatre at Manly

The Iowa Theatres Co., operating theatres in Cedar Falls, Manly, Rockford, and Mason City, Iowa, held a Sunday opening at the Legion Theatre at Manly, Iowa, Sunday.

Manly has been closed on Sundays for some time. In spite of bad weather the opening was a huge success.

The management of the theatre will be supervised from Cedar Falls, under M. R. Blair, who has installed L. Trimbell as manager.

New Birmingham Theatre Opens

Marvin Wise Enterprises Open Eighth House of Circuit

Birmingham's newest amusement temple, the Empire Theatre, formally opened its doors to the public January 19th. Invitations were out to many city officials and local representatives of the film industry.

The Empire Theatre is under the direction of Frank Merritt, prime factor in the Marvin Wise Enterprises, owners and operators of the house. Jack Cunningham, former manager of the Trianon here, has been appointed manager. A permanent 12-piece orchestra is conducted by E. Villano. H. J. Grieb is the organist.

The Empire seats 1,000, and is located on Third Avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. It is the eighth house in the Marvin Wise circuit of theatre holdings in and around Birmingham, and is easily one of the most beautiful of the de luxe theatres in the Alabama metropolis. The other houses operated by the Marvin Wise interests are the Capitol, Royal, Odeon, West End, Woodlawn, College and Cameo.

DiPesa Plans Theatre and Store at Revere, Mass.

Contractors are figuring on the plans for the theatre to be built at Prospect Avenue and Broadway, Revere, Mass., for John A. DiPesa. There will be ten stores in the front of the building. William W. Drummey, of Boston, is the architect.

Inquiries and Comments

Rambling Around

LAST Friday night (January 14th) the writer, happening to be in that vicinity, attended the opening of the Broadvue Theatre, Twenty-fifth and Broadview streets, Cleveland, Ohio.

The Broadvue is a 2100-seat house, and attendance that evening was by invitation only, for the purpose of showing off the place to local exhibitors and others interested in such matters.

Judging from the number of non-paying guests in the house when the “lights out” signal came to the projection room at 8 o'clock, the management must have handed out about 3,000 invitations, none of which, apparently, were turned down, since an inspection of the house, made by poking one's head through one of the spacious portholes and then “rubbering” around, revealed that not even standing room remained.

Everyone Felt Happy

An over-filled house, however, seldom makes a theatre owner peeved, even if there is no money in it for him, so that everyone was feeling quite chipper and on their toes, the non-paying guests expecting a good show and the “boys in the back room” expecting, as they usually do on first nights, to see the roof fall in on their heads.

However, no such dire things happened and, in fact, everything progressed quite smoothly to the general satisfaction of everyone but the projectionists, who seemed a trifle disappointed that neither of the Motiographs had jammed, nor that the Brenkert effect contraption had suffered broken arches and fallen down in its tracks.

The projectionists, by the way, consisted of “Bill” Masek, of the local office of the National Theatre Supply Co., who, having sold the unsuspecting theatre owner the equipment, felt it incumbent upon himself to see to it that at least the first night's show to the non-profit paying guests went over in good style, and the here-after-to-be regular man, whose name we indistinctly recall to be Murphy. If it isn't Murphy, it ought to be, as he possesses all the necessary characteristics to sport such a time-honored name.

There was one other self-elected and self-appointed apprentice projectionist present, to wit, yours truly, who, in the main, managed to keep himself out of the way most of the time, but who could not resist the temptation, when the others were not looking, to sneak over and monkey around with everything in particular, much to the annoyance of Friend Murphy, whose eagle eye, inspired by nervousness, once caught him at it.

A Little “Snooping”

However, we felt, and we believe rightly so, that since there was no money in the house that night, a little harmless snooping around would do no particular harm and might even lead to the august editor's learning something.

We feel justly proud of the fact that in spite of all the nickel plated knobs that were turned, handles that were pulled and buttons that were stealthily pushed, the screen did not fall down nor did the projectors even once. We believe that this is vindication enough of our not-too-loudly-made claims of being a real sea-going projectionist of the salt-water type.

The equipment in this pretty theatre, by the way, consists of two Motiograph De Luxe projectors equipped with Peerless reflector arcs, a Brenkert effect projector and a Brenkert 75-ampere spotlamp.

A main ceiling chandelier is used to provide general illumination in the house, and the three-section dimmer bank controlling this lighting unit is also located in the projection room where it comes under the personal supervision of Friend Murphy.

A generator compartment and toilet located at one end of the projection room complete the projectatorium, all of which will, by inheritance, come under the strict supervision and fishy eye of Projectatoriumist Murphy.

Projectatorium Defined

For the benefit of those of you who do not yet know what a projectatorium is, we will say that it is our own pet term, coined on the spur of the moment, to designate all those coops, compartments, cages and boxes, which, taken together, go to make up a complete projection department in a theatre.

The key to the use of the word lies in the following acid test: If you have but one room in which all of your projection equipment is assembled, then you have a projection room only and are irretrievably beyond the pale, but if you add another room, be it ever so small, to contain, say, a few reels of film or mayhap a few resistances, supplemented possibly by a toilet, then you belong to the grand order of projectatoriumists, since your “suite” of rooms then automatically receives the appellation of projectatorium to distinguish it from its baser and earlier parent, the lowly projection room.

The terms projectatorium and projectatoriumist have not, as yet, been adopted or accepted by anybody in particular, but we shall bring them up at the next meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers for official recognition by that society, which ought to go a long way toward making all the dyed-in-the-wool operators in this country turn them down cold. Nor would we blame them.

Level Projection

To return to the Broadvue Theatre—one thing we noticed which taught us something in the way of projection room design. The projection in this theatre is on a level with the screen, which results, quite naturally, in level projection. Now we have always been an exponent of this level projection idea, since it results in no distortion of the picture, and what is more important, the intensity of screen illumination is a maximum for that condition, being less as the angle of projection is increased. In fact, the intensity of screen illumination falls off as the cosine of the projection angle, although this may be news to some of you.

In other words, if the projection angle were, say, an extreme of 30 degrees, the screen intensity would be only 87 percent of what it would be were there no angle, as in the case of level projection.

For picture projection, therefore, level or normal, projection is the thing most desired, since it has a number of advantages, but for spotlight work, as noticed in the Broadvue house, it represents the worst possible condition, because it is impossible to isolate a performer with a “spot,” since the beam is projected broadside onto him, and the light which misses him passes to the rear of the stage and either lights up persons behind the “spotted” performer or else casts a bad shadow on the drop.

Furthermore, the performers complain of being unable to open their eyes, since the powerful beam is on a level with their heads and they can offer themselves no protection from its glare.

It is not hard to understand, therefore, why level projection is taboo for spotlight work, and in the light of this a fairly sharp angle (30 degrees or so) gives much better results, since then the spot is thrown on the floor of the stage, and serves as a sharply defined boundary within which the performer is kept, without at the same time illuminating objects or persons that have no business to be illuminated.

Performers can then face their audiences with their eyes open since the light comes from a more natural direction, and the eyebrows serve to protect the eyes from the terrific glare of the brilliant lens.

There is a growing tendency to correct this evil in the large houses by placing the spot booths above the projection room, in which position the angle of projection is quite sharp and the results are correspondingly satisfactory.

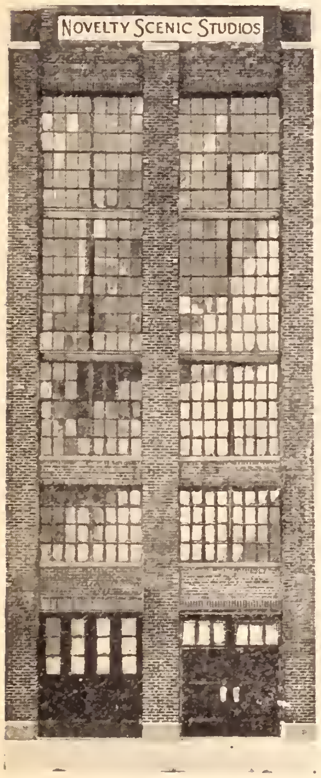
Consolidation of Departments Mean Greater Efficiency

The Novelty Scenic Studios have completed their new building at 340 West Forty-first Street, New York City, and have moved their various departments into this building.



This company entered the drapery and scenery business in a small way only seven years ago, and have made rapid strides since their inception. To-day they serve hundreds of theatres extending from coast to coast with draperies, scenery and picture settings as well as interior decorations and stage rigging, holding a preeminent position in this field.

Some of the theatres they have equipped lately include the new State Theatre in Hartford, Conn., a forty-two-hundred-seat house, Fox's Academy of Music on Fourteenth Street, the Commodore Theatre on Second Avenue, the Capitol Theatre, Bayside, L. I., and numerous others.

Poole, of Chiloquin, Ore., Building New House

Harry Poole, head of a company operating the Chiloquin Theatre, Chiloquin, Ore., has announced through his manager, Cyril Benson, that his firm will build a $75,000 up-to-date theatre on a site on Main Street. It will be of reinforced steel and concrete construction, and a large stage, which will permit the showing of vaudeville and shows, forbidden to Chiloquin patrons in the past on account of inadequate facilities.

Springfield Firm May Get A. S. Friend Contract

It is understood that the general contract for the new Massasoit Theatre, Springfield, Mass., will be awarded by the Arthur S. Friend interests this week, and that it will go to a Springfield concern. When completed, the theatre will represent a total investment of about $2,500,000, of which $1,250,000 is represented by the cost of the property and preparations of the site.

Road Shows Adopt Syncrovertors

Operators Report Most Favorably on Results Obtained

THAT the Liberty Syncrovertor has proven a popular adjunct to the equipment in use by the several road show units now on tour with Famous Players' "Beau Geste," and Fox Films' "What Price Glory," is evidenced by the reports sent in to the Liberty Electric Corporation by operators connected with these shows.

Eleven of the "Beau Geste" units are equipped with a specially constructed Syncrovertor encased in special crates with castors so that they may be rolled into the theatre and put in any place without removing the crate.

Operators with the "What Price Glory" road shows have reported that the combination of the Syncrovertor with reflecting arc lamps is giving excellent results and is being almost universally used by these units.

Increase Colonial, Augusta, Me., to 1,300 Seats

Work on the interior of the new Colonial Theatre at Augusta, Me., will start next week, the exterior having been practically completed. The new house will seat 1,300. The old theatre had but 990, but the walls of the new house have been extended over the Kennebec River to permit the increased capacity.

Plans New Theatre on Upper Broadway

As soon as the subway station at Dyckman Street and Broadway, New York City, is further advanced, Sigmund Wechsler, who recently purchased a plot near that intersection, plans the erection of a theatre and store property on a site which has a frontage of 64 feet on Broadway, and a depth of 157 feet.

New California Theatre Under Way

The Vision Realty Company of San Mateo and San Francisco, Cal., have recently announced the erection of a 1,200-seat motion picture theatre on a site on California Drive in the Broadway district, Burlingame, between Broadway and Carmelita Avenue. A stage large enough to include road attractions will be built.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Kid Brother"—Paramount, Rialto Theatre, New York City

World: "Terrifically funny. Will remain for a good long engagement because it is made of the stuff that satisfies. It is one long series of gags, new gags, novel gags, reminiscent gags, obvious gags, long-way-around gags—and almost in each and bound beyond doubt to succeed."

Morning Telegraph: "'The Kid Brother' is hilarious Harold in a comedy containing all the pent-up laughter in the universe. The laughs are there. They come in squads, companies, regiments and battalions."

Times: "You might go to see 'The Kid Brother' insisting that you would never laugh aloud, but it is questionable whether you would live in silence for longer than one or two sequences. Enough laughter was generated yesterday in the Rialto to make thousands forget the gloomy weather."

Herald - Tribune: "We doubt whether Mr. Lloyd ever made a funnier picture. The crowds at the Rialto and on the Rialto attested its popularity. It seemed as though all the kid brothers in New York were on hand. 'The Kid Brother' is filled with more things than are dreampt of in your philosophy."

Daily News: "Hilarious comedy it assuredly is and, since the purpose of a Lloyd picture is to make people laugh, we can't label his latest effort anything else than a howling success."

Mirror: "Harold Lloyd in 'The Kid Brother' is clean, merry and thoroughly entertaining. It takes its place with his best comedies. You'll like it plus."

Telegram: "Harold Lloyd has forged still another link in his long, strong chain of intelligent comedies. It is destined to remain at the Rialto for an extended run. This department for one is wholly in sympathy with the arrangement. Mr. Lloyd has never made a more diverting comedy."

Journal: "Harold Lloyd is a riot as 'The Kid Brother.' Lloyd continues getting up hilarious gags that he puts over in a thoroughly workmanlike manner, and the way the audience howled at his antics yesterday leaves no room for argument. 'The Kid Brother' is a laugh from start to finish."

Sun: "Should all audiences follow the example of last Saturday afternoon's, the Rialto may well be worried. While hundreds waited in the rain outside, the majority of the audience waited stolidly to see 'The Kid Brother' through again."

Screen Quality Counts

Prints on Eastman Positive from negatives on Eastman Panchromatic make the most of your projection equipment—give maximum photographic quality on the screen.

For only Eastman Positive carries through to the screen with fidelity all the tones of the negative, and Eastman "Pan" alone renders colors in their true black and white relationship.

That's fact—proved by Kodak Research Laboratory experts. And it's fact that counts at the box office—people appreciate screen quality.

DIX

Exhibitors praise him:

THE VANISHING AMERICAN: Richard Dix—78%. Very good picture which should draw very well in any town. Dix's acting is wonderful. Played August 6. Ten reels.—D. B. Dyer, Amuse theatre, Grover, Colo.—General patronage.

THE LUCKY DEVIL: Richard Dix—30%. Dix is well liked by the women, and most of the men. This is a very fine little program picture with comedy, action and thrills—what more do you want? The racing scenes are exceptionally good. Six and one-half reels.—J. E. Gillenwaters, Rialto theatre, Knoxville, Tenn.—General patronage.

LET'S GET MARRIED: Richard Dix—I went back and got this one and, as all others have reported, it is a dandy comedy drama, and Dix seems to draw them in. Seven reels.—H. J. Eagan, American theatre, Wautoma, Wis.—Small town patronage.

THE QUARTERBACK: Richard Dix—A knockout. Boys, book it and clean up. This is a Paramount year. Eight reels.—W. L. Daughdrill, Poplarville theatre, Poplarville, Miss.—General patronage.

-- from Exhibitors Herald

Fans rave over him:

Richard, the Riot

Jackson Heights, N. Y.

Three Cheers for Dix! ! ! !

We are wild about Richard Dix and think he is superb! ! ! He was simply great in "Womanhandled," "Let's Get Married" and "The Lucky Devil," but "The Vanishing American" was sublime! We like him better in more serious and "sheiky" parts. Some people compare him with , but we can't see any comparison at all. We love the very mannish way in which he acts. He is big, strong, funny, handsome, thrilling and a WONDERFUL actor.

A Model American Man! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! ! !

Carrier
AIR CONDITIONING AND DRYING EQUIPMENT

Available for the smaller theatres

The Carrier System of Air Conditioning

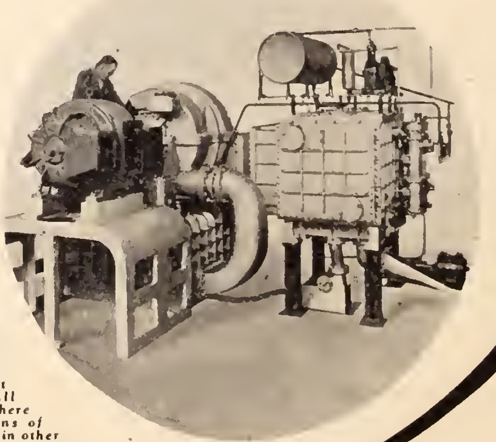
THE public favor of a theatre depends not only upon the quality of entertainment but upon the comfort of the patrons. Air conditioning is the most vital asset to be considered in the modern theatre. Especially is this true since people have learned to recognize immediately the health giving comfort of Carrier Conditioned Theatres.

Quite naturally the first to adopt Carrier equipment for air conditioning were the large elaborate theatres of the country. The same complete system has now been made available for the fine small theatres, for the neighborhood house and the village theatre of 900 or more seats. The same refreshing Carrier atmosphere which greets the patrons of the great new Paramount and the Roxy in New York, offers inviting comfort in the Capitol Theatre in Shamokin, Pa., and in the Clinton and Eastern Theatres operated by James Enterprises in Columbus, Ohio.

The same ideally comfortable conditions are automatically maintained every day in the year. In the Winter the air is warmed and humidified to the scientifically healthful condition. In the Summer the simple, safe compact Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration unit operates with the same system to cool and dehumidify the air which is diffused throughout the house without draughts.

The design and construction of each Carrier System is an engineering problem carefully worked to meet the needs of each theatre, large or small. The whole is backed by the guarantee of results which Carrier has attached to every contract during 25 years in the specialized field of air conditioning.

OPERATORS of Theatre Chains, Owners of Individual Theatres, and theatre Architects are invited to investigate the new adaptation of the Carrier Patented System to the Conditioning of Small Theatres. Write for the book, "Theatre Cooling and Conditioning". There is yet time for us to prepare your theatres for next summer. Ask for a visit from one of our engineers.



A Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration Unit complete with all auxiliary parts. There are no installations of pipe coils to be placed in other parts of the theatre. The refrigerating medium is a harmless liquid. "Dieline."

"RUBBER TIRES"

An ALAN HALE Production

RAY MURRAY WRITES:

RAY MURRAY, whom everybody knows, brightens the week and lightens its labors by writing me the following observations on pictures he has seen out there where they grow 'em.

Alan Hale has come home with the bacon in "Rubber Tires." This picture was made to order for little Bessie Love and Harrison Ford. It gives them both unusual opportunities for comedy and they evidently got plenty of fun out of it while making it, which makes it twice as funny on the screen. The titles are gems of wit and director Hale missed no amusing point or situation in telling this bright and interesting tale. The business of the runaway automobile is extremely funny and the incident with the old man and the water tank a great big wow!

The simplicity of the story and the experiences of the New York family driving a decrepit automobile across country to California, followed by a love-sick youth, furnish much material for laughable situations not found in the ordinary farce-comedy. Bessie Love is a delight all the way through. She pilots the family in an ancient car, bought at a junk yard, and which suddenly becomes worth $10,000, when the original manufacturers try to locate it. Harrison Ford follows the family in a motorless Ford. He is making a "coast to coast" trip, as he puts it, dependIng on hills and towing motorists to get him there.

Most of the scenes are exteriors, made in and around motor camps, and show intimately the life of the tin can tourists. I got a full hour's enjoyment out of "Rubber Tires."

The THIRD DEGREE

Now playing and cleaning up—and proving that a Dolores Costello feature is a season hit! From the stage play by Chas. Klein. Directed by Michael Curtiz

A MILLION BID

Beauty on the auction block—a dramatic romance with a lavish society setting. By George Cameron. Directed by Alan Crosland.

IRISH HEARTS

The girl of your dreams in an emotional and thrilling romance of modern Ireland. By Walter Morosco. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

The HEART of MARYLAND

From David Belasco's great stage play. A stirring story of the old South and a girl torn between two loves. Directed by Lloyd Bacon.

The COLLEGE WIDOW

A story of college life by George Ade, America's favorite humorist. Youth and beauty in an ideal setting. Directed by Roy Del Ruth.

FIVE GREAT FEATURES starring the girl that the whole country loves, five glorious pictures that millions of picture-goers are waiting to see. Making the 26 Warner Winners the outstanding group of box-office attractions of the current season.

Remember "The Sea Beast"! One big picture that at once brought the realization of Dolores Costello's beauty, charm —and box-office power. Thousands of lines of newspaper space, hundreds of pages of magazine articles since then have but fed the flames of popular acclaim.

Now you get five such features! Now exhibitors who play Dolores Costello draw the millions of people, the millions of dollars that go with a Costello picture.

How to get the best results from Incandescent Lamp Projection Equipment

Your theatre or studio may be ideally suited to incandescent lamp projection—your projection unit may be the last word in efficiency, but unless you use lamps that effectively meet the hardest tests of service you will not get the steady, economical and thoroughly satisfactory results that are possible with this new method of projection.

The great majority of projectionists have learned that Edison MAZDA Lamps assure the best possible results from any type of incandescent lamp projection equipment.

And no wonder! They were developed by the General Electric Company through years of research and experimentation and represent the very limits of engineering ability in this particular field.

Edison MAZDA Lamps are available at supply dealers in all sections of the country. If your own supply dealer cannot supply you, write direct to the Edison Lamp Works of General Electric Company, Harrison, N. J., and you will be notified promptly of another convenient source of supply.

--Concentration

The coed who told her professor she was going to "concentrate—on a lot of things" never got very far with any of them.

I believe in concentration—on one thing—for real service and real success. That is why Educational, like no other big national distributing organization, has dealt exclusively in Short Features—for seven years.

This specialization quickly enabled Educational to assume unquestioned leadership of the Short Feature field, a leadership that has been consistently maintained, and which we shall continue to maintain. Thirteen thousand exhibitors testify to this leadership by showing Educational Pictures regularly.

For seven years of unbroken progress exhibitors have depended on Educational for quality Short Features—a great guarantee back of our greater plans for the next season.

"Last night marked off another red letter day for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. 'THE SCARLET LETTER' stands out as another triumph for the makers of 'The Big Parade'. It is by far Lillian Gish's greatest role, played with passion and understanding. I can only recommend you strongly to see it at once."
—Eileen Creelman, N.Y. American

"Last night at the Central Theatre the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer organization added another production to its Broadway string—'The Big Parade', 'Ben Hur', etc." —Eve. Post

"Power, beauty, drama has been carved out in 'THE SCARLET LETTER'. With a sense for the unique qualities of Lillian Gish, Victor Seastrom has made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer another of its road shows."
—A.T., N.Y. World

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has done it again. Victor Seastrom, the director, Lillian Gish and Lars Hanson, the stars, achieve a triumph. 'THE SCARLET LETTER' is one of the most powerful pictures of the year."
—Rose Pelswick, Journal

"As faithful a transcription of the narrative as one could imagine."
—Mordaunt Hall, N.Y. Times

"Thanks to everyone connected with the picture, an American literary classic became a classic of the screen. 'THE SCARLET LETTER' should burn brilliantly in front of the Central Theatre for months to come."

"McFADDEN'S FLATS"

The two C's—Charlie Murray and Chester Conklin—in one picture. What would you expect as the result? Laughs plus. Well, you get them in "McFadden's Flats." Generous, large-sized ones. They might be described by the elite as belly laughs, but what of it?

And that funny mimic, Chester Conklin. He's awkward, but you feel a huge affection for him because of that. When he takes off his shoes at the swanky McFadden party and pulls the lost sheep business right among the uptown swells, the laughter gets mighty close to convulsive. "McFadden's Flats" will have a long and successful life. Make a note of it, mental or otherwise, and check your box-office against this forecast.

"McFADDEN'S FLATS"

First National have an audience picture. Par excellence. In this old time, long time, legitimate roadshow success.

"McFadden's Flats" is a sure cure. For the blues.

It's made with a deliberate intent. To make people laugh. And having all the right ingredients. To make people laugh. Naturally the effect is many loud laughs.

Two or three scenes. From the comedy angle. Are classics.

This picture. Which will open. At the Strand. February fifth. Is bound to be a success.

This is a Big League Comedy Picture. Without mistake.

And by every sign. A box-office knockout.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, FEBRUARY 11, 1927 No. 6

The Theatre Situation

FOR more than two years, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been analyzing the theatre field, classifying the various houses in respect to their trade importance, and, arriving, by actual, first-hand knowledge, at the total for the whole country.

The results are as follows: Total number of picture theatres in the United States—14,991, divided in this way:

These are the figures for 1926. It should be remembered that the count includes only bona-fide theatres, open once a week or more. Larger totals have been arrived at by other authorities in the industry, but our own investigation has been subjected to rigid checking and re-checking over a long period and has been based on original sources and information, some of which have never been employed hitherto, so far as we can learn.

It is entirely likely that there are more than 14,991 picture accounts in this country, but picture accounts and picture theatres are not always the same thing. A show, operated now and then by a lumber company in the bunkhouse of a sawmill is not a theatre in the trade sense. We merely cite that as an example; there are others of similar nature.

The industry's foundation is the picture theatre, operated as such, and the actual number of these is about 15,000.

Careful investigation disposes also of other beliefs widely current, but unsupported by the facts. One of these is to the effect that the total number of picture theatres is decreasing. Surprising as it may seem, in view of chain expansions and other factors, our survey shows a slight increase in the theatre total for 1926 over 1925. In the latter year, there were 14,685 houses; in 1926, there were, as stated, 14,991, a gain of 306.

This means, unquestionably, that the building of new theatres is keeping pace with the public demand; perhaps is overshooting it. But, in any event, it most certainly shows that, among actual, bona-fide picture theatres, the mortality of poorer houses is more than offset by the construction of better ones.

Finally, the table is an eloquent reminder that it will not do to put all the emphasis on the first-runs, using the broadest definition of that term. These are approximately 2,000 in number (all of Class A and most of Class B). If we subtract 2,000 from 14,991, the remainder is 12,991—the great mass of theatres, with tremendous purchasing power and vital to the industry's welfare.

* * * *

Healthy Discontent

NOTHING is more dangerous in an enterprise such as motion pictures, which depends upon constant novelty and freshness and variety, than too great a satisfaction with things as they are. Healthy discontent and a striving for something better is the mainspring of progress in any field.

For that reason we are happy to note the many signs in the air of an effort to improve motion pictures which seems greater than at any time in years.

From England this week comes word of a new and commercially practicable non-inflammable film, which should open up entirely new fields and remov the greatest single drawback from the educat use of motion pictures.

Several new projects for synchronize tachments are shaping up, and a str ment may be looked for in this fi
a fraction of it. Watch 1927!

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

PROBABLY no film event of January has created more talk in New York motion picture circles than the four-week run of "Flesh and the Devil" at the Capitol Theatre, where no picture had previously played more than two consecutive weeks. It now appears likely that close to $250,000 will be taken in on the engagement. The picture would have had to run for from 12 to 18 weeks in a legitimate house to return a gross of this magnitude—and at a much higher price scale.

There is distinctly food for thought in this for the industry. Just what, probably, would M-G-M have gained by putting "Flesh and the Devil" into a legitimate Broadway theatre?

Broadway Records

IN answer to the claim made last week that the first 100 performances of "Old Ironsides" had established a record for gross intake, the figure given being $131,775.45 for the first 98, Warner Brothers this week gave out figures on the New York engagements of "The Better 'Ole" and "Don Juan," which are of interest.

According to these figures, the first 98 performances of "The Better 'Ole" brought in $231,898, exclusive of tax, and the first 98 performances of "Don Juan," $199,560.

War and Comedy Continue

IN the opinion of B. P. Schulberg, West Coast executive for Famous Players-Lasky, the two cycles of war drama and comedy will continue through 1927, with the comedy cycle probably outlasting the era of war films. The public, he points out, wants three things in its screen fare—thrills, romance and laughter. The war drama supplies the first two, and comedy, the third. He cites four Famous productions made to meet the demand for war pictures, and says of comedy:

"The comedy cycle has been longer in acquiring its momentum, and by that very token promises to be of greater duration. The laugh film at the present time is rivalled in popularity only by the great war spectacle pictures.

"A year ago we were content to present 'Behind the Front' as practically our only out-and-out comedy production for the moment. Today, we have the largest staff of comedy players, directors and writers of any film firm in the world and 40 per cent of our product to be made in the next 12 weeks is for laughing purposes, while several of the more or less serious dramas have strong comedy elements."

Another "Ten Best"

THE Ten Best Pictures of 1926, as selected by the critics for The 1927 Film Year Book, are as follows: "Variety," "Ben Hur," "The Big Parade," "The Black Pirate," "Beau Geste," "Stella Dallas," "The Volga Boatman," "What Price Glory," "The Sea Beast," and "La Boheme."

Two hundred and eighteen critics representing newspapers, fan and trade papers cast their ballots. The list may be taken as reflecting fairly the judgment of the public throughout the country on productions widely released last year.

The Film Year Book itself is a splendid piece of work, more extensive and attractive than ever, and reflecting great credit on the whole Film Daily organization. Again, our sincere congratulations to our contemporary on this admirable service to the industry.

"Slums of Berlin" Scores

THE imported picture, "Slums of Berlin," was held over for a second week at the Cameo, New York, due to its exceptionally fine showing at the box office during the initial week which opened January 23rd. On Monday, January 24th, the picture is reported to have broken the house-record for Monday receipts at this theatre. The gross to date is highly unusual for the small Cameo.

Fashions From Hollywood

PEGGY HAMILTON, fashion editor of the Los Angeles Times, was the guest of honor at a luncheon to the press on Tuesday at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, at which she announced two Hollywood Style Shows to be given at the Biltmore on February 15 and 18. The first will take the form of a tea-dance, while the second will be a dinner-dance.

All of the gowns displayed will be those worn by prominent stars in recent or forthcoming productions, and will be strictly Hollywood creations. Hollywood is coming to be as powerful a fashion arbiter as Paris or New York, and no little interest attaches to the shows for this reason. Many of the gowns are on display this week in the windows of McCreery's, a New York department store. The companies who have furnished them include First National, Famous Players-Lasky, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Warner Brothers, Fox, De Mille, Universal and Carewe-Inspiration.

Kay Laurell Dead

WORD was received from London this week of the death from pneumonia of Kay Laurell, former stage and screen star here, at the age of 37. She was at one time featured in the Ziegfeld Follies, later starring in pictures and appearing in Broadway stage productions.

Antipodean Impressions

"The legitimate offerings might easily be catalogued as undress, super-sex, ordinary sex, sex perversion, straight drama, comedy drama, musical comedy and straight comedy. . . . Tuesday was State Election Day, conducted on a national scale throughout the land. It was the culmination of a mass of campaigns which showed the application of showmanship exploitation to the question of selecting the law-makers and enforcers. No avenue was left untouched—the press, radio, snipes, the screen, torchlight displays, street floats, ballyhoos on vacant lots, cartoonists in Times Square. . . . The New York press has been giving me some publicity because of a story I gave to the general manager of the theatre running 'Abie's Irish Rose.' I told him that when I was here, in 1922, the play was so badly 'panned' at its opening, and there were so many other shows that I wanted to see more, that I didn't see it. Four and a half years later I come back to find the same 'badly panned' show still running. The manager gave the story to the press, and while he was in the giving mood he gave me a couple of seats. I'm going to see 'Abie's' tonight."

A Big Moment

IT meant a great deal to H. M. Warner and Jack L. Warner last Sunday night when "Don Juan" opened with a Vitaphone prelude at the Metropolitan Theatre in Baltimore—for just forty years ago this spring the Warner brothers and their sisters and mother landed in Baltimore from the other side to join their father, who had preceded them by two years. In 1885 the elder Warner established a "shoes made while you wait" shop, and by 1887 this had grown to three establishments, so he sent for the family. Hence the glow of satisfaction which it gave the Warner brothers, forty years later, to be able to sit in their own theatre, see a picture owned by them and hear the Vitaphone, which they had given to the amusement world—and all in the city to which they had come as poor immigrants.

Columbia Stays at 1600

AFTER looking over the various new buildings which have sprung up in the film district, Columbia Pictures Corporation has decided to sign a new lease in the Mecca Building, where the company has made its headquarters since its inception. Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn, president and treasurer, respectively, of the company, have taken over additional space on the eighth floor and have enlarged the original offices to make room for the growing demands of this company.

Behind this matter of fact statement lurks a sentiment which probably had much to do with the company's decision to remain in the old building. For the last fifteen years 1600 Broadway has meant "business home" to Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn, and it was for many years the permanent address of Harry Cohn, general manager in charge of production.

In 1912 Joe Brandt, who had entered the motion picture industry the year before, came to the Mecca Building with Carl Laemmle and his Universal company. With him came Jack Cohn, who had been associated with Joe in the Ben Hampton Advertising Agency, and Jack's brother, Harry. Joe Brandt and the Cohn boys remained with Laemmle, devoting their time to the distribution, exploitation and production ends of the business and becoming prominently identified with the organization and development of the new company.

In 1918 Joe, Jack and Harry felt that the time had come to create for themselves a place in the motion picture industry. Under the name of C. B. C. (Cohn-Brandt-Cohn) they entered the production field for themselves with the Hallroom Comedies and Screen Snapshots, with home offices, of course, in the Mecca Building.

A modest beginning, but during the seven years of the company's existence, the growth has been rapid. During all these years exhibitors and business friends have always turned to 1600 Broadway when they wanted to see Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn.

Levy Creates Mastbaum Memorial

COLONEL FRED LEVY, Louisville, Ky., theatre owner, has given the Temple Adath Israel of that city a considerable sum, annually, to be known as the Jules Mastbaum Memorial Fund. Mr. Mastbaum was widely known for his charitable endeavors, and it is Colonel Levy's idea, that from that fund worthy persons, without distinction as to race or creed, are to be assisted in obtaining education and employment.

Monty Banks Returns

MONTY BANKS, starring in feature comedies for Pathe, reached New York City on January 11 on the S.S. Aquitania after spending the holidays in his native Italy. He had been planning the trip for some time and was speeding up work on his current picture when he received word of his mother's death in Italy. He was unable, however, to reach there in time for the funeral services.

Rising Young Press Agents

JUST as designation of Wampas Baby Star has started the fame of numerous screen satellites into ascendency, so has membership in the Western Association of Motion Picture Advertisers meant a stepping-stone into other and higher ranks of the cinema for those who have preferred such change. As Thursday evening, February 17, the date for the sixth Wampas Frolic and Ball, to be staged in the Ambassador auditorium, draws near, officials of the Wampas have been canvassing names written in the membership roster during the six years since the Wampas came into being.

Some of those original Wampas members now hold enviable positions in such fields as producers, scenarists, title writers, theatre managers, publishers and publication representatives.

Hunt Stromberg and Harry J. Brown have joined the producing ranks and instead of writing for the stars and the studios they now hire others to do that work. William Counselman, Garrett Graham and Joseph Jackson have laid down the publicity pen to devote their talents to preparing material for the screen—vehicles in which the stars they helped to make may ride to further fame. Malcolm Stuart Boylan is devoting his wit and ingenuity to title writing. Hal Horne, H. B. Wright and Edwin G. Hitchcock have become theatre managers. Ted Taylor is with a publication in Paris, France, and Ivan St. Johns is Western representative of a prominent fan magazine. Foster Goss is in the publishing business having to do with the screen.

They Don't Come From the Farms

FARMS have not contributed a single player and villages have furnished but two well-known players out of a list of more than forty, a canvass of the M-G-M studios shows. Large cities have contributed by far the most prominent players, but cities of medium size throughout the country are well represented. Five screen favorites were born south of the Mason and Dixon line, while the remainder are about evenly divided among East, West and foreign nations.

San Francisco ranks highest with four players: Carmel Myers, Roy D'Arcy, Aileen Pringle and Louise Lorraine. New York supplied three and Philadelphia two. Marion Davies and Edward Connelly being from Manhattan and Lionel Barrymore and Eleanor Boardman from the Quaker city.

The quartet from Dixie are: William Haines, Staunton, Va.; Dorothy Sebastian, Birmingham, Ala.; Joan Crawford, San Antonio, Tex., and Pauline Starke, Joplin, Mo.

Claire Windsor was born at Cawker City, Kansas, and Buster Keaton's face froze when he first saw the light of day at Pickway, Kansas. Buster says he will smile if anybody can locate his birthplace on the map, but Miss Windsor loyally defends Cawker City—as does everybody who ever saw Claire.

Hardy to Play "Nights" Lead

SAM HARDY, who has given outstanding comedy and character portrayals in seven Robert Kane productions for First National release, has been given the lead opposite Lois Wilson in "Broadway Nights," the next Kane picture. This goes into production this week. It is not Hardy's first lead, however, as he came into pictures via a principal role in "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." Joe Boyle, who finished "Convoy" for Kane, will direct "Broadway Nights."

Wampas Frolic Plans

BOXES for the sixth annual Wampas Frolic and Ball, to be held in the Ambassador Auditorium, Los Angeles, Thursday evening, February 17, are being rapidly taken, according to the committee in charge of ticket distribution. Likewise, sales of tickets other than boxes are progressing at such a pace that a complete sell-out is expected long before the curtain rises on the big cinema-social fete.

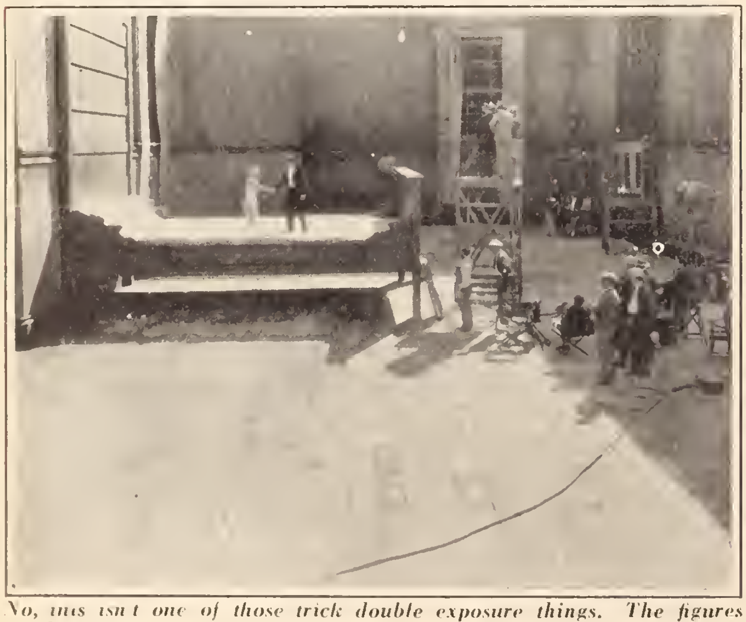
"Uncle Tom's Cabin" without the bloodhounds would be much worse than "Hamlet" without Hamlet, and Universal has obtained the best available for the Harry Pollard production. The four shown here were purchased from George D. Colts of Salt Lake City

Approximately 1,000 persons will be accommodated in the tiers of boxes arranged on three sides of the dance floor, and another 2,000 will be given seats in the balconies on each side of the auditorium. Only 3,000 persons will be admitted to this year's frolic to insure each patron getting a seat, thus avoiding overcrowding. Tickets are on sale at all recognized theatre ticket agencies and at the Wampas headquarters in the Ambassador Hotel.

Notable screen players are responding generously to the invitation of the Wampas to appear in a cinema pageant in outstanding roles from their major productions of last year as a part of the big entertainment program now in the making for the frolic. "Great Scenes From Great Pictures" describes this feature presentation with the stars, costumed as they were in making the production, appearing in person and going through their biggest scenes just as if they were working before the camera.

Already twelve celebrities have accepted the invitation and the Wampas entertainment committee is confident that the number will reach a score. Pauline Starke, erstwhile Wampas Baby Star, will appear in a sequence from "Women Love Diamonds"; Karl Dane in a bit from "The Big Parade," and Tim McCoy in a thumb-nail portrayal from "Winning the Wilderness."

Clara Bow, one of the early baby stars, will be seen in her latest characterization, Elinor Glyn's "It." Alberta Vaughn, also a baby star of the past, is to appear in a sequence from the "Telephone Girl" series of pictures. Tom Mix will give a specialty combining several of his more prominent screen roles.



No, this isn't one of those trick double exposure things. The figures are life size and the furniture is built on a huge scale for a scene in "Wolf's Clothing," a Warner Bros. picture. The persons shaking hands on the bed are Patsy Ruth Miller and Monte Blue

Others already scheduled for appearance in the cinema pageant, with the pictures they will represent, include Arthur Stone, in "The Patent Leather Kid"; Charlie Murray in "Who Goes There?"; Mary Astor in "Forever After," and Ken Maynard in "The Overland Stage."

Exceptional interest is expected in the sequence from "Old Ironsides." In this will be seen George Bancroft and Esther Ralston.

Seated at the head of the table with the guest of honor and Mr. Storey were Elmer Pearson, vice-president and general manager and his guests, John Flinn and Arthur Whyte of P. D. C. Other Pathe executives present were Bernhard Benson, vice-president; John Humm, treasurer; Lewis Innerarity, secretary.

J. J. Murdock, general manager of the Keith-Albee circuit of theatres, who was prevented by illness from being present, expressed his regrets for his absence in a note that heartily congratulated both Editor Hall and Pathe upon their happy affiliation.

To a man the entire headquarters, editorial and Camera staffs were on hand to attest their esteem for the chief. Present were: Theodore Smith, Karl W. Fasold, Jack Darrock, Santino Sozio, Harry Hardy, Henry De Siena, John Bartone, Paul Jones, Ludwig Geiskop, Harry D. Blauvelt, Jack McCarron and David Sussman.

Pathe executives and personnel present, in addition to those previously named, were: L. S. Diamond, Arthur Rousseau, Stanley B. Waite, Pat Campbell, L. E. Franconi, G. L. Chanier, J. A. Berst, S. Barret McCormick, P. A. Parsons, Jack Kyle, Charles Henschel, Harry Lewis, Charles Fischer, J. T. Richards, John Dacey, C. W. Baremore Handling "Flats"

Pathe Takes Basketball Lead

ON Friday night, January 28, before a record attendance, two games of the Motion Picture Basketball 1927 tournament were played in the gymnasium of Stuyvesant High School, New York City: Pathe vs. Fox Films, and Metro vs. Consolidated Films.

In the first game, the Pathe five wrested the honors of first place in the league from the Fox team by a score of 39 to 22. Both teams fought hard for the coveted position, and as a result many thrills were witnessed. Snyder and Tobin, Pathe's centre and forward stars, gave sensational exhibitions and were tied for high scoring honors of the game, each contributing 13 points. Al Star chalked up the high score for Fox with 12 points.

Metro walked away with the second contest of the evennig, trimming the Consolidated Films team 56 to 21.

Veidt's International Plan

CONRAD VEIDT, who passed through New York last week on his way back to Los Angeles, where he starts work shortly for Universal in "The Chinese Parrot," has some unusually interesting ideas on the international angle in production, in which he has been interested for years. It was Carl Laemmle's open-minded attitude on this score, Veidt said, which weighed heavily with him in signing up with Universal for three years. Motion pictures, he pointed out, offer the only art medium capable of absolutely international understanding, and it is vitally necessary that there be a reciprocity of ideas between the film makers of Europe and America, to lead to better understanding of each other's films all around. Each has something to give to the other —America its enthusiasm and optimism and fresh youth; Europe its originality and fine character portrayal.

Veidt intimated that after making a few pictures here for Universal he would ask permission to take an American feminine star and an American director to Europe with him to make a picture embodying both German and American ideas. Then he would return to America with an important European cast to make a picture. By this sort of reciprocity of ideas and talent, he felt, pictures understandable to the people of all countries would gradually come into existence.

The idea is a worthy one, and there is little doubt that something of the sort will come about. It would meet many of the criticisms levelled at present methods, and would tend to build up better feeling in every way.

Veidt started his stage career in 1913 with Max Reinhardt. In 1914 he played in his first film, "The Mystery of Bangalore," under the direction of Paul Leni, who will also direct him in "The Chinese Parrot." He returned to the speaking stage each year for a time. Other picture appearances include "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," "The Three Wax-works," "Lady Hamilton," "Love is Blind," "The Student of Prague," and, in America, "The Beloved Rogue."

The first still to be received here from the Fox Films version of "Seventh Heaven," showing Charles Farrell and Albert Gran in an amusing moment from this story of Apache life.

Broadcasting a Movie Scene

THE actual production of a motion picture will be broadcast by radio for the first time on February 15 as part of the Eveready Hour. The scene to be broadcast will be the prize fight sequence in Richard Dix's next picture, "Knockout Reilly," which is now in production at Paramount's Long Island studio. Graham McNamee, nationally known announcer, will be at the "mike."

Broadcasting of the production of this sequence will be done by the National Broadcasting Company through a chain of 19 stations.

The Cream of the Week

TWO features and two short subjects were selected for special mention this week by the National Board of Review. The Fox Films version of "The Music Master" was one of the features, and P. D. C.'s "The Yankee Clipper" was the other. Pathe Review, issues No. 9 and No. 10, received the other two asterisks.

Lou Metzger, general sales manager for Universal, shows Reginald Denny, the star, and Melville Brown, director, the sales department's figures on some of the recent Denny productions, which seem to be highly satisfactory.

A Record-Breaker

NEAL BURNS, the well-known Christie comedian, has the distinction of breaking records of two different kinds in the same week. He has just finished his eleventh year with one film producing company, and has made a hole-in-one on a local golf course for the third time.

It was just eleven years ago that Neal Burns joined the Christie forces after successful appearances in Universal productions. It was the year that Al Christie formed his own comedy producing organization and located his studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street. That was in January, 1916, and Neal's first one-reel comedy was called "His Baby."

Burns, one of the best golfers now appearing in motion pictures, scored the coveted honor of making a hole in one the first time at Griffith Park, in 1920. He made it again on the sixteenth hole at Hollywood last year. Again, this week, he won another gold button for the achievement by making the sixth hole in one stroke at Lakeside.

"This," he is quoted as saying, "is in honor of Syd Chaplin, Syd Grauman, and 'The Better 'Ole.' "

A Versatile Salesman

TAKE it from Sam Nathanson, P.D.C. salesman in Detroit, that if anyone thinks the sole duty of a salesman is to sell a film, he is very much mistaken. Mr. Nathanson recently called on an exhibitor, who operates theatres in Blissfield and Petersburg, Michigan, and he appends the following note to the contract:

"I spent from ten in the morning to twelve midnight to get this contract—ate with him, posted bills with him, went to the bank with him, swept his theatre for him, took tickets with him, played with his baby, bought them a box of candy, secured the contract and bid them 'Goodnight'."

"Wings" Unit Returns

BEARING as genuine evidence of hardship and nerve-strain as though they had been in a real campaign, members of the Paramount unit which has been making "Wings" at San Antonio, Tex., returned this week from what is declared to have been the most hazardous and extraordinary location trip ever taken.

Led by Supervising Producer Lucien Hubbard and Director William Wellman, with Charles Rogers and Richard Arlen heading the players, nearly 200 members of the troupe, including actors and technical workers, arrived late yesterday.

For five months the company has been photographing scenes of aerial and ground warfare, duplicating the St. Mihiel battle of the World War on the largest motion picture set ever constructed, a five square-mile battle area, 30 miles out of San Antonio.

Another of those photos sent by A. T. & T. wire across country. This one shows Richard A. Rowland, Billie Dove, George Fitzmaurice and Ben Lyon on the set at the commencement of work on "The Tender Hour" at the First National Burbank studios

During the course of the work, more than 5,000 men have been serving as American and German soldiers, reliving the famous conflict, while more than 120 daring aviators have daily been defying death in staging air scenes of the most extraordinary nature.

With automatically operated cameras attached to from 10 to 20 planes every time the flyers left the ground, spectacular battles in the air, with all the attendant thrills of falling aircraft, planes bursting into flames in mid-air, fights thousands of feet above the ground, many of them high above the clouds which cut them off completely from sight of the earth, have been "shot" with what has been described as extraordinary results.

Say It With Props

CECIL B. DeMILLE, whose opinions are always vivid and interesting, whether we agree with them wholly or not, expresses some characteristic views this week on the subject of what makes an entertaining and an artistic picture. He puts forward the contention, which he has previously made, that because the motion picture is mass entertainment a box-office success is, per se, an artistic success. This, it seems to us, is quibbling about definitions and terms, and assigning to the word "art" a meaning which we doubt it possesses. Art is not necessarily entertaining in a popular sense, nor is mass entertainment necessarily artistic. We are quarreling with Mr. DeMille in terms and not in principle, however. It would be much sounder and more logical, it seems to us, to say that if the motion picture succeeds in its natural function of providing mass entertainment, what right has any group of sour-bellied critics to demand that it be of necessity artistic?

The entertaining picture, he points out, must first of all be a composite of many things which, when presented in relation to one another, become dramatic and compelling. Contrast is another essential. "You must have," he says, "a theme—your story must lead to a definite conclusion that will strike an answering note in the lives of the people who see your pictures. People said I was crazy to start my series of plays dealing specifically with divorce problems—and yet they have been the most successful group of photoplays the world has ever known." Continuing, he refers to the "trick props" which he once employed, such as covered telephones, ornate bathrooms and the like. "These properties," he points out, "have the power of satisfying two of the public's most pronounced traits, curiosity and the desire for novelty. They are purely exterior, these things, and yet they work wonders in sending people out of the theatre with a memory of some particular thing which forms the basis of an enthusiastic conversation when they start to describe the play to a friend. I long ago sent a rule to my scenario department, 'Say it with props.' You can point dramatic situations with more vividness by the use of symbolic properties than any single device."

No One Can "Write" a Photoplay

Words and Pictures Have Nothing in Common, and Improvement Must Come Along Radical Lines

(EDITOR'S NOTE:—The following article, dealing with the shortcomings of continuity in its present form, does not necessarily represent the views of the Editor of Motion Picture News. It touches a field which has received little serious consideration and it is hoped that it will lead to helpful discussion of the subject.)

By L. C. Moen

IF we were deliberately to seek out the perfect paradox, we could not do better than that complete contradiction in terms—"to write a motion picture." No man has yet "written" a motion picture, and no man ever will. No sculptor ever "carved" a sonata, and no musician ever "composed" a bas-relief.

Yet the talk goes on of "encouraging new writers for the screen," of "educating great authors to the needs of the photoplay," and such fiddle-dee-dee. As though any great picture had ever needed any more story than could be written on the director's cuff—and as though a literary artist, trained in the beauty and force of words, were any more likely to be able to create such a story than any other human being.

One would have thought that Goldwyn's costly Eminent Authors fiasco would have taught the executives something, at least—or, if not that, some of the high-priced failures made from high-priced literary and dramatic masterpieces. Evidently they have made no impression, for the liberally financed pilgrimages to Hollywood by the literati (with tongue in cheek) go merrily on, and with as barren fruit as always—and as always will be.

It is doubly a pity, for it not only means an economic waste in paying out millions for penny whistles that blow out of key, but it also means that the men really responsible for our successes are deprived of recognition and monies due them. There are two reasons—the Highbrow Complex, and the Literary Fallacy.

The Highbrow Complex

Deep down in their hearts, most of our production executives know better. They pretend to buy literary triumphs for their exploitation value, knowing full well that the story will have to be changed so completely that the very persons whom the title draws into the theatre will go out knocking the picture. The executives are, in reality, nourishing their Highbrow Complex. Publicly they scorn the jibes of The American Mercury, the Nation, The New Yorker, Vanity Fair, the New Masses and the loftier of the New York dailies, but privately (and consciously or not) they yearn to remove from themselves the stigma of pandering to the 12-year-old mind. It is a matter of simple mathematics that you cannot produce for the intelligentsiacs alone and spend $300,000 per negative. If you want to be highbrow, you must use dredges and mud-scows and unknown actors and one week in a studio on Poverty Row. If you want to produce grandly you must pick themes that will interest brows of various heights—or find an endowment fund or an Otto H. Kahn.

When Tolstoi remarked that he would rather write a lullaby with which a million mothers would rock their babes to sleep than a grand symphony for the few, he stated a creed which might well be on the wall over every film executive's desk. It is nothing to be ashamed of, certainly, but it is precisely the thing which the Highbrow Complex seeks to destroy.

Finding its first roots in the soil of illiteracy and poverty, the American motion picture has come to world leadership mainly because the men who moulded it had the common touch. Now they are commencing to be apologetic of the things that made them great, and are in danger of losing the ability to do great things.

The Literary Fallacy

Unfortunate as are the results of the Highbrow Complex, the Literary Fallacy strikes much deeper because it weakens the whole chain of picture production. We might define it as "the belief that pictures can be composed in words."

Continuity, in its present form, is the most deceptive factor in production today—and is the main reason that pictures are made in the cutting room and not in the studio.

Motion pictures are "motion pictures"—pictures in motion, pictures of motion, translate it as you will—and the story is always told through pictorial motion. Now you can describe pictures in words but very badly, and motions scarcely at all.

A thing of words can bear no close relation to a motion picture. That should be obvious. The word-concept must become a picture-concept in someone's mind before it can be placed on the screen. So long as the concept remains a thing of words, someone must visualize it before it becomes a thing of pictures. The person or persons who do that "write" the picture, and not the scenario writer. All the work done by the scenario writer in preparing a continuity may improve the story for screen use—but it does not prepare it for filming.

To realize the truth of this statement, consider your own experiences in viewing a motion picture adaptation of a favorite story. Never, probably, have you felt that it was the story as you saw it. In reading the word version, you had formed a certain picture-concept of the tale, and the director's concept was entirely different. Or, to take a closer parallel, read the review of a photoplay by a critic who is a really good descriptive writer, form a definite conception of what the film is like, then see it. It can never possibly be exactly what you visualized, because words stimulate the imagination of each person in a different way.

The continuity is convenient, because it breaks the story up into small units and puts it into handy form for translation into screen terms—but because it does not go far enough it throws the burden of "writing" the story on the director, the actor and the cutter, mainly.

The fault lies not with the scenarists. They are perhaps the most intelligent and hard working group in the industry, but they are facing an impossible task. The fault lies in the method furnished them—in the fundamentally wrong basic thought underlying production today—in the Literary Fallacy.

Form and Content

A motion picture consists of two inseparable things: Form and Content. Content, of course, is the story, and Form is the means by which it is told—pictured motion. You cannot consider the one without the other. You cannot write a novel without words; you cannot compose music without notes, and you cannot "write" a motion picture without motion and pictures. Anything else is a deceptive approximation which may go wide of the mark. Pictures must be planned in PICTURES.

Continuity fails because it does not go far enough. It describes Content (in word-concepts), but it does not put these concepts into visual form, and it leaves Form out of consideration almost entirely. It should be merely the first stage in preparation for a screen production. The art director visualizes Setting in his sketches, and the costume director visualizes the wardrobe, but we go no further. The action remains a word-concept until the players are actually before the camera, when it becomes visual—but that is the most inefficient and ineffective time at which to plan the action, movement and composition.

The all-important matters of Rhythm and Tempo are impossible to plan in the present continuity—yet these give the picture its whole effect of movement.

They All Have It

I am well aware that many directors consider Rhythm, Tempo, Composition, Dynamics and the like as merely something which the arty critics discover in pictures after they are made. So far as recognition of these factors go, they are right. These same directors, however, cannot make a picture without Rhythm, Tempo and Composition—even though they are likely to be woefully bad Rhythm, uneven Tempo and inefficient Composition. They are like Monsieur Jourdain in Moliere's play, who was astonished to discover that all his life he had been talking in prose. He had considered prose composition something sacred to authors.

Just so with motion picture producers. They are dealing in Light and Motion, and they cannot escape the use of the factors we have named. Next week we will consider precisely what they are and how they may be articulated.

Birmingham Exhibitors in Protest Against F. P.

Pledge Themselves to Rent Films Only From Companies Not in Competition With Them

FOLLOWING the purchase of two theatres in Birmingham, England, one month ago by Famous Players-Lasky, reports reached here this week that exhibitors of that section in closed meeting had pledged themselves "to book films only from producers or renters who do not enter into competition with them as exhibitors." The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, called upon to make this move general throughout England, voted to leave it to individual action in each region. Subsequently, it was reported, Liverpool exhibitors voted to support Birmingham theatre owners in their stand.

A dispatch to the New York "Times" stated that a C.E.A. member had asked the Chamber of Commerce to make representations to the Government in the matter, asserting that American interests sought to gain control of British theatres.

No statements have been given out by Famous Players, but the reason given for the purchase at the time it was made was that the only two first-run theatres in Birmingham in which they were given a fair chance were about to pass to another company, and that the only way in which they could prevent their being "frozen out" in that city was to buy the houses, which was done.

An editorial in "The Bioscope," "The Battle of Birmingham," represents a sane and clear-headed view. An extract follows:

"Frankly, we are of the opinion that Birmingham's isolated action is a mistake, and that it will be a still more serious mistake if exhibitors in other centers allow themselves to be stampeded into a grave, and possibly devastating, conflict without first making sure of their cause and, even more important, of their weapons. . . . Should a general fight take place, it might well prove the Armageddon of the British Film Trade. No matter which side won the victory, all parties would suffer, and they would suffer at a time which, given peace, promises an era of unusual prosperity. Therefore the responsibility of casting the fatal die must not be lightly undertaken, nor should exhibitors be asked to pledge themselves to a cause of whose merits they are not completely satisfied."

Film Rights to "The Miracle" Claimed By F. N. and M-G-M.

AN unusual legal tangle over the screen rights to "The Miracle" developed this week with the announcement that First National had purchased such rights from A. H. Woods, theatrical producer. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, as announced last week, has closed a similar deal with Joseph Menchen, who also claims to own the motion picture rights to the stage spectacle and pantomime made famous by Max Reinhardt.

Woods, according to First National, "has controlled the rights since 1913, when he presented the first screen version of the play at the Park Theatre, New York. The producer's rights to the property were upheld in court later, when he obtained a permanent injunction restraining another company from presenting a picture under this title. These rights have now been purchased by First National, and will be protected by whatever legal action may become necessary." Woods states that he purchased the holdings of Menchen, who produced the film in 1912.

Menchen asserts that Woods contracted only for distribution rights in the U.S. and Canada, and through failure to pay the final $5,000 required, breached the contract.

There the matter stands at present, and either arbitration or court action will be necessary, it is declared, to find out just who actually owns the film rights to the story.

New Non Flam Film Found

Cheap and Durable as Other, is Claim for English Product; Other Technical Inventions

SEVERAL technical inventions of more than ordinary interest were announced in Europe this week, including a non-flam film claimed to be actually superior to the present nitrate film; a cool projection light which will not ignite film; a gyroscopic tripod head which ends the usual difficulties in panning and tilting; and a triple width screen for panoramic scenes on a great scale.

Most important of these in its potential aspects is the non-flam film. Invented by H. J. Mallabar, F.R.P.S., it represents many years of research. A factory is now being equipped, and machinery already installed, it is declared, can produce more than 2,000,000 feet per month. An ultimate output of 250,000,000 feet per annum is planned. The cost is as low as that of ordinary stock, and tests are declared to show that wear, pliability, opacity, and so on, compare very favorably with nitrate film. It burns only with a direct flame, and when the flame is removed, the blaze goes out. The fumes from the burning material are not dangerous, and there is practically no chance of its explosion, it is claimed.

Like other non-flam films, the Mallabar product is an acetate base, but if the claims are correct, he has succeeded in removing the usual objections to the material. In this case, many new fields will be opened up to the motion picture which are now difficult because of stringent fire laws and the requirement of fireproof booths.

No details are available on the "cold light" as yet, only the bare announcement of its invention being made.

The gyroscopic tripod head, put out by a British camera firm, is not unlike the Akeley tripod in operation. The usual cranks for panning and tilting are replaced by a single long handle, by means of which the camera can be moved in any direction. Internal gears set two gyroscopes in motion when the head is moved, resulting in an absolutely even, steady movement and eliminating vibration.

The triple screen is being employed by Abel Gance, French producer of "Napoleon." Unlike the Magnascope, being used in New York on "Old Ironsides," it does not magnify the picture in its ordinary proportions, but projects three standard pictures side by side, the trio joining into a panorama of the usual height but three times the width. It is described as follows by the Paris correspondent of "The Daily Film Renter" (England):

"The ordinary screen is in the middle of two black curtains. He pulls a cord, the curtains disappear, and the screen is elongated on both sides. In taking the film three cameras are used one above the other, but in projection the three are placed side by side. . . . The great advantage of the triple screen will be its use for battle scenes and huge crowds, and M. Gance has great hopes of its usefulness in his 'Napoleon,' especially for the burning of the fleet at Toulon, the French army crossing the Alps into Italy and the big battles and cavalry charges."

British F.B.O. Launches International Plan

F. A. Enders, managing director of Film Booking Offices, Ltd., of England (not to be confused with F.B.O. in the United States, with which it has no connection) this week announced an international production schedule taking in England, America, France, Germany and Russia.

The British F.B.O. will produce two or three pictures a year in England. The American product is that of Columbia Pictures. Alliances have been made in France, Germany and Russia by which Mr. Enders will have a hand in the supervision of production, as well as the financing, which will give this company one of the most genuinely international programs of any firm in existence. He has already acquired several French, Russian and German films, and the first British production is nearly finished.

Shauer Sails for England on Annual Visit

E. E. Shauer, head of the foreign department of Famous Players-Lasky, sails on Friday night on the Aquitania for England to look over conditions there and on the Continent. He will remain abroad for several weeks, making his usual annual tour of the important branches.

Stiefel Bros. and Stanley Co. in Philly Theatre Deal

With the acquisition by the Stanley Company of six Stiefel houses in Philadelphia, including the York Palace and Columbia theatres which the Stiefel Amusement Company had previously taken over from George Werner, a new corporation will come into being, the Stanley-Stiefel Company, which will operate theatres under a lease. The six houses are, besides the York and Columbia which the Stiefels had aquired with an option to buy, the Elite, Fairmount, Twenty-fourth Street and Poplar.

Under the terms of the agreement the Stanley Company will hold 51 per cent interest with distribution to the Stiefels of some Stanley stock.

The East Coast Theatres Company, composed of Oscar Neufeld and Sam Stiefel, who with his brothers, Abraham and Nathan, comprise the Stiefel Amusement Company, intends to expand with the acquisition of thirty additional houses by the end of the year. Within the next few weeks six theatres are expected to augment the present East Coast chain of thirteen. Irving Weiss, formerly manager of the Swedesboro Theatre, Swedesboro, N.J., is now booker for the entire circuit and has been succeeded at Swedesboro by William Piether.

B. and F. Circuit of Toronto Organized by Bloom & Fine

Sam Bloom and Sam Fine, veteran Toronto exhibitors, have organized the B. and F Circuit of theatres in Toronto, comprising a number of attractive suburban houses Messrs. Bloom and Fine already controlled the Danforth, Plaza, Mavety and the Christie theatres. To these are being added a number of houses formerly controlled by Famous Players, these being the Beaver, Teck, York and the Classic. The B. and F. Circuit is also interested in a couple of new neighborhood theatres which are now being erected.

November Export Trade in Excess of October's

THE development of markets not heretofore of outstanding importance was a feature of our November export trade in motion picture films, it is indicated by the monthly report on that business just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

Total exports for the month, 25,668,107 feet, with a value of $787,283, were materially in excess of the October totals of 20,417,005 feet, with a value of $660,218, due to an increase in the exports of positives from 15,407,639 feet, valued at $452,484, to 19,401,336 feet, valued at $579,076. Other exports were 3,469,996 feet of raw stock, worth $75,158, against 3,703,296 feet, worth $82,554, in October, and 696,905 feet of negatives, valued at $104,218, against 331,605 feet, valued at $112,607. Exports of positives to non-contiguous territories amounted to 2,099,870 feet, valued at $28,831, as compared with 974,465 feet, valued at $12,573.

Approximately 750,000 Feet of Film Presented to Leper Colony

THE Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America Association this week presented more than 750,000 feet of film to representatives of the Surgeon-Generals of the United States Army to be used for the entertainment of eight thousand lepers isolated in the Philippines and Virgin Islands. This is an extension of the service of members of the M.P.P.D.A. who for some years have been furnishing pictures to "shut-ins" in hospitals and homes in the United States. Last year the lepers received two hundred reels of film. The gifts to these outcasts are absolute and out-right; the film is used and then destroyed.

Incorporated in the footage are 218 separate subjects of which 38 are comedies, 31 News Reels and the remainder feature pictures, both of the action and comedy type, in which many of the most popular stars appear.

Part of the shipment, sent this week aboard the steamship "Anniston City," comprised 179 reels from Famous Players, 147 from Fox Films, 75 from M-G-M and 21 reels from International News. The next shipment will include 221 reels from Universal, 75 reels from First National, 50 from Educational and 10 reels from Kinograms.

Hold First Exposition in Los Angeles

Trade Show, With Exhibits from Every Branch of Industry, at Ambassador Auditorium

THE first motion picture trade exposition ever held in the West will open at the Ambassador Auditorium, Los Angeles, on March 7th and continue up to and including March 12th. The primary object of this exposition is to introduce the many innovations both on the technical as well as the production side of the business. It is planned to make this an annual event in Los Angeles.

For this first exhibition the Ambassador Auditorium will be especially decorated and miniature motion picture studios, as well as many other novelties, will be on view to attract the interest of the general public as well as those engaged in the film business. The Hollywood Screen Test Studios will make free screen tests of all visitors calling at its booth and an entertainment program of vaudeville and music will be featured both afternoon and evening.

The project is sponsored by many of the leading companies in the industry both among the producers and distributors and the equipment houses. More than a score of prominent firms, including several well-known Eastern manufacturers, already have signed for exhibition space, it is said, and it is expected that practically every line in the business will be represented. Among those who have already made reservation are Eastman Kodak, Winfield-Kerner Company, Creco, Inc., Western Costume Company, Cinema Studios Supply, Cinema School, Bell & Howell, National Theatre Supply Company, Ashcraft Company and Calkins Decorating Company (which is decorating the Ambassador).

Screen stars will officiate at many of the booths where souvenirs will be distributed daily, it is said. Temporary headquarters for the exposition have been established in the Hollywood News Building, where a staff of workers is perfecting arrangements.

Adjustment Com. Named

Guy W. Currier of F.B.O. and Wm. F. Canavan of Stage Employees and Cameramen are Chairmen

GUY W. CURRIER, one of the owners of Film Booking Offices, and William F. Canavan, head of the International Alliance of Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators, have been named chairmen of the committees respectively representing the producers and Coast Studio Unions formed recently through the instrumentality of Will Hays, to adjust any differences that might arise between the two factions.

It was the decision to form these committees that forestalled the threatened strike last December when the unions demanded that a closed shop system be adopted. The work of the committee is described as the widest in scope of any similar body ever named to preserve industrial peace in the picture business.

Frank Carruthers of Los Angeles, former president of the musician's union, and A. J. Barres of Washington, labor member of the Ship Building Labor Adjustment Board during the war, have been appointed secretaries of the committee. Barres, representing the producers, will establish residence in Los Angeles, where, with Carruthers, he will hear grievances and adjust, or report to the committee any differences which may arise.

M. P. T. O. of Texas to Discontinue Agitation on Circuits

AT a meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Texas recently it was decided to discontinue the campaign against chain theatres which was to have taken the form of legal action against alleged unfair tactics. It is said that agitation on the part of some members at conventions neither have helped the situation nor obtained any beneficial results. The directors have voted to bar discussion of the subject at future meetings.

In November Col. H. A. Cole, president, was instructed to present to the attorney-general complaints against chain theatres including the Publix, Saenger, Dent and Robb & Rowley circuits. Ouster proceedings were to have been started. A number of members cited their grievances at the meetings, with Si Charninski taking the lead. He was supported by William Eppstein, Aztec, San Antonio; Joseph S. Phillips, Rialto, Fort Worth and several others.

Filing of information with the attorney-general was expected to be followed by a demand for investigation by the Federal Trade Commission of chain activities.

Expect F. P.-L. Victory in Government Case

Issue Narrowed to Legality of Block-Booking; Decision Due in Near Future

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A decision as to the legality of block-booking, as practiced by Famous Players-Lasky will be forthcoming in the near future, the Federal Trade Commission having taken the case under advisement following the conclusion of final argument on January 27th.

The two-day final argument, based upon briefs which heretofore have been filed by both sides, was confined very largely to the question of block-booking, all of the other alegations originally made in the five-year-old indictment on which the case is based having gradually been discarded as untenable. It is believed that in its decision the commission will not even consider the charge of monopoly, it having been admitted by the Government's counsel that ownership of theatres of itself would not be illegal and that competition, in producing and distributing, as well as in exhibiting, appears to be flourishing.

A considerable influence has been thrown into the case by the appointment to the commission of Abram F. Myers, formerly of the Department of Justice, where he was connected with the motion picture patents case, who appeared for the first time as a member. Mr. Myers asked many questions of counsel for both sides, and indicated that he failed to see any difference between the selling of films in wholesale quantities, as represented by block-booking, and the selling in like quantities of any other commodity.

Nothing in the way of new matter was injected into the case at the final hearing. Everything that could be said has been said in the 25,000 pages of testimony, the many thousands of pages of briefs and the millions of argumentative words which have flowed like water during the progress of the case. The original complaint was issued something over five years ago, only one of the commissioners who signed it—John F. Nugent—still being a member of the body.

Queries propounded by the commissioners during the final argument indicated that they were leaning more strongly to the opinion that Famous Players had fought competition with its own weapons, this being brought out when it was developed that block-booking has always been a trade practice and that unless Famous Players had been able to offer a complete program it could never have bucked the competition. Members of the commission had no hesitancy in saying that they thought Famous Players had a right to adopt the methods of its competitors, if necessary.

One by one the many charges with which the Government started out were dropped, until only block-booking remained in issue. Even if the charge of illegality of block-booking is upheld by the commission, it will lie with the courts to deliver the final findings on that question, for it is a foregone conclusion that Famous Players, after successfully beating down all the other charges, will not consent to abide by the commission's decision on that point. As a matter of fact, it is predicted in Washington, that the film company will be given a clean bill of health when the commission makes known its findings.

Alhambra, Milwaukee, Host on Laemmle's Birthday

Celebrating Carl Laemmle's sixtieth anniversary by inviting all whose birthday was the same as the Universal chief's to be the guests of the Alhambra Theatre, Milwaukee, on that day brought Fred S. Meyer, managing director, publicity in the city's four big dailies for his house. The Alhambra is one of the Universal exploitation theatres.

John R. Barton, Fla. Film Man, Dies in Auto Smashup

John R. Barton, manager of Universal's Florida branch at Jacksonville, was killed recently in an automobile accident while en route to Tampa with two brother film men. According to the two other occupants of the car, R. L. Barnes, state representative of the Liberty Film Company, and Harry C. Simpson, state representive of the Universal, the accident occurred on the Hopewell road, about 11 miles east of Tampa when a Ford car coming towards them with bright lights on blinded Mr. Simpson, who was driving, and he failed to see a truck that was parked along the side of the road, and so crashed into it.

Barton suffered a compound fracture of the skull and never regained consciousness after the accident. Barnes suffered several broken ribs and bruises. Simpson escaped with just a few cuts.

Ten Companies Incorporate in N.Y. During Week

New Compensation Bill Introduced at Albany

A bill has been introduced in the New York State Legislature at Albany inserting a new group in the workmen's compensation law to the end that persons employed in the production of motion pictures, who do not earn over $25 a day or more than $100 a week, may be entitled to the provisions of the law. A similar bill was introduced on February 16, 1926, but died in committee. The introducers of the present measure are Senator Greenberg and Assemblyman Alterman.

Calms Fears of Audience as Fire Nearby Burns

IN spite of a cry of "fire" shouted in the Victoria Theatre on Broadway, Lawrence, Mass., and the fact that more than 300 patrons of the theatre found themselves prisoners within the building while a serious fire raged next door, Manager George Woods, by his cool-headedness, prevented any panic among his guests. Although the heat in the house was extreme, patrons suffered no other discomfort and the show was continued until the fire next door was extinguished.

The fire started in a stock of textiles in a large clothing store and gained such proportions that assistance was called from Methuen, Andover and North Andover, Mass., and for more than an hour gave the firemen the hardest battle in years. The loss is estimated at $55,000.

Yeggs Kill Roscoe Wilson, Treas. Majestic, Ft. Worth

Lying in wait for him with the intention of seizing $5,000, two days' receipts of the Majestic Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas, two thugs shot and killed Roscoe Wilson, twenty-three, treasurer of the theatre, substituting a black bag, identical with the Majestic's, to make believe that a robbery had not taken place. The murder and hold-up occurred in front of the theatre on an opposite side street and when the dead man had been taking the cash to the bank. Before he could resist he was killed instantly, the murderers escaping in a high-powered roadster, later proved to have been stolen, which was found on the other side of the town. A reward of $1,000 has been offered for the capture of the thieves.

Fire Destroys Phoenix Opera House, Machias, Maine

W. G. Means, Jr.'s Phoenix Opera House, at Machias, Maine, was totally destroyed on January 23 by a fire which ravaged the Crane block adjoining the theatre and which for a time threatened the entire business section of Mathias with destruction. Help had to be sent for from all neighboring communities. The loss suffered was between $175,000 and $200,000.

Mr. Means, who also owns the Crane block as well as the theatre, says that he will start construction on a modern theatre and business block on the site as soon as insurance can be adjusted and the ruins removed. He has meanwhile leased the town's largest hall and will continue showing pictures until his new theatre is ready.

Schine Headquarters May Be Moved to Syracuse, N.Y.

Now that the Schine Brothers, of Gloversville, N.Y., have acquired a leading motion picture theatre in Syracuse, there is a strong possibility that the headquarters of the chain may be moved to that city. About thirty-five persons are now employed at the headquarters in Gloversville. Syracuse is more centrally located, particularly in view of the recent acquisitions by the Schine Brothers of theatres in Western New York. The two brothers now have seventy-seven theatres.

New Vitaphone Device, Approximately $5,000, for Small Theatres

A NEW Vitaphone device designed for use in the smaller theatres, is now being perfected and will be ready for the market in the very near future according to H. M. Rich of the Vitaphone Corporation. The latest synchronizing machine will sell at approximately $5,000, which includes full equipment and installation. Just what changes have been made in the Vitaphone in order to bring it within the reach of the smaller theatre owners was not divulged.

The Vitaphone Corporation signed over $500,000 worth of new contracts for the original machine last week according to Mr. Rich. Seven months ago the first Vitaphone was installed and, at the present time 25 theatres are running a Vitaphone program; new installations are being made at the rate of about 20 a month with a staff of 60 engineers setting up and operating the equipment.

Publix New Eng. Activity

Starts Acquisition of Community Type Houses in More Important of Smaller Cities

PUBLIX has started acquiring theatres of the community type in some of the more important smaller cities of New England, according to gossip current throughout New England. It is said that negotiations are under way in several Massachusetts cities and that the theatres will be added to the Paramount-William P. Gray Circuit which already operates 115 theatres, mostly in Maine.

As a starter in this campaign, Paramount-Gray interests have acquired the Strand Theatre in Malden, Mass., seating 1500, which has been in operation for six or seven years and is looked upon as one of the most successful of the picture-vaudeville houses in suburban Boston. The theatre has been owned by the Ideal Theatre Company of which Edward D. Aston and Patrick H. Carr are the largest owners and John P. Freeman has been managing director.

A new corporation has been formed, composed of J. J. Ford of Allston, R. D. Marston of Newton, and C. J. Shaw of Quincy, Mass., which takes over the theatre for the Paramount-Gray interests. The new company has 400 no par shares. J. J. Dempsey becomes manager.

Paramount interests have also acquired a piece of mill property located in the heart of the business district of Fall River where it is proposed to build a modern theatre immediately. It is probable that this will be managed by the Gray circuit.

Last summer the Louis K. Liggett interests acquired the Pocasset Mill properties in Fall River and have since liquidated at a considerable profit and are now disposing of the mill properties, which are among the most valuable large realty tracts in the city. It has been known for some time that two large theatre circuits were negotiating for some of these properties.

While announcement is made that the Paramount interests have secured a mill site in Fall River for a new theatre, no further formal announcement is made but it is believed that they have secured the best of the Pocasset Mill properties from the Liggett interests.

Following on the heels of the Malden Strand purchase comes the announcement that a new theatre is to be erected in Medford, the adjoining city, with a population of about 55,000. Owners of the property admit that one of the largest theatre circuits of the country is dickering for a lease of the proposed playhouse but they decline to reveal the company's name. Some believe that Paramount interests may be back of the deal.

Much interest is taken by exhibitors in the Malden Strand deal because of the fact that the Orpheum Theatre, a Ramsdell Brothers' house, has always featured Famous Players pictures. Ramsdell Brothers and Green an Eilenberg, who operate the Mystic, have pooled their interests in the new Granada Theatre, a 2,000-seat house recently opened in Malden, with the Ramsdell Brothers as managers. Just what effect Paramount's acquisition of the Strand will have on the other houses is being watched with interest by independent operators throughout New England.

Four More for Comerford; Buys Two Builds Others; Deal With Fox

THE Comerford Circuit this week took over the Capitol, at Waverly, a 1500-seat house and the Liberty, at Hazleton, seating 600; both cities in Northeastern Pennsylvania. In addition plans were announced for the start of construction on a 3500-seat house on the Square at Wilkes-Barre within 30 days and another theatre of similar capacity on Hampton Street near Main in the same city, which will be erected next Fall.

The Comerford interests and Fox Theatres Corporation are associated in ownership of the Great Lakes Theatre in Buffalo now under construction at Main and Chippewa streets, which is scheduled to open May 1st. The joint operation of the Great Lakes house is an individual venture and will not affect other theatres of the Fox or Comerford chains. The theatre is being operated under the name of the Chippewa Amusement Company.

Universal Now Has Forty-Three Houses in the Kansas City Territory

WITH the acquisition of the Josephson Circuit, embracing five theatres in the Kansas City territory, Universal now has a total of 43 houses in that section, making the chain one of the most important in that region.

The newly acquired houses are the Gilham Theatre, 1,000 seats; the Lincoln Theatre, 1,100 seats, and the Penn Valley Theatre, 750 seats, all in Kansas City, Mo., and the New Grand, 900 seats, in Mexico, Mo., and the new Main Street Theatre, 1,200 seats, in Lexington, Mo. The Mexico and Lexington purchases place Universal in two new towns in that territory. The Lexington house is the best house in that town and is modern in every respect. The three Kansas City houses passed to Universal January 22, and the other two on February 1st.

Md. Bars Only One Film

Censors Okay Ninety Percent of 6,342 Subjects Without Change; Recommend Change in Rules

THE annual report of the Maryland State Board of Motion Picture Censors for the period beginning October 1, 1925, and ending September 30, 1926, submitted to Governor Albert C. Ritchie, shows the percentage of cuts during the fiscal year covered by the report was smaller than in previous years.

The report stated that on the whole, the Board finds that the number of clean films has increased, and that the producers are trying to meet with the demands of the censors.

Out of a total of 6,342 subjects submitted, the report continues, 5,794 or nearly 90 percent were approved without change and that there were eliminations in only 584 productions. Four pictures were rejected, but three of these were passed later on in reconstructed form, leaving only one film absolutely barred by the Board.

During the entire year there was only one prosecution, which was brought about by the showing of an uncensored film. The offense was on the part of those outside of the motion picture industry and a fine of $50 was imposed.

Recommendation that a change be made in the law regulating the charges for duplicates or prints of films censored was made in the report. Under the change proposed, the original applicant would be allowed a period of three months in which to submit duplicate prints.

M-G-M Promotes Wm. Haines to Rank of Star

WILLIAM HAINES, the hero of "Brown of Harvard," "Slide, Kelly, Slide" and "Tell It to the Marines," has been elevated to stardom by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company. Information concerning his first starring vehicle will be issued in the near future.

William Haines

At a chance suggestion Haines underwent a camera test in 1921 for the screen, and won out over thousands of other aspirants. He secured a contract with the Goldwyn company and, of course, gave up brokerage, the business on which he had been engaged. Following his small bit in "Three Wise Fools," Haines appeared in "Sally, Irene and Mary," "Mike," "A Slave of Fashion," "The Tower of Lies," "Lovey Mary" and "A Little Journey."

Patrons Walk Out When Films Burn In Ky. Theatre

The audience of the Cherokee Theatre, Bardston Road and Bonnycastle Avenue, Louisville, Ky., displayed presence of mind by walking and not running panic stricken from the house when films in the Cherokee's projection room became ignited.

The lights of the theatre were immediately turned on and there was no panic in the hurried exodus of the patrons from the house, according to officials of the Cherokee Amusement Company, which operates the theatre. The fire, starting at 7:50 o'clock Monday night, was extinguished without the aid of the fire department.

In his efforts to extinguish the blaze, A. S. Houskey, 1316 Winter Avenue, operator of the projector, suffered slight burns. Officials of the Cherokee Amusement Company estimate the loss at $150.

Lancaster, York Harbor, Me., Damaged by Flames

Lancaster Theatre at York Harbor, Me., a summer playhouse, was badly damaged by fire January 24th together with adjoining property. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

Montana Exhibitor Again Up For Democratic Nomination

Among the candidates who will come out for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Butte, Mont., is W. J. Sullivan, the present manager of the Rialto Theatre there. He has been in office for the past two terms.

In And Out of Town

AL LICHTMAN, general manager of distribution United States and Canada for United Artists, returned to the company's home office early this week after having spent three months on the Coast conferring with Joseph M. Schenck about the 1927 product. While en route to New York Mr. Lichtman visited United Artists exchanges in Houston, San Antonio, Dallas and New Orleans.

CARROLL S. TROWBRIDGE, general representative for the Christies, has been on the road practically since last October in the interests of "The Nervous Wreck." He has made trips to the Southwest and has covered the Central West, the Atlantic Coast exchange cities, the Canadian branch offices and has now left on a trip to New England.

B. F. ZEIDMAN, general manager of the John Barrymore unit of the Joseph M. Schenck organization, arrived in New York, Wednesday, January 26th, with the first print of Barrymore's "The Beloved Rogue," scheduled for release in March. He will devote a week searching for a suitable story for the actor's second production for United Artists.

WILLIAM H. MORGAN, P.D.C. sales manager, selected the middle of last week's cold snap as the time in which to start his trip to Canada. He returned last Saturday and has since spent his time trying to get thawed out.

CRESSON E. SMITH, United Artists' general sales manager, Middle West division, left Sunday, January 30th, on a fortnight's trip to the Middle West in the interest of the seven new films United Artists is selling. He will visit Detroit, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Indianapolis and Kansas City, returning to New York in the middle of February.

CLAUDE H. MACGOWAN, assistant treasurer of Columbia Pictures, has left for a business trip of several weeks which will take him to Columbia exchanges in Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, West Virginia and Detroit, and cities in the Middle West. Mr. Macgowan will look over the contracted business and promote the same among exhibitors on the remainder of this season's product.

HENRI ELLMAN, Columbia representative in the Chicago and Indianapolis localities, is in New York this week, for the purpose of conferring with Joe Brandt and Jack Cohn on several important matters concerning the distribution of Columbia films. Before leaving Chicago, Mr. Ellman completed arrangements for the showing of Columbia's war drama, "Remember," at the Capitol, a first-run house in that city.

IRVING L. WALENSTEIN, of Sterling Pictures, left Tuesday of this week, from his home in Boston, for Los Angeles where he will confer with production executives on future Sterling pictures. Mr. Walenstein took his family with him and they will make their future home in the movie metropolis. He will return to New York at intervals for conferences with President Henry Ginsberg.

ED. J. SMITH, Tiffany sales manager, left last Thursday on his third trip to the Tiffany exchanges in the East and Middle-West since his affiliation with Tiffany since last December. Plans are being formulated by Tiffany for a concentrated sales campaign in which all Tiffany managers will compete. The details will be announced immediately upon the return of Mr. Smith from his first trip.

T.O.C.C. Ball and Supper at Hotel Plaza, Feb. 21

Through Benjamin Knobel, chairman, the entertainment committee of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce has made known that the plans for the annual ball and supper of the T.O.C.C., at the Hotel Plaza, Monday evening, February 21, have been practically completed. Tickets, which are $10 each in price and limited to 400 in number, may be obtained at the chamber's quarters, Room 908, Times Building, New York, or the office of E. R. Behrend, 729 Seventh Avenue, New York. Those who desire box seats may make arrangements with the above parties.

It is expected that the entertainment features of the ball will be of a distinctive character.

Tacoma T. O. & Managers Meet and Elect Officers

H. M. S. Kendrick, manager of Pantages Theatres, Tacoma, Wash., was elected president of the Theatre Owners and Managers Association of Tacoma at the association's annual election of officers held in the Northwestern city last week. Other officers chosen were C. E. Clendenny, Victory Theatre, vice-president; Robert McKinnell, Rose Theatre, secretary, and Walter McNeish, Bijou Theatre, treasurer.

Details of the annual Tacoma theatre frolic were discussed and a committee consisting of D. S. Kimberly, Louis Perunko, R. R. Pratch, Frank Graphenbach and L. A. Drinkwine was appointed to arrange the details of the affair, to be staged on March 2nd.

James M. Hone, executive secretary of the Washington M.P.T.O., attended the meeting and reported on M.P.T.O. affairs for the ensuing season.

New Bill Introduced for Repeal of Fight Films Ban

Repeal of the act of 1925 prohibiting the interstate transportation of prize fight films is proposed in a bill introduced in the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C., last week by Congressman Black, of New York. This is the second such bill to be introduced this session, a similar measure having been introduced last month by Representative Freeman, of Connecticut.

There is little likelihood that any action will be taken upon this legislation this session. Hearings would be required before the committee could report the bill, and there is so little time remaining and so much to be done that it is becoming the practice to take up only such matters as it is certain can be disposed of by March 4.

Milton Sills Will Lecture at Harvard Business College

Milton Sills has been added to the list of notables in the motion picture industry who will lecture before students of the Harvard Business College during the recently announced motion picture course which is to begin March 15th.

Beetson Gives Statistics in First Report of Central Casting Corp.

FRED W. BEETSON, president of the Central Casting Corporation in Hollywood, gives some interesting statistics in connection with the first annual report of the company's activities. Almost twice as many extras secured work through this bureau as in ten offices throughout California, says the report, and two million dollars is placed in circulation with the merchants, making the bureau the largest of its kind in the world. The average daily placements are 710. The average daily wage is $8.46.

There are but twelve children employed in pictures on school days the report shows. Mr. Beetson again issues a warning to screen aspirants throughout the country not to come to Hollywood, as the regulation regarding no further registrations of extras is still in effect and will continue to be so for an indefinite period, due to the fact that the supply of extras greatly exceeds the demand.

Photophone Demonstrated in Schenectady, N.Y.

THE "Photophone," developed by a group of General Electric Company engineers, who have been working on the same for the past six years under the direction of C. W. Stone, was given its first public demonstration last Saturday at the State Theatre in Schenectady, N.Y., before a small group of engineers and others. The demonstration included the showing of two films, one taken at the General Electric laboratories in Schenectady, when both the sound and the pictures were recorded simultaneously, and the other a film, the picturization of which was made at Hollywood, and the incidental music of which was recorded at the Capitol Theatre in New York City during the showing of the picture.

Both picture and sound are recorded on the same film. The sound record requires one-tenth of an inch on the face of the film and is made on the edge, leaving the balance for the picture.

The invention consists of a small device which it is possible to attach to any standard projecting machine. It differs from other machines of this nature in that it uses the light beam of the palaphotophone, a development of a few years ago.

The first film shown Saturday was the one that had been taken in Schenectady. It included vocal and instrumental selections as well as announcements by Kolin Hager, manager of the WGY radio broadcasting studio.

The second picture shown was "The Flesh and the Devil." The incidental music was recorded in New York and the undeveloped film bearing the music record was then brought to Schenectady, where the pictures were added. The apparatus for Saturday's demonstrations had been in course of installation at the theatre for some time past.

Norma Shearer Will Co-star with Novarro

THE rumors that have been flying thick and fast of late as to which player would have the role of Kathie in "Old Heidelberg," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's elaborate production which Ernst Lubitsch is directing, have been set at rest with the announcement that Norma Shearer will enact this role and would be co-starred with Ramon Novarro.

Norma Shearer

Pictures in which Miss Shearer has played or starred include "The Snob," "Excuse Me," "He Who Gets Slapped," "Lady of the Night," "A Slave of Fashion," "The Tower of Lies," "His Secretary," "The Devil's Circus," "The Waning Sex," "Upstage," and "The Demi-Bride." Miss Shearer was recently voted the most popular actress in a contest conducted by the Chicago "Tribune."

Zanuck Promoted Assoc. Executive to J. L. Warner

Darryl Francis Zanuck, promoted a short time ago to the post of assistant to Jack L. Warner, supervisor of production at the Warner Bros.' West Coast studio, has again been advanced, this time as associate executive to Mr. Warner, the place left vacant by Raymond Schrock. Mr. Zanuck is said to be the youngest motion picture executive in the industry.

Bowes & Schenck Members of Church Radio Committee

Co-operating with the National Broadcasting Company and its chain of stations, the New York Federation of Churches contemplates a religious broadcasting program, which they claim will be larger in scope than anything yet attempted. Included among the members of the National General Committee, also the executive body of the Church Radio League, are Major Edward Bowes of the New York Capitol, vice-chairman, and Nicholas M. Schenck, vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The first of the new radio meetings will begin Sunday in the Empire Room of the Waldorf-Astoria with a "Young People's Conference" broadcast through the WEAF chain, and "People's Radio Vespers," including a musical program and an inspirational sermon sent out by WJZ.

The National General Committee will digest the wants of the listening public as expressed in their letters and decide on the character and make-up of the programs.

W. W. Hines Severs Connection with U. A.

William W. Hines, general sales manager of United Artists since the organization of the company in 1919, made public last week his resignation and the severance of his business relations with the releasing organization. He said that he would make an announcement shortly of his new connections.

Mr. Hines has been in the picture business for sixteen years, starting with the old Kinemacolor Company of America, and later with Triangle and Paramount. For a year he engaged in business in Wall Street, but resumed his work with United Artists again.

Casting for "The Heart Thief" Nearly Completed

Walter Woods, supervisor, and Nils Olaf Chrisander, director, have practically completed casting for "The Heart Thief," in which Lya de Putti will appear opposite Joseph Schildkraut, with Robert Edeson, Charles Gerrard, Eulalie Jensen and Frank Reicher interpreting surrounding characters. More names are promised for the cast within the coming fortnight.

F.P.-L.'s "The Rough Riders" at Cohan, Feb. 21

"THE ROUGH RIDERS," Paramount's road show attraction which visualizes the exploits of Theodore Roosevelt's renowned regiment of that name, will have its gala premiere at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York City, on Monday evening, February 21. More than fifteen months of actual preparation were spent on this production in which appear Frank Hooper, impersonating Roosevelt, Noah Beery, George Bancroft, Mary Astor, Charles Emmet Mack and Charles Farrell.

With the Roosevelt epic, Paramount will have three road shows on Broadway at legitimate theatres. The others are "Old Ironsides" and "Beau Geste."

Kauffman F.N. Gen. Mgr. Cen. and East. Europe

ON February 26, Phil Kauffman, general manager of Regal Films, Limited, Toronto, will sail aboard the Leviathan to take up his newly appointed duties—those of general manager of First National for the territory of Eastern and Central Europe. Mr. Kauffman leaves Toronto on February 21 and will visit London and Paris enroute to Berlin where he will make his headquarters. His appointment follows closely upon that of William Bach, also of Toronto and former Canadian general manager of First National, who is now stationed at London as general manager of First National in Great Britain.

"The Great Lakes" Winning Name in Buffalo Contest

Of the 4,700 or more persons who contributed over 20,000 names in the prize contest conducted in Buffalo, N.Y., to find a suitable name for the new motion picture theatre now under construction at Main and Chippewa streets and which the Fox Theatres Corporation and the E. M. Comerford interests will operate, nine persons will share in the award of $500 offered for the winning name "The Great Lakes." Besides those who submitted the exact name the award also includes those parties whose winning words had slightly different combinations. William Fox, Winfield R. Sheehan, M. E. Comerford and Frank C. Walker, composing the committee, feel that they came sufficiently close to be declared "in the money."

One contestant submitted 700 names in one batch and 300 in another "to upset," as he said, "the old bogy which exists in the cry of no material."

Work on "The Great Lakes" is progressing rapidly at the present time and the management hopes to be able to set the opening date for some time in April or early May. Gerald K. Rudolph, manager of publicity for Fox Films and representative of the Chippewa Amusement Corporation, returned to New York last Tuesday after conducting the contest.

Fire in Projection Room of Loew's Delancey, N. Y.

Loew's Delancey, a vaudeville and motion picture house at Delancey and Suffolk Streets, New York City, was well filled at 9 o'clock Wednesday night when a reel of film caught fire in the projection machine, at the rear of the balcony.

Smoke drifted through the window of the projection room. A boy in the balcony yelled "Fire!"

Downstairs in the orchestra a woman screamed, ran from her seat and fainted. Employees of the theatre worked quietly to calm the audience, however, and so there was no panic. Projection room employees extinguished the blaze in a few minutes.

Foreign-Language Insert for Imported's Press-Books

The press-book prepared for "Slums of Berlin," released by Imported Pictures Corporation, embodies a new idea in press-sheet service. To assist the exhibitor in working with the German-language press of his community the press-book for "Slums of Berlin" contains an advertising and publicity insert printed in German, thus enabling the exhibitor not aquainted with the German tongue to submit his advertising and publicity to the foreign-language press in ready-to-print form. This same idea will be incorporated in all press-books prepared for releases on Imported Pictures' program, the foreign-language advertising and publicity inserts being printed in the tongue of the special market the individual picture appeals to.

A theatre costing more than $100,000, to be used for motion pictures and road shows, is to be built immediately in North Little Rock, a suburb of Little Rock, Ark. M. A. Lightman, of Nashville, president of the Arkansas Amusement Enterprises, made the announcement last week. The house will seat 1,200 and will be divided between a main floor and a balcony exclusively for negro patrons.

The Arkansas Amusement Enterprises were formed several months ago by various theatre owners in El Dorado, Camden, Fayetteville and North Little Rock, together with two or three theatres in Tennessee, including one in Nashville, under the supervision of Lightman.

Louis Wolheim Signed for U. A.'s "Two Arabian Nights"

Louis Wolheim, the Captain Flagg of the stage production of "What Price Glory," and creator of Eugene O'Neill's "The Hairy Ape," has been signed for one of the principal roles in "Two Arabian Nights," the Caddo production which Lewis Milestone is directing. United Artists is releasing the film. William Boyd, also of the "What Price Glory" stage production, is the leading player.

Denny Is Recuperating Nicely, Universal Says

REGINALD DENNY, the Universal star who underwent an emergency operation a little over a week ago at the Sylvan Lodge Hospital in Los Angeles, is well on the road to recovery, according to his personal physician, Dr. Louis Regan. He will be permitted to leave the hospital this week-end and will be able to resume work in less than three weeks. The doctor attributes this remarkable improvement in the condition of his patient to Denny's sturdy physique and unusual vitality.

Denny was at work on his next Universal special, "Fast and Furious," when the sickness overtook him. At no time during his illness has he suffered a relapse.

"Big Bill" Tilden To Have Role in New Vidor Film

William T. Tilden, 2nd, tennis champion, will render a characterization in King Vidor's new production, as yet untitled, which the director is now making with Eleanor Boardman and James Murray in the featured leads. "Big Bill" has announced that if this, his first serious attempt in film work, is successful, he will take up motion picture acting as a career.

Tilden will not retire from active court competition at present. He plans to remain at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio for about three months when he will then go abroad to represent America in the hard court matches at St. Cloud, France. In May he will be one of the contestants in the Wimbleton tournament for the grass court championship before returning to Hollywood.

Donald Reed Male Lead in "Naughty But Nice"

Donald Reed, 24-year-old leading man under contract with First National, will play the male role in support of Colleen Moore in her next picture, "Naughty But Nice." Following a series of screen tests, Reed was given the part. He was on the stage for more than a year, and has been in pictures two years and a half. He is six feet tall, of Spanish parentage, accounting for his dark brown hair and eyes. He is the only supporting player assigned to date. Production is expected to get under way during the early part of February. Miss Moore's latest picture, "Orchids and Ermine," is now being titled by Ralph Spence.

H. Kaufman, General Sales Manager Canadian "U"

Harry Kaufman, Toronto, a veteran of the film exchange business in Canada and former head of Premier Films, Limited, Toronto, has been appointed general sales manager of Canadian Universal Films, with jurisdiction over the six offices of Universal in the Dominion. Clair Hague, Toronto, continues as general manager for Canada, a position which he has held for more than 10 years.

Dr. Rudolph Lothar Member of First Nat'l Writing Staff

Dr. Rudolph Lothar, talented European author and dramatist, has been engaged by First National to write several original stories for production in the near future. Dr. Lothar, a resident of Vienna for thirty years, has visited nearly all of Europe. His dramatic works include twenty-five stage plays, all of which, it may be said, have been produced in practically all languages.

Belle Bennett in "The Man Who Forgot God"

BELLE BENNETT will play in Emil Jannings' support in his first American-made production, "The Man Who Forgot God," which Victor Fleming, director of "The Rough Riders," is to direct for Paramount.

Warner Bros. Prepare to Screen "Black Ivory"

THE Warner Bros. are preparing for the production of "Black Ivory," their next extended run production, which will follow "Noah's Ark" at the Warner studio. Monte Blue has been decided upon for the leading role of Jean Lafitte, a figure in American history, who is the center of Polan Banks' romantic story of New Orleans' old Creole days. The director and the leading lady have not yet been chosen as the Warners say that it will take some time to whip the preliminaries into shape as the picture is to be in every sense a super-production. "Black Ivory" is now in its sixth edition from Harper Bros. press. A live advertising and publicity campaign will precede the release of the picture.

United Artists Will Not Road-Show Its Productions

Concurring with United Artists' policy of giving exhibitors United Artists pictures promptly and without any delay for road-showing purposes, the two new United Artists' films, "The Beloved Rogue" and "Resurrection," will be issued to showmen while they are fresh in the public mind. To use the words of Joseph M. Schenck, "our new volume distribution plan provides that exhibitors be given United Artists pictures promptly. United Artists will concentrate on pre-release and first run houses for premieres." The sales directors of United Artists agreed with Mr. Schenck's statement after discussing the advisability of road showing the company's product.

"The Beloved Rogue" took six months to produce and represents an outlay of nearly one million dollars. Its New York premiere will take place at the Mark Strand in March. "Resurrection" also required a half year to make and was made on a huge scale.

Chas. Griffith Technical Chief "Two Arabian Knights" Unit

Charles Griffith, technical director of "What Price Glory," has been signed to act in the same capacity for "Two Arabian Knights," which entered into production this week under the direction of Lewis Milestone at the United Artists' studio. The only thing holding up camera work is the selection of a leading lady, as the sets are in readiness and practically all of the staff has been chosen. A dozen actresses of prominence have been given screen tests in the search to find the one who will play opposite William Boyd. Louis Wolheim has arrived in Hollywood from New York to create the role of a hard-boiled soldier.

First National Acquires Foot-Ball Story, "The Substitute"

First National, through John McCormick, general manager of production at the Burbank studio, announces the purchase of "The Substitute," a football story which goes into production in the near future.

Meehan Renews Directorial Contract With F.B.O.

J. Leo Meehan, who has been directing for F.B.O. for the past few years, has renewed his contract which is about to expire. The new contract with F.B.O. calls for a period of three years, starting February 1st.

Under his present contract Meehan has made five pictures for F.B.O. Four of them were stories by his late mother-in-law, Gene Stratton-Porter. The fifth story was "Mother," adapted from the Kathleen Norris tale of the same name. Mr. Meehan's wife, formerly Miss Jeanette Stratton-Porter, is well known as an adaptor of stories for screening purposes. Mr. Meehan has to his credit the distinction of being the only director who owns and actively manages a newspaper. Before becoming a motion picture director, Mr. Meehan founded the Pasadena "Morning Sun," a California daily.

"The Wreck," Columbia's First Release for Feb.

On February 5 "The Wreck," co-featuring Shirley Mason and Malcolm McGregor, will be released by Columbia Pictures. The story of this crook melodrama was written by Dorothy Howell. For the supporting cast Director William Craft has chosen Frances Raymond, Francis MacDonald, James Bradbury, Jr., and Barbara Tennant. The production marks the second appearance of Miss Mason on the Columbia schedule, her first portrayal having been the title role of "Sweet Rosie O'Grady."

"Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath" Before "Gorilla"

The producing firm of Asher, Small and Rogers is after suitable screen material for the production schedule outlined by E. M. Asher and Edward Small. The former is now in New York primarily in the interests of First National's "McFadden's Flats," but he is also on the lookout for screen stories and plays. Small is now on the West Coast where he is preparing the Avery Hopwood farce, "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath" which is to be followed by the screen version of "The Gorilla."

Lee Garnes, Ingram's Cameraman, Arrives in France

Lee Garnes, first cameraman for Rex Ingram's directorial vehicle, "The Garden of Allah," has arrived at the director's studio at Nice, France. Shooting began two weeks ago on the picture, and this month the company goes to Africa to shoot exteriors in the Sahara Desert. Heading the cast are Alice Terry and Ivan Petrovich.

"The Love of Sunya" to Open The Roxy

S. L. ROTHAFEL (Roxy) announced last Tuesday night that he had chosen "The Love of Sunya," Gloria Swanson's first independent production for United Artists, for the opening program of his new Roxy Theatre. Mr. Rothafel said that he would open the Roxy the first week in March.

F. P. Eastern Studio Busy

Five Stories in Preparation For Filming After Completion of Four Now in Production

FOUR productions, now in work at the Paramount Eastern studio, are expected to be finished either this month or the early part of March and immediately following the completion of these pictures five more will be launched. This means a capacity schedule for the production forces in the East until late in spring.

During February and the early part of March Herbert Brenon will finish "The Telephone Girl;" Richard Dix will complete "Knockout Reilly" under the direction of Malcolm St. Clair; Gilda Gray will finish "Cabaret" under Robert Vignola's guidance, and Ed Wynn will bring to a conclusion "Rubber Heels," his first starring picture, with Victor Heerman in charge.

Raymond Griffith is expected in New York about the middle of February to discuss the start of a comedy tentatively titled "The Winning Spirit," which is to be directed by Frank Tuttle. This will be Mr. Griffith's first picture in the East since his elevation to stardom.

Richard Dix expects to complete his present production about February 12th and he will then start North for location work on his next feature, which will be directed by Elmer Clifton. The title has not yet been chosen. Immediately following this picture it is expected that Dix will start another, as he has reached an agreement with Associate Producer Le Baron to do an original story by Ray Harris titled "The Sky Writer," which, as may be inferred from the title, is an aeroplane story.

Likewise, it is probable that W. C. Fields will start his fourth starring Paramount picture about the first of March; this will be an original story by Gregory La Cava, who is also to direct.

Thomas Meighan's next picture is tentatively titled "We Are All Gamblers"; Mr. Meighan and Owen Davis are now in Florida working on the story. It is expected that Malcolm St. Clair will direct, and production is to start March 7th. On the same day Herbert Brenon will start production of another Owen Davis story, at present titled "The Devil Is Alive."

First National Production at Burbank on Increase

COINCIDENT with the First National Spring sales convention, which will be held at Burbank, production activities are expected to soar to the greatest heights, says Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager, now at the company's studio on the Pacific Coast. As an indication of this expected increase in production, Manager Rowland has just ordered the construction of two mammoth stages to cost approximately $200,000.

Ten First National films are now in the cutting-room, seven more are in work and nearly a score of productions are in preparatory stages for early filming. Those receiving final adjustments in the cutting-room are "Orchids and Ermine, "Venus of Venice," "Three Hours," "The Sea Tiger," "Long Pants," "All Aboard," "Somewhere in Sonora," "The Notorious Lady," "Convoy" and "High Hat."

In work are "The Tender Hour," "Camille," "Who Goes Where?" "See You in Jail," "The Sunset Derby," "The Patent Leather Kid" and "The Country Beyond."

Productions in the process of preparation are "Naughty But Nice," "Oh! What a Life," "American Beauty," "Rose of Monterey," "Diamonds in the Rough," "The Crystal Cup," "Bed and Board," "Glitter," "The Road to Romance," "The Stolen Bride," "Hard Boiled Harrigan," "His Son," "The Poor Nut," "The Butter and Egg Man," "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath," "Babe Comes Home," "The Gorilla" and "Broadway Nights." Also included in this list is a Richard Barthelmess picture, to which no title has as yet been appended.

"A Pair of Silk Stockings" Acquired for Laura La Plante

"A Pair of Silk Stockings," the stage success by Cyril Harcourt, will probably be the next Universal Jewel starring Laura La Plante. William A. Sieder, her husband, is expected to direct her. The new La Plante vehicle will probably reach the screen under the title of "Stolen Silks." Her latest comedy drama is "The Love Thrill," directed by Millard Webb, from a story by the director and Joe Mitchell. In the cast are Tom Moore, Bryant Washburn, Arthur Hoyt, Nat Carr and Jocelyn Lee. At present Miss La Plante is working on "Beware of Widows," from the stage play by Owen Davis.

"All Aboard" Completed by Johnnie Hines Unit

Camera work on "All Aboard," the newest Johnnie Hines starring comedy for First National release, has been completed and the production is now undergoing the process of editing, cutting and titling. It will shortly be ready for previews.

Edna Murphy heads the supporting cast in the story written by Matt Taylor for which Peter Milne and Horace Woodmansee prepared the scenario. An unusually large cast includes Anna May Wong, Sojin, Dot Farley, Babe London, Frank Hagney and Bull Montana among others. Charles Hines directed.

Sam Hardy Given Male Lead in "Broadway Nights"

The leading male role in Robert Kane's production for First National, "Broadway Nights," has been assigned Sam Hardy. This is the first lead that Hardy has played for the Kane organization, all of his other roles having been of a heavy nature. Lois Wilson is the chief player in "Broadway Nights," which was put into production Wednesday at the Cosmopolitan studio in New York.

Three U. A. Films for Nat'l Release in March

UNITED ARTISTS has set national release dates for three pictures just completed. "The Beloved Rogue" will be released nationally on March 5, "The Love of Sunya" on March 12 and "Resurrection" on March 19. All of these productions will be delivered to exhibitors directly in fulfillment of Joseph M. Schenck's promise of a year ago to issue pictures directly to exhibitors. They will not be roadshowed and after the regular pre-releases and first-runs, will be available for second and third-run engagements.

"The Beloved Rogue" is John Barrymore's first production for United Artists and it is said that it required twice as much time in production as any of the star's previous films. "The Love of Sunya," Gloria Swanson's first United Artists picture, is now being titled by Cosmo Hamilton. Albert Parker directed, Dudley Murphy was consultant on camera effects, and Robert Martin took charge of the camera. "Resurrection," Inspiration Pictures-Edwin Carewe's United Artists production, is now being titled by Count Ilya Tolstoy and Tom Miranda. Director Carewe will come to New York in about three weeks with the completed picture. Finis Fox wrote the scenario.

Two New Stories Purchased for Billie Dove

"American Beauty" and "The Heart of a Follies Girl," two new stories which will star Billie Dove, have been purchased by First National Pictures, officials of which regard the continuance of the rapid rise of Miss Dove to a stellar position as a matter of merit, and who will exert care in their selection of stories for her. "American Beauty" is a story by Wallace Irwin which was recently published in the "Saturday Evening Post." The other is by Adela Rogers St. John, and it appeared some time ago in the "Cosmopolitan Magazine."

Miss Dove is making preparations for her work in "The Tender Hour," George Fitzmaurice's initial production under his new First National contract. She recently finished a featured part in "An Affair of the Follies" with Lewis Stone and Lloyd Hughes.

Dent Takes Over New Post, U.A. General Managership

Augmenting considerably the executive staff recruited since the Pickford-Fairbanks plant became the United Artists studio, James Dent, the new general manager, this week took over his new duties. At various times during the past Dent has been connected with the Fox Films organization, the late Thomas Ince and Selznick. He began his career at the old Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn.

In his new position Dent is again associated with Myron Selznick, who was recently appointed production assistant to John W. Considine, Jr., general manager of the Joseph M. Schenck producing organization and head of Feature Productions, Inc., the largest of United Artists' contributors.

Bissell Special Representative for Tiffany-Color Art

Acting as the new special representative of Tiffany-Color Art Productions, H. C. Bissell left last Tuesday to cover the key cities throughout the country making his first stop in Philadelphia and Washington. His object is to make a special sales drive on the series of six Color Art subjects, photographed in Technicolor, and which have already been shown in leading first run houses in the United States, including the Paramount and Capitol in New York City. Among these short subjects are "The Barefoot Boy," "On the Trail of the Ranger," "The Isle of June," "Fisherman's Luck" and "Clothes Make the Woman."

Mr. Bissell has been in the motion picture industry for the past seven years. Before joining Tiffany he was manager of Universal's Albany office.

M-G-M Buys "The Miracle" for Lillian Gish

One of the most widely discussed theatrical properties in years, "The Miracle," has been purchased by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will be used as a starring vehicle for Lillian Gish, with the possibility that Lady Diana Manners will play the role which she has had in the stage production.

"The Miracle" was written by Carl Vollmueller and produced in Europe by Max Reinhardt, who later came to America and staged it at the Century Theatre in New York on a costly scale. It has since been roadshowed in some of the larger cities. Reinhardt, who is now on the Coast, may supervise the screen production.

Two Pathe Comedians in Next Rex Feature

Oliver Hardy and Jimmy Finlayson, two of the comedians appearing in the majority of the Hal Roach "big name" two reelers, distributed by Pathe, venture into the field of heavy drama in "The Avenging Stallion," the new Roach production featuring Rex, the king of wild horses. Hardy will portray one of the two heavies in the picture, his other coherent being Theodore Von Eltz, who eventually reforms and becomes a first class hero. Finlayson will enact the role of father to Barbara Kent, the heroine of the tale.

Paramount Casts for Mildred Davis' "Too Many Crooks"

Mildred Davis and Lloyd Hughes have been selected to head the cast for "Too Many Crooks" which Fred Newmeyer will make for Famous Players. The supporting players include George Bancroft, El Brendel, Betty Francisco, Gayne Whitman, Otto Matieson, William V. Mong, John St. Polis, and Tom Ricketts.

First National Plans "The Little Cafe" for Leon Errol

Eighteen U. A.'s in 1927

Lichtman Outlines Production Schedule After Conference With Schenck on Coast

BACK in the New York headquarters of United Artists after a three-weeks' visit with Joseph M. Schenck on the Coast, Al Lichtman announced this week that his company will release in 1927 eighteen or more pictures.

The pictures announced include one from Mary Pickford, story as yet unselected, "The Dove," a Norma Talmadge vehicle directed by Roland West which will go into work immediately after filming of "Camille," one from Gloria Swanson on which camera work will be started soon, one from Charles Chaplin and a Douglas Fairbanks picture for which the story material is now being gathered.

John Barrymore will make one, either an historical story or a present day life character. Buster Keaton will have two, one of which is now in production under the temporary title "Hercules, the Weak," a college story; two from Samuel Goldwyn, the first of which is a Henry King production starring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky and based on Rudolf's "King Harlequin." Morris Gest will have "The Darling of the Gods" and the Duncan Sisters are making "Topsy and Eva," directed by Lois Weber.

Fred Niblo will make one to be known as a Joseph M. Schenck presentation of a Fred Niblo production. Roland West will produce "The Purple Mask," which will be started when Mr. West finishes direction of "The Dove." "Two Arabian Knights" will be a Caddo production supervised by John W. Considine, Jr., and directed by Lewis Milestone with William Boyd and Louis Wolheim in the east; the story is based on Donald McGibeny's magazine story.

Three and possibly more productions will be announced in the near future, said Mr. Lichtman.

P. D. C. Scenarists Active

Writers at Both De Mille and Metropolitan Studios Preparing New Productions for Filming

THE scenario departments at both the De Mille and Metropolitan studios are at present busily engaged in preparing the many productions scheduled for filming within the next few months. Practically every writer on both staffs is actively occupied in turning out scripts from which the productions, released through Producers Distributing Corporation, will be filmed.

Douglas Doty is whipping the script for "Vanity," Leatrice Joy's next starring picture, into shape. Donald Crisp is scheduled to direct. Garrett Fort, who adapted "White Gold" for the screen in collaboration with Tay Garnett, is assisting William K. Howard and C. Gardner Sullivan in the editing of this newest Jetta Goudal starring picture.

F. McGrew Willis, of Metropolitan, is assisting with the editing of "No Control," his screen adaptation of Frank Condon's "Saturday Evening Post" story "By Remote Control." Scott Sidney directed this picture, with Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver in the leading roles. Zelda Sears is at Metropolitan working on the script of "The Night Bride," which stars Marie Prevost under E. Mason Hopper's direction.

Bertram Millhauser and Beulah Marie Dix are busy on "The Country Doctor," which is designed to bring to the screen the story of one of America's truly unsung heroes. No director has as yet been assigned to this picture.

Albert Shelby LeVino is putting the final touches on the script for "Turkish Delight," Irvin S. Cobb's first original for the screen, which will feature Julia Faye, Kenneth Thomson and Rudolph Schildkraut. Paul Sloane will direct.

Four Feb. F. N. Releases

Schedule Headed by "McFadden's Flats" and Harry Langdon's "Long Pants"; Three Are Comedies

FIRST NATIONAL PICTURES will release four productions during the current month of which three are comedies and one other a mystery story. "McFadden's Flats" which will open in the New York City Mark Strand Theatre, and "Long Pants," Harry Langdon's newest comedy, head the list of releases which also includes "Easy Pickings" and "An Affair of the Follies."

Asher, Small and Rogers produce "McFadden's Flats" with Charlie Murray and Chester Conklin in the leading roles; it is dated for release February 5th. Gladys Brockwell, Al Roscoe, Alma Bennett, Frankie Darro and Priscilla Bonner support Langdon in his latest comedy effort which was directed by Frank Capra. It is a story of adolescence scheduled for release February twenty-seventh. The picture will have its premiere showing in the East.

Lewis Stone, Billie Dove and Lloyd Hughes are featured in "An Affair of the Follies" which was produced by an Al Rockett unit with Millard Webb directing. It is a dramatic story of a show-girl, a neck-tie salesman and an inventor-millionaire. Released February 13th.

The mystery story for the month is "Easy Pickings" with Anna Q. Nilsson, Kenneth Harlan and Billy Bevan in the leading roles. Frank Griffith produced, and George Archainbaud directed, with a supporting cast including Philo McCullough, Jerry Miley, Charles Sellon, Zack Williams and Gertrude Howard. It is set for release February 20th.

Follow Harmonica Contests on Coast

Virtuoso Signed for Tour of West Coast Theatres

The West Coast Theatres, following the completion of their remarkably successful series of Educational-Juvenile Comedies-Harmonica contests staged in leading cities of the Pacific Coast, are cashing in now on the publicity and good-will resulting from these contests. One of the outstanding "follow-up" campaigns is the engagement of Arthur Turelly, harmonica player, to appear in twenty-five theatres under the direction of Fanchon and Marco. Turelly's extended engagement opened on January 21st.

During the appearance of Turelly in each theatre, the house orchestra members will receive special instruction in harmonica playing. This means that a selected group of musicians from each theatre will be available, without additional cost, in the future as a special attraction in the presentation of special motion picture features.

Interest in harmonica playing is now becoming nation-wide, and it is estimated, conservatively, that there are twice as many either playing or learning how to play the harmonica as at this time last year.

Display for "Whispering Wires" Features Phone

Manager F. J. Miller used a lobby stunt for "Whispering Wires" that got lots of attention when that film played at the Modjeska Theatre, Augusta, Ga.

Attractive stills of the picture attached to a large piece of beaverboard was placed in the lobby. Wording underneath the stills read, "Anita Stewart in Whispering Wires—Plenty of Mystery, Thrills and Comedy."

In front of the beaverboard was a table upon which was placed a telephone with concealed wire connection in the box office. This 'phone was intermittingly rung by the cashier—always attracting much attention.

"A" is Mystery Symbol in Drive for "The Scarlet Letter"

A TEASER campaign, worked out on an unusually large scale and employing some novel ideas to feature the letter "A" in newspaper, poster and theatre billing, brought gratifying results as exploitation for "The Scarlet Letter" at the Florida Theatre, St. Petersburg, Fla.

The campaign was started ten days in advance of showing.

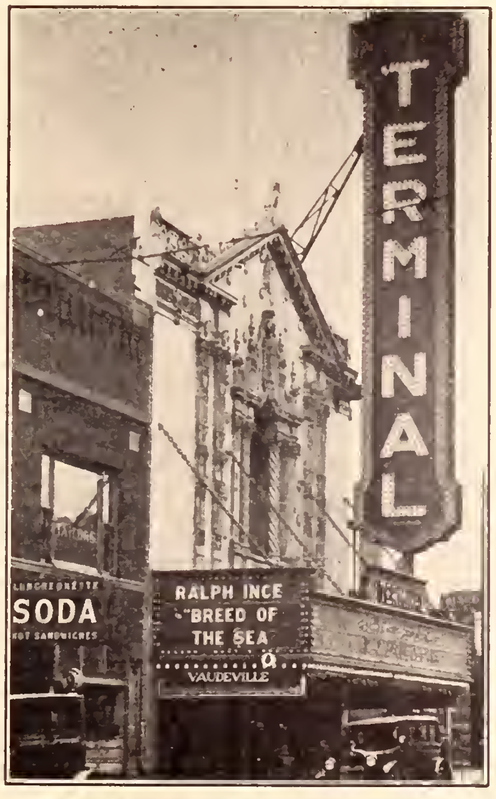
A large letter "A" was painted on a three-sheet and placed in a three-sheet frame in the lobby. This was followed by two shadow boxes, with a large red "A" painted on white glass with electric bulb behind it.

Next, a truck was put on the streets carrying a ten-foot red "A" in the center of the body, the letter "A" being made of beaverboard. This stunt tied up with the teaser campaign in the newspapers.

The newspaper teasers were in the form of a large "A," and were scattered throughout the papers for three days in advance of play date.

Just before "The Scarlet Letter" trailer went on the screen, at the end of each performance, the front drapes were closed, and then a scarlet "A" was projected on the drapes—the size of the letter being 30 feet tall and about 20 feet wide at the bottom. After a few seconds, the trailer was then faded into the "A"; the drapes then parted and the trailer was run on the screen.

This is how Manager Chas. H. Amos projected the large letter: Took a sheet of copper the size of a regular slide and cut the letter "A" out in the center. A piece of scarlet gelatin was pasted over the opening; then the plate was put in a slide machine and projected through a wide angle lense.



Ascher's Terminal Theatre, Chicago, with marquee billing to feature showing there of F.B.O.'s "Breed of the Sea"

Newspaper Drive Exploits "Syncopating Sue"

A total of 458 inches of newspaper space was used to exploit "Syncopating Sue" at the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle. The opening shots comprised some reverse copy with a bit of attractive art work which could hardly be missed. The first play-day some more art work was used with a background of sheet music signifying jazz, a neat drawing of Corinne Griffith and also an attractive way of presenting a title and copy. This was very much of an original idea with this theatre, for they have seemed to have left out the usual advertising idea.

: : : : "THE CHECK-UP" : : : :

"The Check-Up" is a presentation in the briefest and most convenient form of reports received from exhibitors in every part of the country on current features, which makes it possible for the exhibitor to see what the picture has done for other theatre managers.

The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third, the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage figure giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage ratings of all of these reports on one picture are then added together, and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be misleading taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up and eliminated.

No picture is included in the list which has not received at least ten reports.

Three of the five prominent window displays which figured as a highlight of the campaign for the presentation of Warner Bros.' "Don Juan" and Vitaphone at the Aztec Theatre in San Antonio. The merchant tie-ups were all based on the 15-cent edition of the novel.

Spectacular "Don Juan" Campaign Staged in San Antonio

A CAMPAIGN in which the spectacular exploitation stunts as well as those highly effective sales efforts which get results but which, owing to repeated use, lack some of the theatrical flavor of the others, combined to introduce "Don Juan" and Vitaphone to San Antonio as one of the most startling attractions of the age. The drive was staged by Wm. Epstein, managing director of the Aztec Theatre, where Vitaphone had its San Antonio premiere.

The two outstanding features of this campaign, which covered the city from stem to stern, were the tie-up with the Missouri Pacific Railroad, which ran special excursion trips Saturday and Sunday, January 8th and 9th and 15th and 16th, for the University students from Austin; and the use of 10,000 photoplay editions of "Don Juan," which were sold for 15 cents per copy and which were placed in practically every store of importance in San Antonio. This latter feature was responsible for the most thoroughgoing co-operative drive with merchants the Texas city has ever seen.

There was a great deal of local newspaper publicity developed around the star of "Don Juan" and the Vitaphone invention.

Details of the Campaign

The following itemized list of the exploitation efforts put forth by Epstein, and supplied this department by him, gives an idea of the extensive as well as intensive character of the campaign:

We billed one hundred miles from San Antonio in all directions with 100 24 sheets for "Don Juan" and the Vitaphone.

We had window displays in five of the most prominent stores.

We had a special section in the San Antonio "Evening News" for Saturday, January 8th.

We had 30,000 Rotogravures in colors inserted with the special section.

3,000 books of "Don Juan" were given away free on the 11th day of the showing in the Aztec Theatre.

1,000 autographed John Barrymore photographs were given away free at the theatre on the 14th day of the showing.

10,000 heralds were inserted in the Saturday issue of the Spanish paper, "La Prensa," Saturday, January 15th.

10,000 postal cards were mailed out to homes.

10,000 heralds were distributed around town as well as at the Race Track.

Local Merchants Feature "Scarlet Letter" Sales

"Scarlet Letter" days, during which merchants of Bartlesville, Okla., featured special sales, was an exploitation stunt which registered for the Majestic Theatre's presentation of the picture of that title.

The tie-up was arranged with the Halliburton-Abbott Department store, whereby the officials designated a certain day of the week as "Scarlet Letter" Day. All the sales prices were displayed with red lettering. The store also played up "The Scarlet Letter" in their newspaper advertising and window displays.

A "Scarlet Letter" herald was placed in each package that left the store for a week preceding the playdate and continued so during the run of the film.

In return for the publicity, the Majestic Theatre advertised "Scarlet Letter" day by placing posters for the store in the lobby of the theatre. The theatre carried a line in their newspaper ads and ran a trailer on the screen.

Goose and Fox Pals in This Theatre Window Display

A goose and a gray fox living peacefully together in a wire pen form the unique advertising feature in the show window of Smalley's Theatre, Oneonta, N.Y. The two were placed side by side in a pen with a wire partition between them, but the partition has been torn aside and they are now living in the same apartment with the partition removed.

3 Features—5 Acts for 1 Admission

Bowdoin Square, Boston, Also Includes News and Comedy

Exhibitors who think they are providing full programs for their patrons, should confer with Al Somerby, the popular manager of the Bowdoin Square Theatre, Boston.

Somerby provides his patrons with the following program: Three feature pictures, five vaudeville acts, News, Comedy and a Serial. On Friday night, in addition, he has what he calls Bargain Night when two or three extra vaudeville acts are presented.

There is continuous performance and the patronage of the theatre shows the people appreciate his efforts to provide a program which will please everybody. Last week, in addition to the regular numbers, Freckles Barry appeared in person for a few minutes.

Display Machine in "Flesh and the Devil" Lobby

Manager Warren Irvin used a new invention in his lobby that was the means of increasing his business tremendously when "Flesh and the Devil" played at the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N.C.

The invention is a machine, electrically driven and constructed similar to a ferris wheel. It is encased, and electric lights are on the inside. On the wheel are spaces for eight cardboard signs to be used to advertise any commodity, so Irvin used stills on "Flesh and the Devil." On the top of the case is a space for the title of the picture, and on the back appeared the title of the coming picture and stills of the next attraction.

The machine was planted in the center of the lobby, where every passer by could see it.

Temporary Ban on Fire Scenes

Manager W. P. McGeachie, of the Algoma Theatre, Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, has deleted all fire scenes from the news reels which he screens and will continue to do so, he says, because he believes the people are nervous about fires.

Short-Subjects and Serials

Roach Signs McGowan to New Five-Year Contract

When Robert McGowan recently completed "Love My Dog," the sixtieth picture of the "Our Gang" series, he simultaneously finished his five-year contract with Hal Roach. Roach, believing that the director of this Pathe release has achieved an outstanding success in the directorial line of short comedies, has promptly signed the director to a new five-year contract, said to be the finest ever presented to a director of short-length comedies. The period embodied in the contract starts on April 15. Mr. McGowan will spend the next three months vacationing and will sail from Los Angeles on the S.S. "Finland" through the Panama Canal to Havana, Cuba.

Anthony Mack and Charley Oelze, McGowan's assistants through the major part of the past five years, will collaborate on the making of "Our Gang" comedies during McGowan's absence. A new feminine face is being considered to replace Mary Kornman, who, with Mickey Daniels, is touring the vaudeville world. The most likely prospect for the position of leading lady for "Our Gang" seems to be Jean Darling, now in stock at Hal Roach's.

Pathe's Feb. 13 Schedule

Includes Chaplin Re-Issue "Shoulder Arms," Sennett and Roach Two-Reel Comeaies

A CHARLIE CHAPLIN re-issue, "Shoulder Arms," heads the list of short subject releases by Pathe for the week of February thirteenth; also included are a Mack Sennett and Hal Roach two-reel comedy, a chapter of the Pathe serial "On Guard" and the usual issues of Topics of the Day, Pathe Review and Pathe News.

Syd Chaplin and Edna Purviance support Chaplin in the travesty on the late war. The Roach production is an "Our Gang" comedy filmed in Europe and Jimmy Finlayson appears in the cast. Robert McGowan directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones.

"The Plumber's Daughter" is the title of the Mack Sennett comedy in which Alice Day is starred with a supporting cast including Eddie Quillan, Danny O'Shea, Alma Bennett, Evelyn Sherman and Don Maines. Larry Semon directed under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. Paul Whitman and Harry McCoy are responsible for the story.

Pathe Review No. 7 presents "A Bouncing Business": The rubber "farms" of the Philippines. The process of harvesting from gathering the sap, to drying and pressing; "Harrogate"; Pathecolor view of the principal watering place in northern England, a city that retains its rural charm despite rapid growth in recent years; "Squeezing for Safety"; Uncle Sam's Bureau of Standards in pressure tests of steel, brick, stone, limestone, etc., tests that tell why our great structures are known to be safe.

"On Guard," the current Pathe Serial, reaches its third chapter this week in the episode titled "Silent Evidence." This serial, written by Major Robert Glassburn, U. S.A., received the cooperation of the United States Army. Cullen Landis heads the cast, supported by Muriel Kingston, Louis Du Pre, Charles Martin, Walter Lewis, Tom Blake, Edward Burns and the Mysterious Horseman.

Topics of the Day No. 7 offers the latest wit and humor culled from the press of the world. "The Crawl Stroke Kid" is the current-release of the Aesop Film Fables Series of animated cartoon comedies. Pathe News issues Nos. 16 and 17, present pictorial portrayals of last moment world happenings.

Laemmle Buys Rex; First Vehicle "Thunderhoofs"

PAYING a price said to be the equal of any ever paid for a race horse, Carl Laemmle has purchased Rex, the king of wild horses. The Universal president also acquired the horse star's equine comrades, Lady, the heroine, Marquis, the villain, Paris, juvenile and female impersonator, and Moe and Eva, low comedy relief burros. The equine group has already been moved to new quarters at the Universal back ranch, where they are training for their forthcoming vehicles the first of which will be "Thunderhoofs," a spectacular wild horse story to be directed by Henry McRae, former director-general of the Universal City film plant, who recently resigned his executive position to assume the Rex assignment.

Edward Meagher is now completing the script for "Thunderhoofs" and it is anticipated that work will be started within a week, when the production unit, including June Marlowe, Hugh Allen, Howard Truesdale and William Bailey, goes to the Arizona locations, chosen by McRae.

Jack Lloyd in "Busy Lizzie," Current Educ.-Mermaid

Jack Lloyd, character man, who has acted many roles in Educational-Mermaid comedies, appears in a virtually straight make-up, except for a mustache, in "Busy Lizzie," an Edna Marion-George Davis co-featuring vehicle. He is seen as the proprietor of a gown shop and effects no make-up.

Lige Conley Engaged by Mack Sennett as Director

Realizing the value of the wide experience gained by Lige Conley in his long association with various comedy producers, Mack Sennett has persuaded the comedian to temporarily discard his make-up box and try his hand at directing and writing Sennett comedies.

Conley's first crack at the Sennett studios was the direction of Ben Turpin in a new two-reel comedy as yet untitled. He is now preparing a story with the collaboration of Harry McCoy for the Jimmy Smith series.

Earl Rodney directed for the first time the Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan combination in "The College Kiddo," and is now working on their newest offering based on the Catalina Channel Swim. Rodney is also responsible for the first of the new Sennett offerings featuring the Sennett Keystone Kops. Alf Goulding and Harry Connett have finished the direction of a new comedy for the Jimmy Smith series entitled "Smith's Candy Shop." They are now shooting another of the same brand, "Smith's Cook."

Ann Christy In Christie-Educational Comedies

The first Christy girl to join the Christie comedies is Ann Christy, seen in minor roles of previous Christie comedies, and signed the other day by Al Christie. Her first important part will be as feminine lead in a forthcoming Jimmie Adams comedy. Miss Christy went to Hollywood from Indianapolis four years ago and has been in motion pictures for only six months, "atmosphering" and doing small parts.

Bobby Verbon discovered this latest addition to the Christie unit, recommending that Ann, one of the extras in his comedy, "Wife Shy," be given a part that developed in the picture. Miss Christy, before joining the Christie unit, worked with Billy Dooley in "Have Courage" and Harry Langdon in "Long Pants."

Davis, Beauchamp and Dunham in "Hot Lightning"

Three comedians, all featured players in Educational comedies, have much to say in the fun making of a new Mermaid comedy, "Hot Lightning," which was recently completed at Educational's Hollywood studio. George Davis, Clem Beauchamp and Phil Dunham are the three principals and they were directed by Stephen Roberts. The feminine sex is represented by Lucille Hutton and Eva Thatcher. Davis and Dunham have been featured in Cameo comedies, the latter also appearing in main supporting roles in Mermaid comedies. Beauchamp holds a similar record.

Pathe to Release New Buddy Roosevelt on February 13

Buddy Roosevelt's new outdoor feature production, "Between Dangers," is scheduled for release by Pathe on February 13. The story, produced by Lester F. Scott, Jr., was adapted by Richard Thorpe from the Action Magazine story by Walter J. Coburn, "Ride 'Em Cowboy." Besides doing the continuity for the picture, Thorpe also directed.

Five in Feb. From Sterns

Universal Will Distribute Comedy Productions; "Newlyweds" and Buster Brown Included

STERN BROTHERS will release five two-reel comedy productions during February through Universal, it was announced this week; heading the list is one of the "Newlyweds" series and a "Buster Brown" Junior Jewel Comedy.

"The Newlyweds Build," the newest of the "Newlyweds and Their Baby" series, is the first release of the month. Sunny McKeen plays Snookums, Ethlyne Clair is Mrs. Newlywed and Jed Dooley is the husband. Gus Meins directed, and the release date is February 2nd.

On the seventh of the month "Buster's Sleighride," of the Buster Brown Junior Jewel series, was marketed. Arthur Trimble has the "Buster Brown" role, and Doreen Turner portrays the Mary Jane part. Tige is played by Pete, the dog comedian.

"What's Your Hurry?" the latest of "The Excuse Maker Series," is scheduled for February 9th release. Charles King is starred and Constance Darling has the feminine lead. Sam Newfield directed.

The newest "What Happened to Jane" comedy, titled "Thanks for the Boat Ride," is a February 16th release. Wanda Wiley is starred, and Art Rowlands, Al Alt and Betty Baker have the principal supporting roles. Charles Lamont directed; the locale is laid along the San Francisco and Southern California ports.

"George Runs Wild," of the "Let George Do It" series, is slated to go to exhibitors February 23rd. Sid Saylor has the name part, Ethlyne Clair has the principal feminine role, and the cast includes the Hollywood Beauties. Scott Pembroke directed the film version of the George McManus cartoon.

Sennett Plans Revival of Old Keystone Komedy Kops

The oldtime Keystone Komedy Kops of Mack Sennett are to be revived. Rather than let their memory die, the comedy producer has decided that a new group of comedians will play the roles in which Ford Sterling, Charlie Murray, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain and Fatty Arbuckle brought laughter to those who witnessed their antics. Andy Clyde is Chief of Police Sterling, Barney Hellum plays Sergeant Conklin, William Armstrong and Tiny Ward appear as Sergeants Murray and Swain respectively. The kops will be seen in the same old type of uniform and two quart helmets and will not be modernized in any way except in the introduction of Eddie Quillan as a traffic kop.

The Keystone patrol will go careening on its way as of yore, and the kops will continue to fall all over themselves in the first of the new kop comedies, in which they pursue Madeline Hurlock and Johnny Bruke, a beautiful speed demon and a crook.

Educat'l Completes Three

Bobby Vernon's "Duck Out", Billy Dooley's "Sailor Beware", "Chicken Feathers"; Feb. Release

THERE has been no let-up in production at the Educational studios since the first of the year and from the comedies and novelty subjects planned it is not expected that any noticeable diminution of activity will be experienced for the next few months. Three comedies were finished this week, Bobby Vernon's "Duck Out," Billy Dooley's "Sailor Beware" and a Christie comedy featuring Anne Cornwall and Jack Duffy titled "Chicken Feathers." These will be released during this month.

A country lad is Bobby Vernon in "Duck Out" and he serves as general utility man in a rural hotel. His supporting cast includes Frances Lee, Bill Irving, Andy Clyde, Bill Blaisdell, Billy Engle and Edna Gregory. William Watson directed.

Billy Dooley again plays the "misfit sailor" in "Sailor Beware," which was directed by William Watson. Vera Steadman appears opposite the star and the supporting cast comprises Eddie Baker, Max Asher, George Hall and George Burton.

Anne Cornwall and Jack Duffy are co-featured in "Chicken Feathers," the latest Christie Brothers comedy. The principals are supported by a large cast made up of the Christie Beauty Squad and Bill Irving, Billy Engle, Ann Christy and Jimmy Harrison.

In addition to the complete comedies, Earl Rodney is at present directing Jimmie Adams in the comedy star's newest vehicle taken from a story by Sig Herzig. Vera Steadman has the leading feminine role and Eddie Baker is one of the principals in support. No title has been announced as yet for this picture, which is the fourth of six to be produced this season.

Sennett Signs Goulding to Direct "Smith Family" Series

Mack Sennett has arranged for a separate production unit to continue his series of domestic comedies built around the doings of the "Smith Family," Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Mary Ann Jackson. The comedy producer has engaged Alf Goulding, director of feature length and two-reel comedies, to a long term contract to continue this series of domestic farces depicting on the screen the average American family, whether Smith or Jones, in all its humorous aspects.

Sennett selected the types for the comedy family over a year ago, when he placed the above mentioned players under contract for the series. Omar, Norman Kerry's black and white spotted great dane, plays the family pup.

"MAKING GOOD"

How "Summer Bachelors" (Fox) was advertised at a number of leading first run houses. The group above includes reproductions of newspaper displays, adapted from press book layouts, which exploited the film at the following theatres: Howard, Atlanta; Capitol, Atlantic City, N.J.; Fox Theatre, Philadelphia; Ambassador, St. Louis; Capitol, Cincinnati; Sun, Omaha; Garden, Milwaukee; Metropolitan, Washington, D.C.; Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, and Capitol, Detroit.

Opinions on Current Productions

"An Old Flame"

(Fox-Helen and Warren Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

"WARREN" gets in wrong again with "Helen," but that hardly constitutes news inasmuch as that is what he is always doing. And this time it is really not his fault. Marjorie Beebe keeps him out all night in the auto, and it certainly looks bad to her parents and to Kathryn Perry, his movie better-half. For a matter of fact, Allan Forrest was interested in only two things: concluding the business deal with James Marcus, his host, and in his own wife. But Marjorie was not to be denied, although in the end she got the same sort of a deal that has been reported wrongly or rightly since Biblical times in the Joseph-Potiphar's wife story.

"Warren" got off wrong literally and figuratively when he picked up the wrong bags on the arrival of the train at his journey's end, and miles later on had to make a jump for it, and the trouble continued until the family had put some distance between themselves and the troublesome family with whom they were to stay.

It is amusing and will please; there is no doubt of that because it contains a real idea and a lot of amusing and absurd situations.

Released January 30.

(Fox-Variety—One Reel, 784 feet)

THIS is a particularly beautiful picture showing a camper with his two horses making a pilgrimage to Mount Robson in the Canadian Rockies. It contains some of the finest camera shots I have seen for months. This applies to the scenic phases and to the wild animals which have been caught for the most part with a tele-photo (long distance) lens. If anything thrown on the screen could instill a desire to travel this certainly will. You feel like leaving at once to book train passage to the scene of the picture. Surely no greater tribute than that can be paid. My most profound obeisance to the man who took these shots.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Seeing the World"

(Pathe-Roach—Our Gang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS is the first of what unquestionably will be a series of pictures dealing with the recent trip to Europe of Hal Roach's group of amusing and entertaining youngsters. As far as I can make out it is really a sort of introduction to tell movie exhibitors and patrons that such a trip has taken place. There is no story or plot to it, merely a travelogue that takes in London, Paris, Rome, Naples, Venice, and other places, with the youngsters usually in the foreground of the picture but with the familiar views the thing. What little plot there is concerns the fall of Farina from the Eiffel Tower and Jimmy Finlayson (their guide) attempting to save him. Then it turns out that the whole picture is a dream of the school teacher (Finlayson) induced by a narcotic which the youngsters, his pupils, had put in his drinking water.

As said before, it is not characterized by anything like a plot and really is a travelogue, but with the idea of leading up to many and presumably amusing adventures of the gang on the European Continent. With a fore setting, if they achieve anything like the legitimate laughs which they have on California soil, the trip will have been more than worthwhile. There is no group in pictures today that can touch this outfit. The credit is not only theirs but Robert McGowan's, as director-author, and F. Richard Jones as supervisor.

"Hello Hollywood"

(Castle Films—One Reel)

HOLLYWOOD as it was 25 years ago, before the motion picture, and as it is today with its enormous studio space is one view in this number of the Novelty series produced by Castle. How they staged the thrillers in the old days, the slap-stick comedy and the Western hair-raiser, is shown in the early part of the picture; then the modern story with its artificially created atmosphere, trees decorated with cotton to produce the effect of snow, water tanks for providing rain, air-blowers for wind and the mechanical contrivance which makes lightning strike wherever and whenever the electrician wills—all are set forth in detail. This number closes with airplane views of the principal studios.

While without a doubt this is sure to interest the fans I don't believe it is good business to give away the "tricks of the trade" for if this sort of thing were shown very often it would tear down the illusion so necessary to the fan's enjoyment of a production.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"High Spirits"

(Educational-Cameo Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is more meat than usually characterizes two-reelers. It tells the story of a policeman with a wife who has spiritualistic leanings. Disgruntled because it usually means a cold dinner or little to eat, he decides to put an end to the same. He visits the seance and ends by proving the man a fake and arresting him. Future warm dinners were in the offing at the fade-out.

The story affords an opportunity for Nate Watt, the director, to put on some weird stunts and show how they are done by the faker. Two visiting colored people who are confronted with skulls and skeletons are naturally even more terrified than the gullible white patrons.

The moral is, do not trust mediums; if you do, do not marry a cop who is apt to break up seances because of cold suppers.

John Sinclair, Ernest Shields and Toy Gallagher are the three important players.

Short Shots No. 9

(Castle Films—One Reel)

THIS reel is one of a series which show scenes taken all over the world of the little known or unusual in the lives of the people. This number starts with jiu-jitsu, two of its exponents exhibiting several trick ways of flooring the adversary; also there are shots of indoor golf in New York City, a dare-devil doing his "stuff" on the land equivalent of a surf-board which in this case is drawn by an automobile; also the latest in eyeglasses, which seemed rather silly.

On the whole it is an entertaining and instructive number.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"Busy Lizzie"

(Educational-Mermaid Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

A VAST amount of work must have gone into the making of this Mermaid comedy, for everybody is on his toes from start to finish. Director James Jones, or possibly it was Supervisor Jack White, saw to that. Edna Marion is an errand girl in a modiste's, Jack Lloyd is the proprietor, George Davis has the role of a crook trying to rob the place and Glen Cavender is the cop who tries to prevent the robbery. Edna misses the street car, begs a ride from the crook, George, lands on a cake of ice which in its flight takes in or on a traffic policeman. Then to a limousine to arrive at the shop in style. Pursued by the flying cop, Edna poses as one of the clothes dummies and fools both cop and burglar who has arrived to rob the shop. The end witnesses the apprehension of the burglar.

Edna Marion, who is featured with George Davis, suggests, physically, and in her methods, Mabel Normand. She has been in many Christie comedies and other two-reelers. As the shop-girl she is piquant and adds greatly to the value of the picture.

"Are Brunettes Safe?"

(Pathe-Hal Roach—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is an instance where the title, as far as I can see, has nothing whatsoever to do with the plot of the piece. Charley Chase runs a question and answer column on a Los Angeles newspaper. For some reason Charley decides to go home to the mother of one of his contributors because he bears such a striking resemblance to the man who has enclosed his picture. Arrived there he fools his own "mother" and falls in love with his "sister." Then the real boy arrives (double exposure) and straightens it all out so Charley can claim Lorraine Eason.

It is an entertaining and amusing comedy with several excellent players in it. They number Charley Chase, Lorraine Eason, William Walling, Kate Bruce, Buddy Post, and Polly Moran. James Parrott directed and F. Richard Jones supervised. Chase has a decidedly ingratiating personality that fits admirably the reporter-hero of the piece.

"The Crawl Stroke Kid"

Pathe-Aesops Fables—One Reel)

QUITE obviously, this was inspired by the English Channel hegira of last year, but why was so much time permitted to elapse before it was released on the screen? Did the performance of the young Canadian in making the Catalina Island-California Coast swim prompt the two artists and Pathe to throw their entire menagerie and zoo into the water? Whatever the reason, an amusing animated cartoon has been evolved. I hope that the result is not a reflection on any of the successful swimmers because "Thomas Kat" in the role of the trainer is not what you might call exactly honest. When the race seems lost he blows up "Milton Mouse" and utilizing an electric fan, using this power as a propellor to reach the coast before the competing menagerie. En route the mouse is fed in the most approved fashion and even has a finger bowl at the end of the meal. It is quite an amusing satire on the channel-swimming hysteria and will occupy a deservedly high place in the Pathe Fables list.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Plumber's Daughter"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ALICE DAY is the star of this Mack Sennett comedy. She is a movie sister of Mabel Normand. They are much alike in facial expression and hoydenish actions. Eddie Quillan is the boob lover who leaves Alice to drown—no this is not "An American Tragedy" comedy—while he saves himself. Danny O'Shea plays the hero, the rich man's son who pulls Alice out of the lake and falls in love with her and she with him. It is comparatively simple for Danny to sidestep his engagement to the gold-digging Alma Bennett and thwart her equally mercenary mother, Evelyn Sherman, and marry Alice. But before that happens Alice dresses up as a masculine helper to her father, replacing the timid Eddie. She succeeds in wrecking the Beverly Hills home of Mr. O'Shea through a bursting main and generally upsetting the placid routine of a millionaire's home. But she gets her man in the end.

Larry Semon, sometime newspaper cartoonist and himself a comedian of parts, directs "The Plumber's Daughter" and keeps his characters on the go, a requisite of farce-comedies. The total result is an amusing entertainment which will make a hit in most theatres.

J. A. Waldron supervised Semon's work. February 13th is the release date.

"Present Arms"

(Bray-MacDougall Alley—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Faul Thompson)

A BOYS' military academy is the setting for the present troubles of the MacDougall Alley youngsters. Its possibilities are not realized, from my viewpoint. One of the kids is anxious to see a big league baseball game and gets a girl to change clothes and places with him. She gets her full measure of trouble in the drill squad and he in his masquerading as a girl in the bleachers. Finally, he returns to the academy much the worse for wear.

For originality or amusing incidents it cannot compare with recent Alley comedies.

"In for Life"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

THERE may be no giving in marriage in Heaven but the defect or blessing is more than made amends for in the average Bluebird comedy. Neely Edwards is a veritable movie Mormon inasmuch as every other picture, conservatively, finds him mixed up in some matrimonial mis adventure or other. Consuela Dawn is the object of his affections in this particular picture. A ticket for speeding and for parking unduly long brings the lovebirds before a magistrate. Neely tells a pathetic fairy tale that wins the judge or antagonizes him (it all depends on your viewpoint). He ends by marrying the couple which is rather a harsh fine for just violating the traffic laws. However, it is what they want or think they want so it is alright by me.

Amusing and entertaining as most of the Neely Edwards pieces are. Jay Belasco directed. Released February 28.

"Snookums Disappears"

(Universal-Newlyweds"—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

I HAVE always wondered how painters, artistic and temperamental under ordinary circumstances, could ever bring themselves to paint children. Even needing money would hardly justify the trouble encountered. And when you take a spoiled brat such as George McManus' "Snookums" the painter would be justified in charging several times his ordinary rates. What that spoiled kid can think up in the way of trouble (with the help of Gus Meins, the director) is more than some. He smears his face with paint, shoots an arrow through the canvas and generally puts the studio out of commission. Not content with that he wanders into an adjoining apartment, pursued by his moronic father. Inasmuch as the apartment is occupied by a couple, of which the husband is justly or otherwise very jealous, you can figure out for yourself just how popular Sid Saylor, Sunny McKeen's cartoon father, is when he goes in pursuit of his errant screen offspring. And it helps a lot when he protests that that is his object, not to visit the wife, and the kid has managed to disappear and so cannot be introduced as exhibit A.

One of the best of the recent "Newlyweds" because of the situations devised.

Released March 2.

"Oh Boy"

(Bray-MacDougall Alley—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE are illustrated the social inequalities which wealth and poverty represent. On the one hand Buddy and his pals compelled to utilize a very much battered Ford; Cuthbert with his youthful inamorata riding in a smart, expensive car. But there is justice even in Hollywood. At the end, when the two cars collide in the garage, Cuthbert is left at the wheel of the still more disreputable Ford while his enemies are ensconced in the limousine and even have acquired the little girl. Before this denouement many things have happened, including the cutting off of the trouser buttons belonging to Cuthbert with the imminent dropping of that all-too-necessary article of wear. Also, a frog is placed down his back to make the button-cutting even more effective. But Cuthbert shows his mettle by trouncing the gang and taking away their collective suspenders. But his revenge is of short duration.

While the picture is rather trite yet it contains enough material to make an appeal to a wide circle of movie-goers. There is always an undeniable appeal in kid pictures, possibly because they get to not only children of their own age but to oldsters who are living again their, in some cases, remote youth. Sometimes the MacDougall Alley coterie hit the bull's-eye with original and decidedly laugh-provoking situations and characterizations.

"A Strange Inheritance"

(Universal-Western—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

INHERITING one child would be bad enough, but multiply that by five and you have some idea of what Ben Corbett and Pee Wee Holmes were up against. The latter's uncle in the East shipped the quintet on to the ranch because he was broke and the two pals became or tried to become nurse-maids, governesses, etc., but "not so good." In despair, they finally pack them in a trunk for shipment back home. The trunk becomes dislodged from the express wagon and rolls down a cliff. Are they hurt? Foolish question. Kids are tough as they are could not be harmed by a greater fall than that. They emerge to greet their father who, it seems, is not poor at all but just testing out Pee Wee. The inference is that the latter is cut off in the will because of his inability to get along with the kids. But show me the man who could.

Vin Moore directed this two-reeler, which will be released March 5.

"Tenderfoot Courage"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THEY certainly make it difficult for Fred Gilman in this Mustang two-reeler, but he wins out and captures Alma Rayford and, as husband, part ownership of her ranch. But then he should, for he prevented the rustlers stealing her cattle and proves what a crook her foreman has been. For some unknown reason, though he has lived in the West for two years, Fred Gilman (alias Hal Brennon) is known as a tenderfoot. But before the two reels have unwound he is established as anything but that despised and supposed mollycoddle. Several fights, much hard riding, the rescue of the kidnapped girl and the thorough discomfiture of the ex-foreman: what more could the most rabid Western fan demand?

Credit for the directions goes to William Wylie. Released February 26th.

"Peaceful Oscar"

(Educational-Lloyd Hamilton Comedy —Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

LLOYD HAMILTON is penalized by his wife after she fires the maid and the chef to the extent of acting in the role of both while she is "throwing" a tea. Naturally he is anything but a success. Consequently he too walks out and seeks the beach with Billy Hampton, the son of the family. Here again he encounters the maid, Toy Gallagher, who is the object of the affections of the chef, Henry Murdock, and the butcher's boy, Chick Collins. Hamilton, despite the competition, is not averse to philandering with Toy himself. In revenge, Murdock fastens Lloyd's son to a bunch of toy balloons with the result that the youngster goes aloft to the distress of everybody at the beach. That marks the climax of the picture which includes many rough and tumble fights, etc.

It is marked by no particular originality or brilliance but will serve for those who like the somewhat fat comedian and his mincing mannerisms.

The cast includes the star, Blanche Payson, Billy Hampton, Toy Gallagher, Henry Murdock, Chick Collins. William Goodrich directed.

"Mike Wins a Medal"

(Educational-Life Cartoon—One Reel)

MESSRS. Gibson, Wadsworth, Sherwood and McGrory, the Life quartet, have arranged for Mike to become a horn-tooter. While he is doing this, Nibbins sets fire to the apartment. Then an animated cartoon version of "The Fourth Alarm," with Mike playing the role of hero. Aided by a stream of water from one of the hose carts he mounts to the roof of the skyscraper and picks Little Nibbins off the coping to which he is hanging. Their descent to the street and safety is not quite so plausible but, making due allowance for moving picture audiences' credulity, they will probably get away with it.

I think the Life series is improving, but has much distance to travel.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Sculpturing From Life"

(Bray—Magazine No. 5)

THIS is divided into three parts. The first shows how a sculptor makes a statue. First the pencil sketch, then the plaster cast, built on a wire framework which is flexible so that the arms, legs, head, etc., can be twisted and turned to the pose which is desired.

The second subject is "The Ancient Game of Polo." Aside from the captions which tell us the game was originated two thousand years ago in Persia, there is nothing startling or new. It is a series of polo ponies in action and at rest like hundreds of other similar pictures made familiar to us through news reels.

"Budding Apple Trees," taken in a nursery of 75,000 young trees, shows how the grafting is done on wild apple trees and the results.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Arctic Frontier"

(Bray—Magazine No. 6)

ANOTHER three-part Bray Magazine. First, a series of moving pictures in Alaska along the Yukon showing native life. How fish are caught and cured; primitive water wheels; the fur trappers, etc. The pictures were taken along the line of the new government railroad and form a mildly interesting travelogue.

Subject number two is landing a man-eating shark. It is always an amazing thing that the monsters can be landed by hook and line and this picture shows graphically how it is done. A few pistol shots at the end help quite a bit in the conquest of these dreaded pirates of the sea.

"How Did You Get That Hat?" enables you to answer the question. It portrays the entire process of hat-making.

Paradise For Two

Not Up to the Dix Standard, But Fairly Pleasing

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE law of averages must be obeyed. Richard Dix has been having an unusually good run of worthy pictures, and it was only natural that something would come along that didn't quite ring the bell. This "Paradise For Two" is nothing much more than a frame upon which to hang some gags. After they have been dissipated it evaporates into thin air.

The idea centers around that reliable wheeze of the confirmed bachelor who must marry within a specified time or lose his inheritance. It's an antique, you may be sure, but it is always screenable if there are enough tidbits of humor generating through it. One must hand it to Gregory La Cava, the director, for making it pleasant enough. He gets over the thin places pretty well. It is Dix's job to fool the administrator of the estate by hiring a wife, but who capitulates to her charms in the end. Thus he wins both a spouse and a fortune.

The star plays the young bachelor-benedict in a light, easy manner and his support is competent as furnished by Betty Bronson and Andre Beranger. It doesn't go bedroom farce. La Cava keeps it in the spirit of light comedy—without complications.

The Cast: Richard Dix, Betty Bronson, Andre Beranger, Edmund Breese, Peggy Shaw. Director, Gregory La Cava.

THEME: Light comedy revolving around bachelor who must marry within specified time or lose his legacy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The hiring of the actress to impersonate the wife. The romantic development. The easy playing by star and the acting of Andre Beranger. The silhouettes. The subtitles. The backgrounds.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Certainly affords teaser possibilities. Mention the Dix-La Cava combination in fashioning excellent light comedies. Capitalize the star as gifted in light comedies, etc.

DRAWING POWER: O. K. for any type of house. Dix's following should be satisfied with this one.

Length, six reels. Released January, 1927.
Produced and distributed by Famous Players.

Up Stream

An Actors' Boarding House Is Screened

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FROM big spectacular efforts such as "The Iron Horse," "The Three Bad Men," etc., John Ford, the youthful director for Fox, has shifted temporarily to a smaller canvas. It is eloquent evidence of the versatility and cleverness of the man that in a genre picture of the type of "Up Stream," dealing with the inhabitants of an actors' boarding house, he has done a piece of work that is every bit as effective as the larger, more sweeping strokes characteristic of the bigger canvases. "Up Stream" is a worthy companion piece to "Upstage," the Norma Shearer picture of vaudeville. The difference is that for the most part the action is confined to a boarding house sheltering different types of actors.

The story is of the simplest. A young Englishman, Earle Fox, possessor of a famous theatrical name, but himself a failure, is loved by a girl, Nancy Nash, who is a member of a knife-throwing team. The other member of the team, Grant Withers, loves her. Fox gets the chance to play "Hamlet" in London and makes a John Barrymore hit. Like so many of his ilk he thinks he alone is responsible, not crediting the coaching of an old Shakespearian actor, Emile Chautard, for his success. Nancy marries Grant, and Earle, returning to this country, visits the boarding house as a publicity stunt in time to be present at the wedding.

The Cast: Nancy Nash, Earle Fox, Grant Withers, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Raymond Hitchcock, Emile Chautard, Sammy Cohen, Ted McNamara, Judy King, Lilian Worth, Jane Winton, Harry Bailey, Francis Ford, Ely Reynolds. Director, John Ford. Author, Wallace Smith. Scenarist, Randall H. Faye. Cameraman, Charles Clark.

THEME: Life in a typical boarding house for actors. Romance of girl who loved in vain the conceited actor who made good.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Directing, playing, atmosphere, humor, real-ness.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play all the above. Ford's name, Hitchcock, Titus, famous stars, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, 5,510 feet. Released January 30.

New York

Melodrama All Around the Town

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WHAT appears to be a kaleidoscopic close-up of the metropolis is on view in this picture. It doesn't miss many points of interest and from an atmospheric issue it manages to deliver the punch. The camera work is genuinely effective—so much so that it shows up the shortcomings of the story. The theme is an old friend and projects the idea of contrast. In other words a rich society girl from far uptown falls in love with a lowly musician from the lower East Side.

The hero is a trap-drummer—the pride of Tin Pan Alley—and things develop romantically enough until a rival from the sidewalks throws his hat into the ring. Then the film goes melodramatic by ushering in a murder and a courtroom scene. It presents several absurdities in its hectic fling, but the characters manage to make themselves interesting.

The players are much better than the story they decorate, though Miss Taylor might have refrained from representing herself in grotesque attire. The action is retarded here and there and could be profitably shortened. The titles aren't much help. It is quite uninspired.

THEME: Melodrama of contrast between rich and poor with wealthy girl falling in love with East Side boy.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The atmosphere. Scenes of New York. The meeting of hero and heroine. The acting by principals. The courtroom episode.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Title affords fine possibilities for teaser campaign and showing stills for lobby display. The cast should be advertised. Bill as timely film of New York.

DRAWING POWER: Title and cast should draw them. Suitable for average houses.

Produced and distributed by Famous Players.
Length, 6,877 feet. Released January, 1927.

Errol Takes Up Aviation—Among Other Things

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE hero, Leon Errol, is introduced as the motive-power for a cart containing four other tramps. He escapes and lands in an insane asylum because he has been offered a hundred dollars by a passerby in a limousine to take his place for twenty-four hours. Among the inmates is one who is sane. His crazy twin brother plied him with chloroform and escaped to wed the fiancee. Errol becomes convinced of the sanity of the incarcerated brother and succeeds in reaching the girl who is giving an engagement party. Before he can convince her of the truth two attendants come to take him, Errol, back to the sanitarium. She departs with the nut to be married and honeymoon on a dirigible. Errol follows and rescues the girl, both landing through the aid of a parachute. Sane brother in auto catches them as they land, knocks down the side of a nearby parsonage and is married to the girl, Dorothy Mackaill. Exit Leon with his promised reward—ten thousand—no, not dollars, but cigar coupons.

And yet there is method in his madness, for the result is an invariably amusing and entertaining farce-comedy. Errol, with not many chances to use his flexible legs, does an excellent bit of pantomimic work as the tramp playing the role of the god-from-the-machine. His reactions to the discovery of the manias of his fellow prisoners in the sanitarium are diversified and well done.

The Cast: Leon Errol, Dorothy Mackaill, Kenneth MacKenna, Jack Raymond, Warren Cook, Tom Blauke, Charles Slattery. Director, Fred Newmeyer. Supervisor, Earl Hudson. Author, J. Storer Clouston.

THEME: Hero finds self in a lunatic asylum. Escapes to rescue girl from marrying on a dirigible the crazy twin brother of boy wrongly detained in asylum.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Dirigible sequences.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Leon Errol's "Sally," "Louis the Fourteenth" and "Follies" fame. Dirigible scenes.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent.

Length, 5,521 feet. Released January 2.
Produced and distributed by First National.

Between Dangers

Buddy Roosevelt Comes Into His Own

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE hero certainly got off to a bad start. He is discovered blackjacked in the saloon's backroom with the papers proving his right to the ranch missing. And then when he arrives by freight in the town near which his property is located he gets mixed up in a bank robbery. A citizen is shot and inasmuch as the unshaved, disreputable-looking stranger who is found on the sidewalk near the bank has nothing to prove his identity, naturally he is suspected of the murder and the robbery. The three crooks who robbed him back East in the saloon see to it that this suspicion is spread with the result that Buddy is threatened with a lynching. The sheriff, Charles E. Thurston, and his daughter, Alma Rayford, are about the only people who have any faith in the young man. As though the preceding troubles were not enough for one mortal in one moving picture, the foreman of the ranch which Buddy has inherited is a crook. He killed the elder Roosevelt and was the ringleader of the bank robbery.

While obviously not much money has been spent on the production, it is good entertainment. Melodramatic in the extreme, yet it is good, plausible melodrama, well directed and well acted. There are thrills galore and many exciting, hectic situations.

The Cast: Buddy Roosevelt (star), Alma Rayford, Rennis Young, Al Taylor, Allen Sewall, Charles E. Thurston, E. W. Borman, Hank Bell. Author, Walter J. Coburn. Director and continuity, Richard Thorpe.

THEME: Hero inherits ranch but, having lost his papers, has to prove ownership. Fights two sets of crooks to win sheriff's daughter and vindication.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Intricate and interesting plot. Thrills throughout. Good direction and acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Foregoing.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent.

Length, 4,533 feet. Released February 13.
Produced by Action Pictures, Inc. (Lester F. Scott, Jr.).

Stage Madness

Virginia Valli Dances and Pays the Piper

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS original story by one of William Fox's new bright young men, Polan Banks, converted into a scenario by the older and more experienced Randall H. Faye, tells the oft-told tale of the woman who prefers a stage career to that of domesticity. Victor Schertzinger directed. And for this preference the woman pays as she is reputed to do in life for most things, although I think the generalization is a bit broad. Quite as often it is the man who has to dig emotionally as well as financially for what he seeks and sometimes finds. Virginia Valli leaves the French ballet stage to marry an impoverished artist. She tires of matrimony and maternity and listens to the voice of her manager and not platonic friend. He does make her famous but at the cost of husband and child.

It is not a particularly striking picture, but has the merit of rather continued interest even if you can almost foretell the outcome. Old-fashioned and making an obvious appeal to the sentimentally inclined it never really grips as you would like to have it. Good performances are given by the featured player and by Carmenati, Tellegen and Bradford. Schertzinger has done as good a directorial job as might be expected with the material at hand.

The Cast: Virginia Valli, Tullio Carmenati, Virginia Bradford, Lou Tellegen, Richard Walling, Tyler Brooke, Lillian Knight, Bodil Rosing. Director, Victor Schertzinger. Story, Polan Banks. Scenario, Randall H. Faye. Cameraman, Glenn McWilliams.

THEME: Woman deserts husband and child for stage career. Pays penalty. Breaks legs, murders lover and dies.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Good acting of three principals. Interest a stage story usually possesses for public. Spectacular sequence in which principal characters appear.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Prominence Valli, Carmenati and Tellegen. Preceding P.H.L.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Length, 5,320 feet. Released January 9.

The Last Trail

Tom Mix, Tony and Zane Grey Co-star

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ONE thing will always be found in a Tom Mix Western—and for this there is invariably gratitude—and that is a novel twist. In addition there is almost always a plethora of action. "The Last Trail" is no exception. Zane Grey wrote the novel, which probably 'steen million followers of his know, and John Stone did the scenario from this for Mix to star in under Lew Seiler's direction. The combination is effective. It starts off most auspiciously with Mix riding like mad to get back to the stockade with a girl whom he has rescued from the Indians. This serves as sort of a prologue to the actual story. The latter concerns itself with the son who is born to this white girl and left by her to the care of Tom. And the inevitable love affair with "the girl," in this case Tom Geraghty's daughter Carmelita. Of course, there has to be a villain. He is William Davidson and he is some villain, for he robs stage coaches that carry ore from his own mines. It is the best illustration I know of of playing both ends against the middle. But in the end Tom unmasks him. To make a trust of this crookedness, William tries to get the stagecoach mail and express-carrying concession into his own hands so that there will be no question about the future success of the hold-ups. This leads to an intensely thrilling race between competitors for the concession.

It is good melodrama and worthy of star and excellent supporting cast. Credit goes several ways, taking in Tom, his horse, company director and cameraman Dan Clark.

THEME: Western drama. Conflict between hero and villain, latter head of express robber gang.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Grey and Mix's respective popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

A One Man Game

Fred Humes Picture Has Novel Twists

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE hero (Fred Humes) didn't look so good when he was unshaved and wearing a somewhat dirty shirt and unpressed trousers, unshined shoes, etc., so he decided to become a mold of fashion and a mirror of form (or something like that to indicate a sartorial renaissance) to win Lotus Thompson. There was no reason why he should because he was one of the leading ranch owners of the neighborhood and one of the directors of the local bank. Had he made known these facts to Lotus and her supercilious movie mother, Julia Griffith, there would have been no necessity for him to dress up and pretend to be a Duke. But then you might rightly object, there would have been no story. And right you are. But it was worth while because Fred discovered that he really was in love with the tomboyish Fay Wray and she with him. Hence the end shows them going into the office of the justice of peace across the street from the attempted bank robbery. They didn't need to come out for us to know what happened in there.

Good stuff. Snappy with several novel twists. Will make friends for star and company and hold those already following Humes' career.

THEME: Western. Rich ranch owner masquerades as a Duke. Wins love of ranch owner's daughter instead of effete, hard-boiled Easterner. Blocks bank robbery and does a few other child's play stunts.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Humes' metamorphosis into a dude. Ingenious twist to plot. Good photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Preceding.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 4,689 feet. Released January 30.

Regional News from Correspondents

Albany

H. C. BISSELL, former manager of the Universal Exchange in this city, is now hitting the high spots over the country, having accepted a position of special representative for Tiffany and visiting key points only. E. J. Smith, general manager for Tiffany, and S. F. Juergens, treasurer, were here during the week, going over matters with Jack Krause, local manager.

Boris Samsonoff, of New York, formerly a salesman for Metro-Goldwyn in Albany, has become local manager for the Chase Pictures Corporation.

Mrs. Belle M. Taylor, owner of the Richmond Theatre in North Adams, Mass., left last week for Europe. This is the second pleasure trip Mrs. Taylor has made to the Continent.

Carrying about four yards and a half of railroad tickets, Mrs. Tony Veiller, wife of the manager of the Mark Ritz in Albany, left on Sunday for Palm Beach where she will remain the rest of the winter. Tony went as far as New York City and returned later in the week.

John B. Harte, who has two theatres in Bennington, Vt., left during the past week with his wife and five children for Florida, where they will remain until spring. Relatives of Mr. Harte will look after the theatres during his absence.

When James Ruane, one time a well-known resident of Albany, went with the Empire Theatre in North Adams, Mass., he was given a two weeks' trial. He has now been there for four years and it looks as though he was good for many more to come.

The Strand in Ogdensburg has just installed the low intensity arc projection apparatus and likewise a new screen.

One of the oldest men operating a motion picture theatre in this section is L. E. Avery, of Brandon, Vt., who is sixty-four years of age, and who was formerly in the feed business. Mr. Avery is conducting a fine theatre and appears to be making a success of his latest venture.

Mrs. Henry Sequin, of Rouses Point, is still at the Plattsburg Hospital, recovering from an operation. Some of the film salesmen from Albany called at the hospital last week and spent a few minutes with Mrs. Sequin.

Jerry LaRock, theatre owner of Warrensburg, claims to be the best "rum" player in all Northern New York, and has issued a challenge to any other exhibitor in the territory.

Al Barton, who is a partner of Lew Fischer in the theatre at Ticonderoga, is now recuperating in a hospital in that place, following an operation of a few days ago.

Rapid progress is being made these days on the new business block being erected by Fred Mausert in Glens Falls, and which is located directly in front of his theatre. Entrance to the house will be through a handsome marble arcade.

Charles Marshall, of Ausable Forks, has returned from a trip to Williamsport, Pa. W. F. Kennedy, of the Lyceum in Champlain, was in town during the week.

Fenton Lawlor, of the First National Exchange, had an experience last week that he will not soon forget. He started for Parishville, but took the wrong road, and after going for two or three miles, inquired from a farmer if he was on the right road. Mr. Lawlor was informed that his car was the first one on the road since last fall and probably the last one until spring. After considerable shoveling, Mr. Lawlor managed to make his way back to the main highway and has cut Parishville off his list until spring.

Uly S. Hill, manager of the Strand houses in Albany and Troy, was in New York nearly all of last week going over matters with the officials of the Stanley Company.

Associates of Edward Hochstim in the First National Exchange presented Mr. and Mrs. Hochstim with a chest of silver when they returned last week from their honeymoon.

Ben Stern has been running bachelor hall, as well as managing the Lincoln Theatre in Troy. Mrs. Stern has been spending a week or two with relatives in Atlantic City.

According to a report current along Film Row, Miss Jane Halloran, secretary of the Albany Film Board of Trade, will be married in April to Robert Bertschey, formerly of Albany, but who has been manager of the Capitol Theatre at Riverhead for a considerable period.

John A. May, comptroller of the Schine Circuit, and Pete Dana, also of the same company, were in town during the week, appearing before the Film Board of Trade.

As a mere suggestion, two new Peerless low intensity arc lights have been installed at the Avon and Olympic theatres in Watertown. Ray Woodford, electrical expert employed by the Schine Bros., came to Watertown and supervised the installation.

If Lew Freiberg and Al Marchetti, both well-known figures on Albany's Film Row, will but release the brakes they will be able to shove their car much easier. This is a suggestion coming from several exchange managers and others who had gathered at the Albany Film Board of Trade last week, and glancing out, witnessed the futile efforts of the two associates on the opposite side of the street.

The Jefferson, in Auburn, dedicated a new $25,000 organ last week, featuring "Dusty" at the console. The house will now give an organ specialty each week, as a part of its program of entertainment.

Although A. J. Pincus, branch feature sales manager for Pathe, arrived with wet feet after a trudge through slush to visit Paul S. Murray in Middlebury, Vt., he brought home the bacon in the way of several contracts and appeared satisfied.

Buffalo

THE new Fox theatre, now under construction at Main and Chippewa, will be named the Great Lakes Theatre. Nine persons submitted that title in a $500 prize contest. Work on the new house is progressing rapidly and it is hoped to have the theatre ready for opening by May.

The Victoria Theatre, at West Ferry and Grant, is to install the Vitaphone, according to an announcement by George E. Williams, manager.

E. J. Smith, general sales manager of Tiffany Productions, Inc., was in town last week end, conferring with Joe Miller, local manager of the Renown Exchange, calling on friends along Film Row and visiting with exhibitors. From Buffalo, E. J. went to Chicago and Minneapolis.

William A. Haynes has resigned as manager of the Lafayette Square Theatre. It is understood he plans to assume new duties in New Orleans. His successor has not as yet been named.

The Playhouse, formerly the Palace, which has been closed for some time undergoing repairs and alterations, has re-opened in Cattaraugus, N.Y. The house now has a new lighting system, new decorations in silver gray and maroon and a new location for the projection booth. New lenses have been installed in the machines. The balcony is equipped with new wicker chairs.

Four brothers, Nicholas J., Constantine J., Theophilos J. and Basil Vassiliadis and Barney Wohwinkel are planning a new theatre to be built at Goodyear Avenue and Nevada Street. It will cost $500,000.

"Rudy" Interbitzen has resigned from the sales staff at the First National exchange. He had been covering the Syracuse territory.

The Buffalo Motion Picture Projectors Union held its annual ball the past week in Eagle's Hall. A goodly throng was present and there was much joy.

O. T. Schroeppel, formerly with Universal, has been appointed office manager of the Renown Pictures exchange.

Construction is to start at once on the new Keith-Albee Theatre in Rochester, under the personal supervision of the Banorge corporation of Rochester. The plans call for a seating capacity of 3,000.

Harold Ramsay, organist at Shea's Buffalo, played the past week at Shea's North Park as guest organist. It is reported that he also will play a week soon at the Shea, Kensington.

Ben Wallerstein, owner and operator of the Commodore and Broadway theatres, Buffalo, recently spent several days in New York City looking 'em (pictures, of course) over.

The secretary of the Buffalo Film Board of Trade, Miss Emma M. Abplanalp, has advised the Motion Picture News that in a recent issue appeared an error in reference to the publishing of a Buffalo film trade directory. This, Miss Abplanalp informs us, was not published by the Film Board of Trade but through the generosity of the Motion Picture Theatres Association, J. H. Michael, chairman.

Leon Shafer has been appointed manager of the State Theatre in Rochester, recently acquired by the Schine Theatrical Corporation. The new Schine Liberty Theatre will open about March 1st in Kodak Town.

Daniel B. Cunningham has sold the Palace Theatre in Cattaraugus, N.Y., to Rhode Rathjen and Wallace, Inc.

Otto Siegel, formerly with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sales staff in Buffalo, has been engaged as a member of the local Universal sales forces. Otto is one of the best known fillum peddlers in this neck of the woods.

The Lafayette Square Theatre has contracted with Warner Brothers for the installation of the Vitaphone, says an announcement by that house, following a visit to New York of Morris Slotkin and W. A. Hayn, general manager and manager, respectively. The first performance will be given the week of February 27th.

Atlanta

FACING the glare of lights which rendered the front and marquee of the theatre brighter than day, thousands of Birmingham people crowded their way into the new Empire, which opened last Friday night.

There was an air of pleased expectancy when Musical Director Villani swung his orchestra into the opening bars of the National Anthem, promptly at 7:30 P.M.

Managing Director Jack Cunningham then made the introductory address of welcome and presentation of the theatre to the people of Birmingham.

The Empire Orchestra of twelve pieces, under the direction of Giddio Villani, presented a musical program varied and pleasing.

Birmingham adds another handsome moving picture house to her already large list and the latest recruit is one of the handsomest in the South.

Among the many representatives of the various film exchanges present were: Ben Cammack, Earle E. Griggs, and J. W. Greenleaf, of Universal: C. L. Peavy and A. R. McRae, of F.B.O.; Hank Hearn and Bill Specht, of Liberty-Specialty; John Mangham, of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions: C. R. Beacham and P. A. Strachan, of First National; Mat Whitham, of Fox; L. J. Duncan, P.D.C.

Local and out-of-town exhibitors in attendance included Dick Kennedy, of the Rialto; Willis Grist and Danny, of the Galax and Strand; Henry and Mrs. Hury, of the Champion and Frolic; Ben Jaffe, of the Palace, and Joseph S. MacHenry, all of Birmingham, together with Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Thornton, of Carbon Hill; Joe Wheeler, of Montgomery; Mrs. A. H. Watson and Edwin Watson, of Montevallo; Earl R. Collins, of Anniston; Harry E. Pierce, of Talledega. C. K. Howell, the architect who designed the Empire, was also an honored guest.

Messrs. Charles, Frank and John Merritt, of the Marvin Wise Circuit, who operate the Empire, are to be congratulated upon the excellence of their newest theatre. Managing Director Cunningham and Publicity Director Sam Fox, whose untiring efforts brought about such a splendid premiere.

After the final curtain, the Empire owners and staff entertained at an informal banquet and dance at Birmingham's newest hotel, the Bankhead, where all participants helped celebrate the advent of Birmingham's finest moving picture theatre.

Harry E. Pierce, one of the most popular men in the Southern film circles, has purchased the Rivoli Theatre, formerly operated by Earl R. Collins, at Talledega, Ala.

Earl R. Collins has purchased the Lyric Theatre from F. T. Banks, of Anniston. Earl intends to make the Lyric one of the finest show houses in the South and will completely renovate the house, putting in the best available attractions of stage and screen.

Dan Michaelove, Southern manager of Universal Theatres, and assistant sales director of Universal, accompanied by Willard Patterson, were Birmingham visitors the past week. They were joined here by Homer George, former manager of the Atlanta Theatre.

J. C. Watlington, formerly of Dallas, is now in charge of Inter-State's Trianon. Wally, as he is known to his friends, is one of the best publicity men on Karl Hoblitzelle's staff and is, personally, a prince of a fellow. An informal welcoming party, consisting of Raymond Willis, of the Lyric, Willis Grist, of the Galax, and Danny of the Strand, presented Wally with the keys to Birmingham.

Sam Early, formerly of Stafford, Ala., has taken over the Lyric, Townley, formerly operated by C. B. Hendon, on February 1st.

J. H. Butner, manager of the Atlanta branch of Educational, is on an extended trip to Florida. Mr. Butner recently was awarded the E. W. Hammons cup for December.

John W. Mangham, Jr., Atlanta branch manager of Arthur C. Bromberg Attractions, left the latter part of last week for a business trip through Florida. He expects to be away for probably a month or six weeks.

W. G. Underwood, general manager of Liberty-Specialty Film Distributing Corporation, with headquarters in Dallas, Texas, spent several days in Atlanta last week, during which time he conferred with Carl Weeks, district manager, and Hank Hearn, Atlanta branch manager, of Liberty.

L. Dalafas, who operates the Lyric Theatre at Gordon, Ga., was a visitor on Film Row the early part of this week.

Harry G. Ballance, district manager for Famous Players-Lasky, with headquarters in Atlanta, paid a visit to Charlotte last week.

Ben Y. Cammack, branch manager for Universal in Atlanta, visited Nashville recently.

E. A. Booth, of Greenville, Tenn., president and general manager of Booth Enterprises, operating a chain of motion picture and vaudeville houses in Tennessee, was in Atlanta last Tuesday, accompanied by C. S. Jones, who is associated with Mr. Booth in the management of several of the houses.

Cincinnati

THE following officers were elected to serve the Cincinnati Film Board of Trade at a recent meeting of that organization: Frederick Strief (Universal), president; Hugh Owens (Famous-Players), vice-president; Maurice White (Educational), treasurer. Evelyn McNamee was reappointed secretary, which office she has held for some time. Roy Haines (First National), retiring president, was presented with a handsome wrist watch at a banquet given in his honor at Hotel Alms.

Rudolph Knoepfle, who has been the managerial head of the Fox Exchange in Cincinnati for the past eleven years, has resigned to take up activities in New York. He has been succeeded by Ira Cohen.

Considerable excitement not a part of the regular program was given patrons of the Boulevard Theatre, Cincinnati, recently when Calvin Newport, an usher, attempted to make a man in the audience vacate the space he was occupying in the aisle.

Anderson and Giles, colored owners of the new theatre built especially for members of their race on West Fifth Street, Dayton, Ohio, announce that the house will be ready to open soon.

George Tosheff, Columbus, Ohio, announces that he will do some very extensive, as well as very expensive remodeling on his theatre, located at 1395 Parsons Avenue, in the Ohio capital.

The Price Block at Norwalk, Ohio, has been purchased by Wesley Price, who acquired the interests held by his relatives. The Linwood Theatre is located in the block, of which Price is now exclusive owner.

Phillip J. Wood, who is at the head of the M.P.T.O, Ohio, at Columbus, has been spending part of his time looking up. old friends at Dayton, Ohio.

The Palace Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio, is celebrating its seventh anniversary with appropriate ceremonies. Much white space has been donated by local dailies for interesting readers covering the event.

Florida

FIVE of Tampa's leading theatres are minus their managers this week, they having gone to the state meeting of managers of Publix houses held in Miami. The five missing managers are, James M. Weist, of the Tampa; George B. Peck, of the Victory; O. G. Finley, of the Strand; J. H. McLaughlin, of the Franklin, and A. C. Thornton, of the Seminole. All these houses are owned by Consolidated Amusements and operated under the Publix system. General Manager John B. Carroll also accompanied the managers. Sam Katz, president of the Publix Theatres Corporation, and a party of officials will meet with the Florida managers, numbering one hundred. The meetings will be held at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel.

Charles A. Sappal, president of the Maceo Amusement Company, and S.-B.-T. Properties of Tampa, was forced to take a three days' vacation in bed, caused by a strained back. Charlie has a beautiful home just west of Howard Avenue. Lately he bought a connecting lot and is having an Italian style sunken garden built on it. He jumped in to help with a heavy marble slab which was being moved and wrenched his back.

Bradenton is to have a new theatre to be known as the Starland. The house is being built by Frank E. Kimball, who will manage it also. It will be ready for the grand opening the first week in February.

The new Florida Theatre at Haines City opened this week. Cecil Fernandez, projection expert of Tampa, installed the booth equipment and supervised the first show. Cecil says the new house is a beauty and their projection is second to none. E. P. Line is the manager.

Des Moines

DOROTHY GOTTERMAN and Cecelia Hughes, of the Universal office, added romance to the busy round of business when they returned from the Christmas holidays wearing engagement rings. Miss Gotterman is bookkeeper and Miss Hughes stenographer, and they will continue on the job for some time, they say.

The Des Moines Film Board of Trade annual dinner and get-together of exhibitors and exchange men was held at the Fort Des Moines Hotel on the last day of January. The party was planned by a committee headed by Les Phillips, of the Producers Distributors office.

Two new machines, equipped with Peerless lamps, were bought from the Des Moines office of the National Theatre Supply Company by A. H. Blank for the new theatre at Newton. This theatre, which has recently been named the Capitol, is in the new Maytag Hotel Building and while the outside of the theatre is not complete and there is much work to be done on the interior, it is thought probable that it will be ready to open within sixty days. The lobby frames for the new theatre were also purchased.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Jones, of the Gem Theatre at Des Moines, are inaugurating something new for this city at their theatre. Off the lobby there is a small office and here they have installed a popcorn machine. Last week they gave away a bag of popcorn to each patron. It was also marking the beginning of a new serial which is being run at the Gem. Later Mr. and Mrs. Jones may add candy bars to their stock for sale.

The Opera House at New Market changed hands last week. The theatre was sold by D. Pace to Lacey and Schrack, who seem to be newcomers in the theatre business.

Visitors in Film Row last week were more numerous than usual. Among those who visited the film offices was Fred Wewurka, of the Colonial Theatre at Osage. He said that he is looking for several more theatres to buy. C. W. Kale, of Truro; Mr. Michael of Scranton, Mr. Holt of Montezuma, Mr. Carrigher of Clear Lake, W. W. Booth of Belle Plain, H. A. Debolt of Cedar Rapids, John Waller of Osceola, Joe Stack of Carol, and Mr. Rhodes of Sory City, were also in to book up pictures.

R. L. McLean, representative of Producers Distributors from the St. Louis office, has just returned after several weeks spent in Des Moines territory on special exploitation.

A new screen was purchased for the theatre at Hildrith, Iowa. The sale was made through the office of the National Theatre Supply Company.

Rube Wagel, booker of the Producers Distributors, is back at the office almost as good as new after quite an extended illness.

Something new in Film Row is the establishment of a poster exchange at the offices of the Tiffany Film Company. According to the comments of the film men this innovation is highly acceptable and will be a most successful development. The poster exchange department is in charge of Ted Yarowsky, who gained his experience at the offices of Universal in Des Moines. P. Wintrob, who came from the Omaha office to take charge of the Des Moines office of Tiffany, installed the new department.

Tom Arthur, manager of the Cecil Theatre at Mason City, received a mystery package through the mail which investigation proved to contain $6,442. The note enclosed with the money said that it was in payment of a "debt of many years." But Mr. Arthur has no clue as to who the debtor was. The package, which bore a Dubuque return address, was addressed to "Thomas Arthur."

The Woodard Brothers of Story City, recently sold their theatre there. The theatre was bought by E. A. Rhodes, a Marengo man. Possession of the house was given on January 24. One of the Woodward Brothers, who has been operating the house, plans to go to Colorado, where he will have charge of a picture house. W. J. Muller, theatre broker, who reports the change in ownership, says that he believes Mr. Woodward will locate at Brighton, Colo. Mr. Woodward's brother has been a silent partner in the theatre at Story City.

The theatre at New London has changed hands. This theatre, which was named the Alamo, is now owned by Mr. S. Perkins. Mr. Perkins was previously an exhibitor in Iowa, but he has not been in the theatre business of recent years.

A transfer of ownership was made of the house at Albert City. The house was previously owned by W. W. Kischer and will now be under the management of Fred Kischer.

Detroit

C. H. MACGOWAN, general sales manager for Columbia Pictures Corporation, was a visitor in Detroit last week, where he was in conference with Branch Manager A. W. Bowman.

Arthur Whyte, of the Keith-Albee Circuit, and Duke Hayden, of Producers Distributing Corporation, attended a meeting which Bob Cotton held at the local Detroit Exchange.

Royal A. Baker, Detroit police censor, has moved over to the Columbia office, where he will make his headquarters.

Jim Allen, manager for Warner Bros., has returned from New York, where he had attended a meeting with the home office officials in regard to the Vitaphone. Arrangements have been made to install the Vitaphone in several towns in Michigan, including Flint, Mt. Clemens, Jackson, Muskegon and Battle Creek. While in New York Mr. Allen had heard four new sets of the Vitaphone which he says are far greater than the first.

E. H. Beck, city salesman for A.B.C., has finally let out a secret which he was holding for a long time. The other day he made the announcement that his family is growing, as he had become a father to a baby boy.

Denny Vane, who operates the Tibbetts Theatre at Coldwater, Michigan, is contemplating closing his house for a few weeks so as to remodel the entire theatre and install a new organ.

Al Moritz, manager of the Tiffany Exchange, has returned from a trip through the State.

Al Livesy, salesman for Columbia, was called to Philadelphia last week owing to the sudden death of his mother.

R. C. Seery, who has been manager of First National's Chicago office, has been appointed district manager. He will have supervision of the Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee, Omaha, and Des Moines exchanges.

Henry S. Koppin, of the Woodward Theatre Company, opened his new theatre last week, the Calvin, in Dearborn. This new house seats 1,800, all on the ground floor.

George Johnston, for the past year in charge of the publicity department for the Kleist Theatres in Pontiac, is now in charge of all publicity for the National Amusement Corporation and Jean Goldkette orchestra.

Workmen have begun the tearing down of the buildings which occupy the site of where the new United Artists Theatre is to be put up.

RALPH K. MOSIMAN, manager of the Rex Theatre at Oshkosh, was in the city for a short while on Wednesday. Mr. Mosiman's wife's illness curtailed his visit.

The M.-G.-M. Efficiency Club had a very enjoyable first anniversary party, according to the members. About thirty-five gathered at the Elks Club on the 22nd, for dinner, after which they elected officers for the ensuing year. Every officer was retained in his position for another year. Sam Shurman will continue as president, Miss R. M. Grant as vice-president, Miss Viola Rasch as recording secretary, R. J. Sickels as treasurer, and Leslie Jacques as sergeant-at-arms. S. A. Shirley was elected honorary president.

Neil Duffy, of the Elite Theatre at Appleton, was in the city on Tuesday, arranging his bookings and visiting his friends among the exchanges.

New York and New Jersey

JOSEPH McGINLEY, East Orange's 185-pound film critic and censor who functions on the local police force, and who not long ago crashed the big daily newspapers in a story dealing with his review and approval of a motion picture characterized by a member of the clergy as offensive to public decency, has undoubtedly profited by his contact with the celluloid drama; that is, to the extent of making an arrest in the most approved motion picture fashion.

In response to a call to the police station last Monday, Patrolman McGinley and his assistants surrounded a stationery store in the process of being robbed. McGinley went to the roof, noiselessly opened the skylight and let fall his whole 185 pounds on the suspect. When the man revived, he and an alleged accomplice outside were charged with attempted robbery.

The latest report concerning Morris Jacks, Red Bank exhibitor who has twice been arrested and charged with violation of the New Jersey vice and immorality act, is that Mr. Jacks is again operating seven days in the week, having obtained a restraining order which permitted such a procedure. In the meantime, relief is looked for in the passage of the bill before the State legislative body, which, if passed, would grant all communities local option.

"I knew him when," said Pelham Lynton of the Pathe exchange, speaking of the producer of "Drag," that much at present discussed nursery tale that will be presented in drama form to Patterson theatregoers in the Lyceum Theatre on Thursday evening, this week. "Yes," continued Lynton, "and he's doing very nicely, thank you, now!"

And by the way, does everyone in Lynton's territory know that this salesman who has made an enviable reputation for himself selling Pathe comedies, was for a period of a dozen or so years connected with important parts in the legitimate drama, playing with such famous stars as Lionel Atwill, Lil' Langtry and others just as well known at that time.

Incidentally, with the advent of legitimate shows at the Lyceum, Patterson, that house will discontinue motion pictures for the time being.

Walter Reade, head of Reade Theatrical Enterprises of New Jersey and elsewhere, left last Sunday night for a six weeks' sojourn at Palm Beach, Fla. In order to be sure of having a reliable brand of transportation while there, Mr. Reade took his Rolls-Royce with him.

While on the subject of Reid's (this one spells his name differently) let us advise that Al' Reid, former manager of the Mosque Theatre, Newark, will in the future have the supervision of all of the downtown Newark theatres controlled by the Fabian-Stanley organization. M. S. Cullen will take Mr. Reid's position at the Mosque.

Another item of news concerning the Fabian-Stanley Company is that Cameron Dooley will handle publicity on all Patterson theatres belonging to that circuit.

By this time, Morris Ginsberg, proprietor of the Liberty Theatre, Jersey City, which opened last Saturday night, probably has all his difficulties straightened out. It is said that Morris was reminded by curious local officials that he had forgotten that formality of taking out some sort of license necessary to continous operation of the house.

Fox Films and Pathe are leading the clubs in the local basket ball league.

On January 20th Fox Films Five defeated the Consolidated Team in a close game at Meinhard Hall. The next league games will take ploce this Friday night at Stuyvesant Gym. Pathe will play Fox Films in their first get-together of the tournament, and Metro-Goldwyn will meet Consolidated Films. Opening game will start at 8 P.M.

Standing of the Clubs

	Won	Lost
Fox	2	0	1.000
Pathe	1	0	1.000
Consolidated	1	1	.500
Metro	0	1	.000
United Artists	0	2	.000

The New York branch of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., is now busily engaged in a date booking drive for the week of February 5 to 12 to celebrate the second anniversary of the appointment of Arthur Greenblatt as manager of this office. The sales force is putting on this campaign in the nature of a testimonial to Mr. Greenblatt, and advance reports on the bookings of Educational product thus far indicate that it will prove a big week in the history of the New York branch.

For several weeks bookers have been concentrating on dates for the week of February 5 in the territory of the New York branch, which includes Long Island, northern New Jersey and part of New York State in addition to Greater New York City.

Loew's Grand Theatre, a new edifice located at Fordham Road and Jerome Avenue, with a seating capacity of 3,000, will be formally opened the evening of February 17th, with a single performance. A number of screen, stage and radio stars will actively participate in the opening ceremonies. All seats will be reserved for the opening performance, the theatre adopting its regular policy of continuous shows of vaudeville and feature pictures combined, from one to eleven o'clock daily, the following day. The addition of the Fordham house swells the total number of Loew theatres throughout Greater New York to more than fifty-five theatres.

The recent zero temperature in Cleveland was nothing in the young life of Leo Devaney, local Universal Exchange manager. He had just come back from Montreal, where the mercury dropped to 25 degrees below. Whatever warmth there was in Montreal during his stay there was shown at the Princess Theatre during the opening of "Michael Strogoff." That's what took Devaney to the cold region at this time.

Local Universal salesmen want Exchange Manager Leo Devaney to go to Europe this summer, along with his chief, Carl Laemmle. They also want to be among those present at the annual Universal convention this year. To win these plums they are working overtime in the present ten-weeks' sales drive. The top man in each exchange gets a free trip to the "U" convention, and the captain of the winning exchange gets a boat ride to the other side of the pond as a guest of Mr. Laemmle.

Central Penn

ANNOUNCEMENT was made late in January, by Luke Gring, one of the financial backers of the Chambersburg Amusement Company, which erected a new theatre on South Main Street, that city, that the formal opening of the $200,000 modern photoplay house would take place with special exercises on the evening of February 3. Mr. Gring will personally manage the theatre, to the construction of which he devoted his individual attention. He formerly operated several theatres in Pottsville for the George Bennethum theatrical interests, but relinquished his work there last Fall to undertake the direction of the new Chambersburg enterprise.

It is expected that work will start in February on the construction of the new theatre, with seating capacity of 1,700, that is to be erected in Pottstown, by D. E. Hahn. The theatre will be a part of a structure which also will house a sixty-room hotel. The plans were drawn by the Ballinger Company, architects, of Philadelphia.

The Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, entertained 300 orphans from various institutions at a regular matinee performance at the new West Side Theatre. Each kid was given a box of candy. The reception committee consisted of Arthur Luce, house manager; Walter Jordan, assistant manager; and W. J. Cosgrove and John A. Ryan, of the Comerford home office force.

Studio Briefs

Edward Sedgwick, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director, will make the first picture starring Jackie Coogan under his new contract, "The Bugle Call." The scenario has been prepared by Josephine Lovett, who also wrote the script for "Annie Laurie." It was originally announced that Reginald Barker would direct "The Bugle Call," but a change in program was necessary as the result of Barker's elaborate plans in connection with his next, "The Branding Iron."

Sam E. Rork's production for First National, "The Notorious Lady," has now gone to the cutting room. The final scene registered by the camera was that wherein Lewis Stone, the featured player, and Earl Metcalfe, also playing one of the important roles, swim a turbulent river pursued by Africans.

George Kuwa, small Japanese screen player, has joined the cast of "The Night Bride," in which Marie Prevost stars under E. Mason Hopper's direction.

Johnny Mack Brown, star halfback on last year's renowned Alabama Crimson eleven, has signed a long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will appear in one of that company's forthcoming productions.

Alexander Korda's first work as a director for First National will be on "The Stolen Bride." Carey Wilson, who wrote this original story, will also produce the picture. The director, accompanied by his wife, arrived from Europe recently, having signed a long-term contract with First National. Production will start about the middle of February.

Mary Forbes, British stage and screen actress, and former owner of her own theatre in London, the Ambassador, has been assigned an important role in Marion Davies' starring production, "Tillie the Toiler."

Maurice Kains, who has a role in "Tell It to the Marines," has again been placed under contract at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Kains started as a cameraman and first won attention as an actor when he posed to demonstrate a new lens effect. He has appeared in "The Masked Bride," "Paris," "Slide, Kelly, Slide" and others.

Starrett Ford, former colonel in the United States regular army, has been made production manager of "Turkish Delight," which Paul Sloane is to direct at the De Mille studio. J. Badaracco will be first cameraman.

Anton Vaverka, stage and screen character, has been given a role in "The Grey Hat," now being directed by Harry Millarde for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. With the choice of Vaverka for this role casting is completed.

The first directorial work with which Charles Barbin will occupy himself under his new First National contract will be "Diamonds in the Rough," in which Milton Sills will be featured. Mary O'Hara is now writing the scenario for "Diamonds in the Rough," which deals with the new diamond fields of South America and the stampede. Al Rockett is to produce the photodrama for First National and work is scheduled to start the early part of this month.

Elliott Clawson, scenarist who has been associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during the past year, has signed a new contract to write exclusively for that company. Included among Clawson's adaptations of stories is "The Branding Iron."

Al Rockett, First National producer, has announced the selection of Arthur Stone for the role of Jimmy in support of Richard Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid," which has just gone into production. Two pugilists, Jack Sparr and Mickey McMinn, will appear in the prize ring sequences.

D'Arcy Corrigan, screen character actor, has been added to the cast of "Old Heidelberg," in which Ernst Lubitsch is directing Ramon Novarro in the part made famous by Richard Mansfield. The story is being given an elaborate production and, unlike the stage play, is taken directly from the original novel by Meyer Foorster, in a scenario by Hans Kraely.

J. Grubb Alexander, author of the continuities for three of the current F.B.O. Gold Bonds, "Bigger Than Barnum's," "Breed of the Sea" and "Rose of the Tenements," is working on a fourth script, "The City of Shadows," for that organization. This is expected to go into production around the first day of February. It is an adaptation of Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "The Lark."

Production has been started at Elmira, N.Y., on a series of twelve two-reel comedies co-featuring Betty Jordon and Dick Coy, announces Harry Marsh, president of Silver Eagle Productions, Inc. The former has worked for various producing organizations and was recently with Burton King in his last George Walsh picture. Coy comes from Mack Sennett. Elmira capital backs the new company organized by Harry Marsh, a former cameraman with Fox and more recently general manager for Ricardo Films.

More additions to the cast of "Moulders of Men," the Elks' special, which Ralph Ince is directing for F.B.O., include Eugene Palette, Jola Mendez, William Knight and Rex Lease. The story is the work of John Chapman Hilder, managing editor of the Elks Magazine. It is being produced with the endorsement of the Elks.

Sam Hellman, humorist, was this week assigned the preparation of the titles for "Casey at the Bat," Wallace Beery's new baseball starring vehicle.

William K. Howard, director, is collaborating with C. Gardner Sullivan on the editing of "White Gold," his latest production, which stars Jetta Goudal.

Jason Robards is having a busy time of it relaying between the old Vitagraph lot and the main studio of Warner Bros. Though he is still knee-deep in his featured role in "Hill of Kentucky," starring Rin-Tin-Tin, he was forced to lend his talents to the "White Flannels'" unit, which Lloyd Bacon is directing at the main studio.

Louise Lorraine, who has an important role in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Winners of the Wilderness," has been given a new contract by that company. Her next role will be that of a cabaret dancer in "Red, White and Blue."

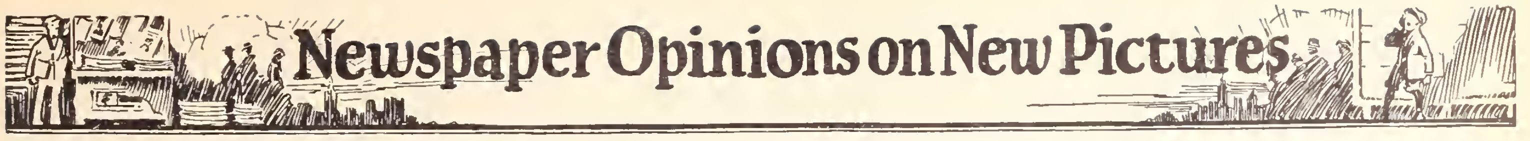
Malcolm Denny has been added to the cast of "The Night Bride," Marie Prevost's current starring vehicle for Metropolitan. Denny has appeared in no less than five productions on the Metropolitan lot during the past year.

Lincoln Steadman, the hefty young juvenile, has been signed to appear in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Red, White and Blue," the comedy-drama based on life at the military training camps. Steadman will play the role of a military student vacationing at a training camp in company with George K. Arthur, who has the leading male role, opposite Marceline Day. Gene Stone, who with Steadman appeared in "One Minute to Play," has also been added to the cast.

Rather than let her slight illness hold up production, which was scheduled this week for "Quarantined Rivals," Virginia Lee Crobin has withdrawn from the cast of this Gotham production. The vacancy has been filled, however, by Kathleen Collins, secured by arrangement with Charles R. Rogers, producer of the Ken Maynard Westerns, in which Miss Collins has been seen in feminine leads.

Production on two new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer productions, "The Grey Hat" and "The Branding Iron," has been begun at the Culver City studio of M-G-M. Only the interior scenes for "The Branding Iron" will be made at the studio. When these are finished the production unit will travel to Colorado, where locations have been chosen.

Working with Gilda Gray in her latest Paramount starring vehicle, "Cabaret," are her personal troupe of dancers, who accompanied her on her tour with "Aloma of the South Seas." The five steppers are Marie Del Greco, Ethel Britton, Yvonne Sinclair, Doreen Pastor and Carroll Lee.



Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Old Ironsides" — Paramount, Grauman's Egyptian Theatre, Los Angeles

Times: "'Old Ironsides' rides forth at the crest of the season as one of the year's supreme undertakings, and it is magnificent justification of a fine ambition. What 'The Covered Wagon' was to the conquest of the plains, this new historical feature is to our sea conquests. Its elaborateness, its manifest humanness, its far-reaching and historical import are exceptional. It has a bigness that lives up to expectation."

Daily News: "A new screen personality majestically swept into the hearts of perhaps the most brilliant first-night audience that ever answered the call of Sid Grauman. It was the frigate Constitution—'Old Ironsides.' No picture stars ever received a more glowing reception. 'Old Ironsides' is a picture that Paramount may well be proud of."

Examiner: "Sid Grauman believes that 'Old Ironsides' will play a year in his theatre . . . It never wavers in interest . . . It will be listed among the ten best of the year."

Express: "Lusty, salty and jovial, it proved to be a great patriotic photoplay, teeming with qualities which could compose big cinema accomplishment. Cruze has made screen history again. Never since 'The Birth of a Nation' has the cinema spread such an inspiring canvas as it has done with 'Old Ironsides.' No other picture can serve for comparison."

Herald: "It is a worthy successor to James Cruze's other brilliant picture, 'The Covered Wagon.' 'Old Ironsides' will live. I venture to say that 50 or 100 years hence it will bring the same thrills, the same keen appreciation and the same proud feeling that was engendered at the premiere last night. The producer has struck a higher note in the realm of 'Old Ironsides' than has ever been attained in any other picture."

"One Increasing Purpose"—Fox Films, Colonial Theatre, Indianapolis, Ind.

Star: "Excellent characterizations by every member of the cast . . . splendid photographic review of interesting spots in England . . . the story will please many and the direction is good throughout the picture."

"Summer Bachelors" — Fox Films, New Theatre, Baltimore, Md.

Evening Sun: "If you thought 'Flaming Youth' was pretty hotsytotsy, you owe it to yourself to visit the New Theatre. You have all heard about what the modern girl is coming to. Well, in 'Summer Bachelors' she has arrived and with . . . a great big bang. You will grow dim of eye seeking a stronger line-up than confronts you in this cast. Allan Dwan has directed the picture and done a neat job. We are quite sure you will like it well enough to recommend."

"The Country Beyond"—Fox Films, State Theatre, Huntington, W.Va.

Advertiser: "A Curwood masterpiece . . . gripping action and tense situations abound. Miss Borden appears in exotic and colorful role . . . a fiery yet pathetic figure of a girl. One of the most appealing of James Oliver Curwood's novels. Readers who have followed this fascinating romance will be delighted with the beauty of the country brought to them by the camera."

"Whispering Wires" — Fox Films, Keith's 105th Street Hippodrome, Cleveland, O.

Plain Dealer: "Melodrama of the thrilliest nature runs rampant in 'Whispering Wires.' It is a mystery thriller and, if you ask us, it is a good one. The acting honors go to the villains of the piece, Otto Matieson and Frank Campeau."

"The Last Trail"—Fox Films, Hippodrome, New York City

Herald Tribune: "They had a race for stage-coach drivers and we must say that it was as exciting as the chariot race in 'Ben-Hur.' 'The Last Trail' is one of Tom Mix' most entertaining films."

Morning Telegraph: "Hippodrome audiences thrilled by Mix. Will be a money-maker . . . Tom Mix is ever a figure to arouse admiration and wonder . . . The film starts off in a blaze of action . . . There is a stage-coach race that can't be beat and would be hard to equal. It resembles one of those historic races whose very re-telling makes a picture of bright colors."

News: "One might as well score another box-office hit for Tom Mix and the wonder horse, Tony . . . The most amusing thing in the picture is a bloodhound called Blinkerton. Blinkerton doesn't need to do anything to win a laugh except put in an appearance. Nature has fitted him with a comedy make-up."

World: "'The Last Trail' is by no means the least exciting bill of entertainment in town this week . . . There is a fast, mad race by stage-coach . . . 'The Last Trail' is smoothly made . . . with a dash of movement and excitement . . . It is pretty good entertainment."

Sun: "Tom Mix gallops through new Zane Grey film. . . . 'The Last Trail' is guaranteed to rejoice the heart of any Tom Mix fan."

"The Night of Love"—United Artists—Mark Strand Theatre, New York City

Morning Telegraph: "If there is a single spark of romance smouldering in the ashes of your work-a-day soul, 'The Night of Love' will fan it to a bright blaze of memory or longing. Its sweet aroma will linger in the hearts of all who have known love—or hope to know it. The picture is a signal triumph for all connected with it. 'The Night of Love' is a well-nigh perfect picture of beauty and romance. It will hold you—thrill you—enthrall you."

Mirror: "That extraordinary popular team of Ronald Colman, dark and handsome, and Vilma Banky, blonde and beautiful, have arrived at the Mark Strand. Romance, gorgeous photography, lovely sets and stirring action pack this flicker. It enthralled an audience that sat tense through its unreeling. It is 100% box-office, guaranteed to make every exhibitor believe in Santa Claus. Vilma Banky is simply a dream in the film. Her low cut and flowing dresses dove with her soft beauty. As for Ronald Colman, we have never seen him look so splendid."

American: "'The Night of Love' is crowded with beauty, thrills and romance. The settings are colossal and convincing. Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky are as romantic a pair of lovers as ever graced the celluloid. Assures those out for a vicarious thrill that an 'enjoyable evening was had by all.'"

Evening World: "I recall no film having such perfect pictorial composition. A superior picture drama. There is not a dull moment. Cheerfully and enthusiastically recommended as one of the finest and most interesting films of the season. Here is box office material if there ever was one."

Sun: "The Mark Strand audience, packed into every available inch of standing room, sighed throughout its showing—long delicious sighs of contentment—is destined to make lots and lots of money."

World: "Into the 'Night of Love' George Fitzmaurice has packed with great skill adventure and romance with long box-office moments. Photography is amazingly beautiful and sustained. Gathers speed and suspense."

Times: "An appealing and entertaining effort."

"The Night of Love"—United Artists—Eastman Theatre, Rochester, N.Y.

Herald: "Good romantic melodrama—insures solid entertainment."

"The Night of Love"—United Artists — Rialto Theatre, Washington

Evening Post: "Best screen romance of recent years. Story abounding in thrilling episodes enacted by two of the screen's foremost favorites—the acme of photoplay entertainment."

Herald: "Abounds in thrills, colorful experiences and vivid encounters all with a background of delightful romance."

Daily News: "An event of the season. It is unsurpassed for luxuriant sentiment and lucious emotion. Those lips, those quivering lips. Would thrill the most sophisticated. It is infinitely more than usually well done, and the acting drips with excellence."

Times: "Thrillingly beautiful picture. Every audience that sees this picture should congratulate the producers. Moves swiftly and without a hitch to the end. Exciting, romantic and easy to watch."

"Faust"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Chicago

Chicago Tribune: "Marvelous screen production. I have never seen such wonderful lighting and photography...It is sure great... Each scene separate and distinct work of art...There's no doubt that Camilla Horn is a comer. Emil Janning's Lucifer is going to fascinate you. The scene at the crossroads is one of the greatest, if not the greatest that was ever photographed for a motion picture. See 'Faust' when you get the chance. Deserves a place among the 'bests' of 1926. Most brilliantly directed."

"Faust"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Los Angeles

Herald: "Work of film art; brilliant celluloid. Work of enduring beauty and dramatic, emotional effect. It will be endurable long after this year or any other year. Its pictures are beautiful now and always will be."

Times: "Highly spectacular with unusual pictorial effects. Production is ambitious, engrossing, merits the attention of everybody who is at all interested in the films. Received general applause from the audience and there are few pictures that gain such esteem. The picture is massive, indeed one of the biggest that has so far been brought from Europe. One of the most notable pictures and will undoubtedly win exceptional acclaim and interest. Emil Jannings plays Mephisto as only an Emil Jannings can. His portrayal is acted with a brilliant gesture both of drama and comedy."

"Alaskan Adventures" — Pathe, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago

Herald-Examiner: "The picture is the real thing. Certainly the breath-taking scenery is and the shots of bear, caribou, reindeer, salmon, seal and bird life. Mr. Young's exploits with bow and arrow are amazing, particularly his killing of a grizzly and a caribou. And you should see the lad spear fish.

"They traveled all over, even to Siberia, to get a great view of the midnight sun. The breaking up of the ice in the Yukon, the specter-like valley of 10,000 smokes and the salmon bucking the rivers are other highlights. Oh, there are lots of things you've never seen before in this unusually interesting picture."

"Faust"—Capitol Theatre, N. Y. City—M-G-M

Mirror: "'Faust' is a gorgeously produced, superbly acted and a grippingly narrated story. It dazzles with its mechanical display; its beautiful, melting photography. Director Murnau handles his supernatural melodramatic tale with admirable finesse and artistry. One is positively enthralled, swept swiftly in the wake of moods and absorbing action."

Herald-Tribune: "Whatever you do, do not miss 'Faust'. We never believed that 'genius' had anything to do with 'taking pains,' but F. W. Murnau has convinced us. He is a genius! Yet, every tiny detail in his picture has been molded with an artist's hand. As scene after scene of rare loveliness and distinction flashed before our bewildered eyes, we said: 'Here is the greatest director on earth.' 'Faust' possesses a variety and a haunting beauty which have never been found in any other production."

Evening Journal: "Beautiful, wonderful, and startling. 'Faust' is so incredibly beautiful, so wonderfully mounted and acted and directed that one loses control of one's typewriter keys in trying to describe it. Go see it once and you'll return a second and a third time. F. W. Murnau, the director, has turned out a magnificent piece of work that is something for other directors to aim at. The photographic shots took one's breath away. Emil Jannings is a superb Mephistopheles, satin-clad, ironic, devastating. Gosta Ekman, a Swedish actor, is splendid as Faust, and Camilla Horn is an exquisite Marguerite."

Sun: "A dream of a picture. Such lovely pageantry, such gorgeous scenes and designs, such uncanny camera tricks and lighting effects are employed to trace a fairytalization of the Faust legend that the photoplay represents, almost, an embarrassment of riches. Space prevents more than a mere mention of the joys of this film, which is unquestionably the most beautiful picture ever flashed across a cinema screen. First in interest come the dissolves and double exposures, then the thumping scene where Mephisto and Faust float above the cities of the earth. Next on the list are the gorgeous architectural lines and the lighting, especially of the cathedral scenes."

Evening Graphic: "'Faust' is decidedly 'a bigger and better picture.' You will want to see it. In fact, you cannot afford to miss it. It is an inspiring piece, well-acted, well-directed. The story is fast-moving. Thrilling situations follow each other rapidly and the whole builds up to a beautiful climax."

Evening Post: "This latest offering of the Metro organization is so much more special than most of the 'specials' now running in town that it could be exhibited in a barn on Bleeker Street and still be impressive. Each individual scene in this production is in itself a perfect picture. The cinematic 'Faust' is by no means just a technically important moving picture, interesting only to a few. It has a great deal of popular appeal, a well-known story, some very handsome players, and is amazingly put together."

Evening World: "'Faust' is not to be missed. It is one of the rare films that will bear viewing several times. Photographically, 'Faust' is supreme, the acting is excellent, and the direction is even better. Every scene is composed of motion, with a meaning and with an objective."

American: "Emil Jannings and F. W. Murnau are rather an unbeatable team. Of yesterday's audience at least one person was startled into tears, and another into a continuous murmur of, 'This is the finest picture I've ever seen.' The camera, as in most German pictures, triumphs again. That flight with the devil over the world, through the world, now swooping close to earth, now arrogantly viewing cities from the clouds, always rushing with the wind, is one of the most breath-taking experiences ever seen on the screen."

Morning Telegraph: "'Faust' is a classic which you can ill afford to miss. 'Faust' will win the plaudits of picture-lovers. An unusual number of the photographic effects we have learned to expect from foreign pictures appear in this one. The finest of these, perhaps, is a magic carpet upon which Mephisto rides his victims to view the wonders of the world. Emil Jannings portrays Satan in Jannings-esque fashion. Camilla Horn, in some sequences, is rapturously beautiful and Gosta Ekman is a heroic figure."

Wallace Beery, whom Paramount will feature in "Looie the Fourteenth"

"Faust"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Detroit

Free Press: "Startling new effects in lighting and action. The Germans have not before given the screen such romance, such beauty of setting. The diabolical shadow of Mephisto is played strikingly by Emil Jannings. A sparkling new personality is Camilla Horn with the beauty of a cameo, the body of a nymph and the soul of a true actress. 'Faust' comes nearer screen greatness than did 'Variety.'"

Times: "Not since 'The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari' have they equalled the amazing photography and fantastic splendor which are found in 'Faust'. 'Faust' will probably prove one of those pictures that cause critics to lose their sense of equilibrium. A remarkable production, more thrilling than a Poe tale. Directed in a superlative manner."

"Faust"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Cleveland

News: "Murnau develops in this picture a technique that we might not have had otherwise in the next thirty years. See what Murnau did and you'll see the greatest bit of wizardry the camera has ever accomplished."

Plain Dealer: "A directional triumph. For sheer wonder, for effect, no one else has ever created anything comparable with Murnau's version of Goethe's tale. It has been called 'a poem in pictures,' if liquid flow, the highest in artistic quality, exactness in composition, detail and a certain opic flavor is considered, then is is indeed, a poem in pictures. Beautiful and symbolic. It is most highly recommended."

Press: "Photography is lifted above merely photography of actors, outdoors and studio sets. It is lifted into a way of expressing ideas. The picture is very aptly called 'a poem in picture.' Here's a film that will be remembered."

"The Third Degree"—Warner Brothers, Los Angeles

Examiner: "With Dolores Costello starred in the picture, the interest is kept mainly centered about her. Michael Curtiz has directed her beautifully, and except for one or two scenes in which she betrays an abruptness somewhat disconcerting to the spectator, she shows up with real stellar caliber. There is a nice restraint, too, in the matter of close-ups, and although the young star is seen again in moments of rare beauty, she is not obviously rushed to the big faces on the screen with which the newly arrived actress sometimes fights her way to attention."

Record: "It is indeed gratifying to see that Warner Brothers realize Dolores Costello's value and are giving her the very best of story material and directorial aid in her rapid progress upon the not-too-crowded ladder of talent."

Times: "Miss Costello's work is excellent, although the role is a trifle overburdened with adversity and sorrow. Her brief moment of happiness, as Robard's bride, is a scene of gorgeous quality. In the camera effects particularly, Michael Curtiz discloses a flair for the novel that characterizes the work of so many foreign directors. Some of the moving shots are unique and add immeasurably to the force of the plot."

News: "The story is tense, gripping. It has all the color and melodrama that held attention during the thrilling stage performance, where the interlocking of two families through fate forms the basis for the plot."

"Wings of the Storm"—Fox Films, Fox Theatre, Philadelphia

Record: "The dogs fight and it is real; the men fight and it is just as real. . . . Remarkable performance of Virginia Browne Faire, Reed Howes and William Russell."

Manager H. C. Young of National Screen Service has added another booker to his staff, Miss Florence Daley, which brings the number of bookers on duty up to five.

Johnnie Mednikow and Clyde Elliott, who were injured in a recent auto smash, are both recovering from their injuries and are able to attend to business.

of pictures, and will late be forgotten. However, the beginning and the end are rather weak, a few details are conventionally made and the love story does not differ much from all other love stories. But one overlooks those weaknesses and one is filled with the soul-stirring atmosphere that the director and actors have been able to create. King Vidor has depicted the war as if written with his own heart-blood. He describes the horrors of this war, which made people live worse than animals in the trenches, and in the hell-like desert called No Man's Land. Vidor's picture is no glorifying of war as a means of creating heroes—it gives an irresistible impression of being true. King Vidor has himself been in the war and thoroughly knows its terrors. At the same time one must admire the deep artistic feeling in this creation as well as the gentleman-like impartiality in handling of the matter at hand. John Gilbert's acting is full of life and intensity. Renee Adoree is nothing but charming as the little French girl, warm-hearted and spontaneous, and her mimic scenes belong to the very best that has been offered on the screen. The others in the cast are splendid. It is an atmosphere over the picture that touches the onlookers. Many of the scenes etch themselves in one's consciousness with ineffaceable sharpness."

Arbetaren: "Nothing of what we have seen on the screen to this date can be compared with the terrific scenes in 'The Big Parade.' They are impossible to describe and we will not advise any one not having strong nerves to go and see same; but the others ought to see it, and they will surely become anti-militaristic."

THEATRE MANAGEMENT
EQUIPMENT CONSTRUCTION OPERATION

Long-Run Policy Solves Newark Theatre Problem

Rialto, Operated by Stanley-Fabian, to Continue as Two-a-Day Following 5 Weeks of "Don Juan"

AFTER a highly successful five-weeks engagement, with "Don Juan" and Vitaphone presentations as the attractions, the Rialto Theatre in Newark, N.J., operated by the Stanley-Fabian company, appears to have found its metier, and officials of the organization controlling it will continue the Rialto under a two-a-day policy. For several weeks prior to its venture into the long-run policy, the Rialto had known rather hard times as a weekly change house.

The original bookings for "Don Juan" and the Vitaphone features—made up of the program being presented with that picture at Warners on Broadway—was tentatively set at three weeks. The response of Newark theatregoers to the attraction, however, extended the run to five weeks, and decided the management of the Rialto to continue the reserved seat policy.

The current picture attraction is "Tell it to the Marines," along with Vitaphone presentations featuring Elsie Janis, George Jessel and Mary Lewis. It is understood that "The Better 'Ole" will follow "Tell it to the Marines" as the picture attraction there.

The inauguration of an extended-run policy at the Rialto, which began with the Vitaphone attraction, appears to have solved a problem for the operators of that house, since the company's other theatres, the Mosque, Branford and Goodwin, have benefited through the elimination of a competing weekly-change picture theatre.

Change Necessary

A little less than two months ago Stanley-Fabian found itself in the same condition that is so prevalent in a number of theatres with heavy overheads throughout the country. The Rialto was being conducted on the continuous policy and at popular prices.

The Stanley-Fabian people wanted both "Don Juan" and the Vitaphone for the Rialto. There were these questions to be considered, however: How would the Newark public look upon a change in policy of the house that would place it in the same class with the legitimate theatres of the city? Would the public take kindly to the change and the increased prices? There was only one thing to do, and that was to try it.

When it came to decide on the length of time that would be given to the Barrymore picture and Vitaphone, three weeks was considered the absolute limit.

On the opening week Barrymore and Vitaphone grossed $21,000. Then the box-office reported what had never been known previously in the theatre—an advance sale! Thereupon they announced a fourth week and then a fifth. It is interesting to note that the gross business of the fifth week was bigger by $1,000 than was the business of the week preceding. In its five weeks with this attraction, the Rialto played to a gross of over $75,000 in Newark.

F. & R. to Install Vitaphone in Three Theatres

Finkelstein and Ruben have decided to install Vitaphone equipment in the State Theatre at Minneapolis, the Capitol at St. Paul and the Garrick at Duluth. The firm recently signed a three-year contract which gave it first run privileges in all cities and towns in which it has theatres.

The work of installation at the State, Garrick and Capitol will be completed within the next 30 days.

To Patent Lighting System Used at Roxy Theatre

Among the innovations which will be introduced in the Roxy Theatre in New York will be a new method of house lighting. By means of appliances invented by S. L. Rothafel, it is said patrons will be able to see distinctly while the picture is being projected. All portions of the auditorium will be light enough to permit people to read programs without straining the eyes.

It is also reported that Roxy has devised a method of projection which will make the picture even clearer than it would be in the customary dark auditorium. Patents are pending in Washington for both of the inventions.

New Policy at Fort Worth Rialto

The Rialto Theatre in Fort Worth recently inaugurated the policy of presenting one vaudeville act in conjunction with the picture bill on Saturdays and Sundays. The Rialto plays feature pictures a full week.

Equipment

Fire Regulations

By P. M. ABBOTT

IN THIS morning's paper, featured as front page news, we read of two semi-panics in motion picture theatres. Both were due to fire scares.

Fortunately, in neither case were there any fatalities. Adequate exit facilities and good judgment shown by employees prevented such disasters.

But these two scares, coming as they did, right on the heels of the Montreal tragedy, bring home to us forcibly the wisdom shown by those responsible for drawing up our fire and public building regulations.

Perhaps many theatre owners and builders have felt that they had cause for complaint at what appeared to them to be needlessly stringent codes which they have been forced to follow when constructing a new house.

Changing plans and adding special equipment often may prove a nuisance that has, apparently, no justification.

The justification, however, is there.

Just let bad luck once come the exhibitor's way—a fire in the stage drapes or in the projection room, and the only friend that can effectively stand by is a good building code that has been rigidly enforced.

The combined trouble and expense incurred by every theatre builder, in adhering to building codes does not begin to balance the loss of life that can well result in one theatre fire where there are not sufficient exits and fire preventatives to insure the audience every avenue of escape.

Further, if only from a business point of view, which, of course, in this case is relegated far to the background, one theatre panic reflects seriously on box-office receipts.

We give our hearty indorsement to the regulations imposed on theatres to make them panic and fire-proof. And in those sections of the country where fire and building codes are not the strictest, exhibitors should be their own guardians of public safety.

Hold-over Bills Dominate Broadway

Paramount is Only Big House Showing New Film This Week

EXTENDED run pictures dominate the Broadway situation this week. The weekly change houses, which have dwindled to three within the past several months, for the time being reduced their number to one, with the result that but one new picture found its way to the leading Broadway cinemas this week.

The Capitol continued "Flesh and the Devil" for a fourth week—unprecedented in the records of the house—while the Strand plays a second week of "The Night of Love." Harold Lloyd's "The Kid Brother" will go on at the Rialto for several weeks, according to all present indications.

"New York," the Famous Players production directed by Luther Reed, and a Frank Cambria stage presentation called "Under the Brooklyn Bridge" are the features of the program at the Paramount.

The stage number, which specializes in singing and dancing, features a Bowery atmosphere in setting and costumes. It is of the period of 1896, when leg of mutton sleeves, tandem bicycles, etc. Jesse Crawford's organ specialty is titled a "Classic Popular Recital," in which he includes "Souvenir" and "It All Depends on You." Von Suppe's "Light Cavalry" is the overture offered by the Paramount orchestra.

Announce Policy Change at Imperial, San Francisco

Manager Edward Barron of the Publix Theatres in San Francisco has announced that the Imperial Theatre will change from showing long run high grade motion pictures to a fifteen cent house. "Our reason for making this change," said Barron, "is because we have these high grade long run pictures in one local theatre."

Desormeaux Supervises New Madison Radio Station

Art Desormeaux, who manages the Strand Theatre at Madison, Wis., is more than a busy man these days. In addition to managing the Strand, he is supervising the new radio station at Madison, WIBA, which is maintained by the Strand Theatre.

A new Wurlitzer organ has recently been installed at the Strand, which Mr. Klingman, formerly of the Rialto at Racine, is now operating

Film Scenes Presented in Don Albert Stage Act

Don Albert, director of the orchestra at Loew's State in St. Louis, Mo., appeared on stage and screen last week in the course of a presentation number.

Albert has become an institution in St. Louis since his orchestra has won a commanding position in the Mound City's music world. On the stage was the musical production "Twenty Minutes with Don Albert" featuring Albert and his Loew's State Orchestra, Miss Virginia Futrelle, soprano, and Ben Friedman.

For his first selection Albert offered a synchronization of the Second Hungarian Rhapsody, followed by "In a Little Spanish Town" sung by Miss Futrelle. Then came a group of popular numbers terminating with "Tell Me Tonight" by Friedman. Then for his finale came the synchronization of the directing of Albert on the silver screen and in person for the playing of "The Slavonic Rhapsody."

Novel Musical Presentation at Columbia, Seattle

A novel musical specialty was staged last week at the Columbia Theatre, Universal's house in Seattle, Wash., by Managing Director Robert W. Bender.

Bender's presentation consisted of a duet rendition of Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" by Francesco Longo, pianist-director of the Columbia All-Artists Orchestra, and the Duo-Art Piano. The Duo-Art rendition was from a Duo-Art roll created a few months ago in the East by Mr. Longo himself, who has been a reording artist for Duo-Art for many seasons.

A further feature of the novelty was the orchestral accompaniment played by the Columbia Orchestra, from a special arrangement by Mr. Longo. The stunt was given wide newspaper publicity and advertising by the Seattle Duo-Art representatives. It was used in connection with Universal's "Butterflies in the Rain."

Edwards Revue Feature at Stanley in Philadelphia

Gus Edwards' Revue, "Ritz Carlton Nights," an elaborate and entertaining production, headed the bill at the Stanley, Philadelphia, last week, with one of the best shows presented for many weeks. There are clever dancers, splendid singers and comedians, including the Lane Sisters, Virginia Martin, Dorothea James, Nina Montez, the Reynolds Sisters and Ray "Rubberlegs" Bolger," the comedian, who won a large share of the applause. The revue, an elaborate production occupying 41 minutes, was very favorably received by Stanley patrons. The feature picture was "Valencia."

Mme. Olga Petrova in her debut on the motion picture stage, appeared in Philadelphia for the first time in two years as the feature attraction at the Fox Theatre. She has an excellent soprano voice and a repertory of popular French songs. The "Four Admirals," popular recording artists, and Joe Termini, guitar and violin virtuoso, also appeared, supporting the feature picture "Stage Madness."

F. & M.'s "Yachting" Idea Is Applauded at Warfield

The Fanchon and Marco stage act presented at the Warfield Theatre, San Francisco, the week of January 15th, features a yachting scene, with all the alluring details: a sandy beach, palm trees, the corner of a yacht gay with awnings and, beyond, the ocean with miniature yachts sailing back and forth.

Rube Wolf's orchestra appeared to excellent advantage. In the opening number the "Sunkist Beauties" proved that they have not wasted their time in the months they have been out of town. They dance, the eight of them, like one being.

Patty Mason and Vilma Sullivan have an intriguing specialty number. June Knight offers her stately peacock dance again, but this time on her toes.

Publix Managers in Frisco Promoted

Changes Follow Resignation of Smith from Granada

Another series of promotions became effective among the executives of the San Francisco department of Publix Theatres, Inc., following the resignation of Edward A. Smith, manager of the Granada Theatre, to become assistant to L. J. Schlaiser, general manager of the Universal Theatre chain.

Charles Kurtzman, former manager of the St. Francis, has succeeded Smith at the Granada. Herbert C. Polin, of the Publix Theatre publicity force, becomes manager of the St. Francis.

It is understood that Smith will have charge of the Western division of Universal Theatres, which includes houses in all the larger cities of the Pacific Coast. Smith is an experienced theatre man. He was on the stage for several years and was a member of the cast of a number of Shubert's musical productions. He was for a time manager of the Rialto, not the Rivoli, and later took charge of large picture theatres in Los Angeles and Honolulu. He became a member of the Publix Theatre forces shortly after the opening of the Kurtzman was connected for some time with the publicity department of the Publix Theatre. He became manager of the Imperial Theatre and later succeeded Smith as manager of the St. Francis. Polin came to San Francisco several years ago, after experience in the press department of Los Angeles theatres.

Advance Billing by Strand for "Ukulele Ike"

Announcement that "Ukulele Ike" will be the feature at the Mark Strand in Albany, N.Y., is being carried heavily in the newspapers of that city this week, preparatory to his appearance on February 7. The Mark Strand used Jimmy Carr's band of twenty-two persons this week for its presentation act.

Embassy's New Policy Success

The new policy recently introduced at the Embassy Theatre in Baltimore, under which five acts of family vaudeville are presented with feature pictures and short subjects, is proving highly successful.

Bedford, Indiana, House Offers Fine Program

THE new Bedford Theatre, Bedford, Ind., heralded as one of the finest playhouses in the entire State, formally opened its doors to the public late in December with a program consisting of a feature picture, novelty reels and five acts of vaudeville.

At present, it is said that the Bedford, under the management of Robert Scherer, is giving its patrons the most elaborate show of its kind ever presented in that Indiana city.

Construction cost of the Bedford is estimated at $200,000.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

FRED A. CRUISE is the house manager of the new Paramount Theatre at Palm Beach.

ARNOLD R. FLINK, a theatre man of several Eastern experiences, has been appointed house manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, Seattle. The Fifth Avenue is operated by the Pacific Northwest Theatres. James Q. Clemmer is managing director of the house.

E. J. VAUGHN, for two and a half years a theatre manager in Glendale, Cal., has resigned as manager of the Alexander Theatre there to take a position with Warner Bros.' production department at the studio in Hollywood.

WM. E. MICK has succeeded George T. Porter as manager of the Fitzpatrick-McElroy theatres in Michigan City. These are the Tivoli, Starland and Willard theatres. Porter returns to the general offices of the company in Chicago. He took over the management of the Michigan City houses for Fitzpatrick-McElroy when the latter acquired them a year and a half ago from the Wallerstein interests.

C. R. RICHARDSON, formerly of New York and Chicago, has been appointed manager of the Coliseum Theatre, one of the Levin Syndicate. Richardson has taken the place of Leon Levy who managed this house for some time. Levy remains with the Levin Syndicate in another capacity.

Brokenshire's Radio Unit Playing Picture Houses

Norman Brokenshire, well known to radio fans as an announcer and humorist, has resigned from station WPCH, new York City, to enter the presentation field. His first personal appearance was at the Embassy Theatre, Portchester, N.Y., where he played a three-day engagement starting January 27th.

Brokenshire established his reputation as an announcer with station WJZ, with which he was connected for three years. Recently he has been with WPCH.

The presentation act with which he will appear is composed of a number of radio artists. Brokenshire will appear at Bridgeport and New London, Conn., February, as master of ceremonies with "Rudy" Horst, and his gang of Radio Artists, which includes an orchestra.

Offices for the management of Brokenshire, together with "Rudy" and his gang have been opened in New York City.

Premiere of "McFadden's Flats" at Toledo

The world premiere of "McFadden's Flats" took place Saturday, January 29th, at the Pantheon Theatre, Toledo. Gradwell L. Sears, manager of the local First National exchange, went over to Toledo to participate in the event.

Auto Race Driver Star at Strand

Daredevil Lockwood after completing his record breaking drive of six days and six nights in the Chrysler as a feature in connection with the Auto Show, appeared at the Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, last week.

Frank Co. Prepares Anniversary Bills

7th Birthday to be Celebrated in All Theatres of Chain

The Frank Amusement Company operating the Plaza and Rialto theatres, Waterloo; the Majestic and Isis theatres, Cedar Rapids; the Orpheum Theatre, Clinton; the Plaza Theatre, Sioux City, and Grand Theatre, Colein, will celebrate during the week of February 6th with elaborate programs at all of its theatres, its Seventh Anniversary.

The Frank Amusement Company, a subsidiary of North American Theatres, Inc., of which Mr. Frank R. Wilson is president, has been under the direction of its present president, Alexander Frank, since its start in February, 1920.

The firm has grown every year and has added to its holdings and improvements and at the present time is the second largest theatrical organization in the State of Iowa.

During Anniversary Week the Frank Amusement Company will announce full details regarding its new 2,000-seat Orpheum Theatre in Waterloo, Ia., and the new 2,500-seat Orpheum Theatre at Cedar Rapids will be a joint venture with the Orpheum circuit. Announcement also will be made regarding the construction of two additional new houses in cities in which the company at the present does not operate.

Capitol Organist Conducts Chicago Symphony

Carl McKinley, associate organist at the Capitol Theatre in New York, had the distinction of conducting the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in his own composition, "Masquerade," presented by the latter organization last week. The McKinley piece is written in symphonic jazz and is "an attempt to express the spirit of America at play."

Mr. McKinley's performance as a conductor and the merits of the composition were enthusiastically received by the press of Chicago.

Record Houses for Circle with Whiteman as Star

With Paul Whiteman's orchestra topping the bill, the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, had more than its share of movie patrons the week of January 24th.

The jazz king was a hit in the Hoosier Capital, so popular that a picture of Paul was stolen in broad daylight from in front of the theatre on Monument Circle.

Beban Unit Plays Return Date

George Beban and his company, who appeared at Shea's Buffalo earlier in the season in his stage and screen play, "The Loves of Ricardo," returned to that town the week of January 30th in the same attraction, which he is presenting at the Lafayette Square.

Building Keeps Pace with Forecast

Recent Reports Received on New Theatre Construction Continue to Verify M. P. News Prediction

THE reports we have been receiving on new theatre construction continue to verify the forecast for a record-breaking theatre building year for 1927. Within the past few weeks we have received reports of sixty-one new theatre projects, varying in size from theatre and office buildings costing $8,000,000, with seating capacities of 4,500, to the small town theatre with a seating capacity of 400 and a total investment of $25,000.

It also appears upon analyzing these reports that the neighborhood house is receiving the greatest consideration at present and that this type of theatre is being constructed along elaborate lines.

Of the totol sixty-one projects, which follow, twenty-six are being built by circuits. However, unquestionably a great number of the projects listed are also to be controlled by circuits, either through lease or by purchase upon competition.

Screen Quality Counts

Prints on Eastman Positive from negatives on Eastman Panchromatic make the most of your projection equipment—give maximum photographic quality on the screen.

For only Eastman Positive carries through to the screen with fidelity all the tones of the negative, and Eastman "Pan" alone renders colors in their true black and white relationship.

That's fact—proved by Kodak Research Laboratory experts. And it's fact that counts at the box office—people appreciate screen quality.

New Eastman Film Ready

Announce First Available Duplicating Stock Said to be Equal to Original

ANNOUNCEMENT by the Eastman Kodak Company of a new product known as Eastman duplicating motion picture film is expected to fill an important gap in the mechanical side of the industry. This new film is said to have qualities never before available.

Heretofore the making of duplicate motion picture negatives has presented great difficulties and their use has usually been restricted to those occasions when the original negative was unavailable.

Photographic experts at the company's laboratories have been busy studying the problem of furnishing a film for duplicate negatives which could reproduce the quality secured in the original negative and from which prints could be made which would be similar to those obtainable from the original negative.

Many Advantages

Their efforts have finally been rewarded in perfecting this new product whose great advantage to the motion picture world lies in the fact that it will facilitate a more rapid distribution of prints, while in the case of loss or damage of a duplicate negative equal in quality to the original will save serious loss.

It is also stated that by using this duplicating film original negatives of unsuitable contrast can be improved in duplicating, thus saving costly retakes of expensive sets.

Essential Requirements

According to the company's announcement the essential requirements in a material for the production of motion picture duplicates are freedom from graininess, sufficient latitude to reproduce correctly the greatest scale of tones likely to be met with in an original negative and ability to reproduce fine detail. These three requirements were not combined in any film heretofore available on the market. Negative motion picture film which has a great range of latitude is manufactured essentially for the production of negatives in the camera and in order to attain the necessary speed the grain size of the negative film has to be greater than is desirable for duplicating. Positive motion picture film, which makes the prints which are used in the movie theatre projectors, has a very fine grain but is made to give a contrast which makes it unsuitable for use in duplicating. By a special treatment of the emulsion of this new Eastman product, the fineness of grain of positive film and the great latitude and low contrast of negative film necessary for duplicating purposes have been successfully combined.

Publix Scholars Study Good Projection

Students Spend Two Days With Experts at Plant of International Projector Corp.

TWO whole days, January 25th and 26th, were spent at the plant of the International Projector Corporation by The Publix Theatre Managers' School learning the difference between good and bad projection.

John F. Barry, Director of the School, had arranged with Walter E. Green, Vice-President of the International Projector Corporation.

P. A. McGuire, Advertising Manager of the company, opened the session by welcoming the members of the school to the plant and said that it was the third occasion he had had the pleasure of performing this pleasant duty and making arrangements for this part of their course. He then read a statement prepared by Bart F. Greene, Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Gas and Electricity, City of New York.

The sessions were held in the projection room and here the students were shown the latest models of Simplex and Power's Projectors. The first day's period of practical instruction was inaugurated by Herbert Griffin, General Sales Manager of the Power's Division, who gave a detailed description of Power's Projectors, making explanations and answering questions for a considerable part of the morning. F. H. Richardson, author of "Richardson's Handbook," then covered the following topics and gave brief explanations as to how they were caused; Poor focus, unsteady picture, travel ghost, flicker, distortion, poor illumination, film breakage, improper projection speed, etc. The students were intensely interested in this part of the course, which was a basis for many of the questions asked during the course of instruction during the following day and a half, in the plant of the International Projector Corporation. The afternoon session of the first day was taken up by F. H. Richardson in completing his talk, A. E. Meyer, who talked briefly on the Simplex and Power's Projectors in the foreign fields, and H. G. Wrede, who discussed in details repairs and replacements on Power's Projectors. The second day session started promptly at nine o'clock with a talk on Simplex Projectors by A. Kindelmann, who spoke for two hours, and T. Hall, of Hall and Connolly, completed the morning session, describing the new Hall and Connolly high intensity lamp. Mr. Kindelmann completed his instruction in reference to the Simplex Projector by again talking for about two hours in the afternoon, and Mr. Griffin closed the course at the plant of the International Projector Corporation by giving additional details regarding Power's Projectors and Powerlite Reflector Arc Lamps.

The "Nat'l Seiler System"

"One-Contract" Equipment Plan to Be Put Into Effect by National Supply Co.

ALVIN SEILER, nationally known as an expert on electrical installations, switchboards and lighting, and for his ability as a theatre engineer, has been selected to head the engineering department of the National Theatre Supply Company, where, under his personal direction, a staff of engineers and draftsmen will operate in collaboration with the National Theatre Supply Company's thirty-one branch stores in the National "One-Contract" Equipment Plan, which will hereafter be known as the National Seiler System.

With the acquisition of Mr. Seiler, and the organization of a technical staff, National Theatre Supply Company has taken an important step towards the realization of that organization's aim—to be ready whenever called upon to assume full responsibility for the solution of any theatre, construction or equipment problem that may confront builders or operators of the modern theatre.

Lack of coordination between the process of construction and equipment has been a serious and expensive problem to the theatre industry and in seeking to eliminate this waste, National Theatre Supply Company made a country-wide search for a man of such experience and ability that it would be able to give architects, builders and owners real service.

With these qualifications in mind, Mr. Seiler, originator of the Seiler system theatre plan service, was chosen and will devote his entire time to this department. It is felt that he will be a great assistance, not only to owners and builders, but to architects, only a few of whom specialize on theatre construction, and even fewer of whom are conversant with the fine points of theatre equipment.

In addition to the advisory work, extensive, scientific research and investigation will be carried on in the engineering department, headed by Mr. Seiler, to which any architect, builder or theatre owner may come for reliable advice and suggestions.

Bush Theatres Take New San Diego Permit

The Bush Theatres, Inc., of San Diego, Cal., have taken out a building permit for the construction of a reinforced concrete and brick theatre at 2025 Thirtieth Street to cost approximately $65,000. It will serve as a community motion picture house in a section which has seen rapid development in the past two or thre years, and will make the fifth theatre to be under the control of Bush Theatres, Inc., the other houses being the Egyptian in San Diego, the Vista in East San Diego, the Kinema in Escondido and the Silver Strand in Coronado.

Angelopolis Opens Gloria at South Los Angeles

The Gloria Theatre, South Los Angeles' newest motion picture theatre located at 9617 South Main Street, was recently opened to the public. C. Angelopolis is the owner of the building in which the Gloria is located. H. Eckman is the resident manager. Regular admission prices will be 10 and 25 cents.

“A Monument to the Best in Theatrical Art”

So Reads Motto of New Orleans' New Saenger; Many Notables Will Attend Premiere

THE $2,500,000 New Saenger Theatre, considered by architects and art connoisseurs one of the finest playhouses in America, will open its doors and its priceless art salon to New Orleans and its tourist guests on Saturday, February 5th, at 10:30 o'clock in the morning, after the theatre has been formally dedicated Friday night before a group of motion picture notables, state and city officials and other invited guests.

The opening of the doors of the New Saenger marks the consummation of the dream of the Saenger Theatres, Inc., to give to the city, where they maintain their headquarters, a theatre that in distinction and beauty of architecture and in excellence and popularity of motion pictures and stage presentations would be a striking monument to the civic and industrial progress of the “New” New Orleans and to the picturesque renown of “Old” New Orleans.

Art Treasures Galore

When the thousands of Orleanians enter the New Saenger on Saturday, February 5th, and see, first, the imposing arcade, illuminated by four of the massive chandeliers from the Chateau Pierrefonds D'Oise, the chandeliers that once, by candlelight, saw minutes and hours from the lives of Louis XIV, Marie Antoinette and Napoleon; then the broad cross lobby, with its magnificent marble, bronze, crystals and scenic effects; then the art salon, above which the eye will seek the great dome, a vista of deep blue sky with moving clouds and at intervals twinkling stars, creating the primary illusion of beauty; then to the great mezzanine, which is reached leisurely by short ramps, instead of long stairways, excepting, of course, the great main stairway, a thing of beauty in itself and in fit keeping with the Florentine motif of the New Saenger. And then to the men and women's lounging rooms of the mezzanine and the patio, the latter done in an Italian garden arrangement that will delight the public and the connoisseur.

The whole interior treatment of the house expresses the dazzling spirit of the Italian Renaissance. The designers have ornamented the walls in brilliant and bizarre tones that carry out the Italian atmosphere. Walking through the New Saenger is like a walk through a Florentine palace that had, by some miracle, been constructed by a man who knew engineering and electricity, as well as architecture. The artistic spirit of the de Medicis and the inventive genius of Thomas Edison alike contribute to the New Saenger.

An Acre of Seats

Next to the acre of comfortable seats, 4,000 of them, each as luxurious as the other, to view the inaugural picture, and the Publix New York stage show; and to hear John Hammond, S. T. O., at the console of the mighty Robert Morton organ and Castro Carazo and his thirty-five piece orchestra on the magic pit for the orchestra.

The temperature of the house is said to be ideal. No matter how cold it is outside or how warm, the New Saenger, through its powerful heating, refrigerating and ventilating plant, claims to its patrons air that is comfortable and pure.

The New Saenger is not modelled after any particular one of Florence's palaces, but after the general plan and spirit of those princely mansions. The spirit of the great Italian architects and builders—incomparably the best the world has ever known—is brought to New Orleans; the Florence of the Renaissance is brought to New Orleans.

Above the entrance arch of the North Rampart Street entrance is engraved the motto of the New Saenger: “A Monument Devoted to the Best in Music, Photoplays and the Theatrical Arts,” typifying the spirit of the organization that has given New Orleans a theatre that is said to be one of the five greatest in the world.

Inquiries and Comments

Can't Understand It

THE following letter is from Joseph M. Van Dyke, Antigo, Wis.:

"Dear Sir:

"I have just read the Projection Department article of January 7, and there are a number of things in it that I do not quite understand, so I am wondering if you will take the necessary time to enlighten me.

"You say that the law of Inverse Squares holds good no matter whether the light beam is directed by lenses and mirrors or not, providing certain conditions are met. I would like to know what those conditions are. I am not trying to start an argument, but if my ideas on light action are wrong it is time they were corrected.

"The best way to start is to tell you what I believe to be true, after which you can take a shot at my arguments and correct the mistakes.

What He Believes

"The inverse square law is not a rule applying solely to optics, but is a mathematical calculation which applies to many other things also—for instance, perspective drawing and the radiation of heat or sound and, of course, light also.

"An absolutely open source of light emanates rays in all directions and 90 degrees in any given direction. (Van Dyke's letter at this point becomes quite involved, particularly as to this 90-degree angle business, so we are quoting him verbatim in the hope that what passes over our head may be clear to other readers.—Ed.) It is this divergence of 90 degrees that brings the inverse square law into the problem.

"If the rays of light (from a source) are collected by a lens slightly larger in diameter than the distance between the source and the lens, and the lens projects an image which is of the same size as the light source, then the only loss of light would be caused by reflection from the lens surfaces, and the resistance in passing through air and glass. Of course, the screen on which the image is projected would absorb some light, but I am supposing that it does not.

"Now let us place a slide, or piece of film in the path of this light beam. (At the point where the source image is formed?—Ed.) The slide is just large enough to accommodate the entire beam. At this point we have a loss due to reflection from the lens surfaces and resistance of the slide and air.

"Now let us use a lens to project the slide onto a screen. The lens is large enough to accommodate the entire beam of light. Here again we have a loss by reflection and resistance of glass and air. The screen absorbs some light and reflects the remainder. The only other light loss besides resistance of air and glass, and reflection from the lens and slide depends on the angle of emergence or the angle at which the light leaves the lens.

Something New

"If the light beam diverges at an angle of 90 degrees (from the lens) the rule of inverse squares applies. It never does in actual practice. The loss of light is proportional to the angle of emergence. It seems that in actual practice the law of inverse squares applies only as from an open source of light. If otherwise, then why use a lens?

"All this talk about increasing the size of the aperture to raise the screen intensity is bunk. 'It can't be did.' All we can do is pick up as many rays as possible from the source, cut down the size of the spot so as to waste less at the aperture, use the proper size of (projection) lens and of sufficient diameter and provide a screen of the best type. Then we are doing all that can be done.

"If some inventor would give us a square spot at the aperture, by using a square source of light instead of a round one, a large loss of light would be prevented. Of course, we must not use a larger shutter blade than necessary.

"I hope I have not been too long winded, and wish you would answer this, as I really want to know whether I am right, and I am not trying to 'ride' you.

"Joseph M. Van Dyke."

"Thanks for the Buggy Ride"

It relieves us somewhat, Van Dyke, to know that you are not trying to "ride" us in this matter, as you express it, and that your intentions are strictly honest and above-board.

As for this inverse square law, we thought that we had explained the operation of this law satisfactorily on a number of occasions during the past two years, but since you apparently missed those past discussions and really desire to know what it is all about, we will break a resolution, made not so long ago, never to refer to it again, and unbend to the extent of giving a sketchy description of its operation.

It is difficult for us to answer your questions directly, since, to be perfectly frank, we do not understand what you are talking about. By this we mean that we do not grasp the significance of your reference to the 90-degree angle emergence of light from a lens, which, in your mind, is so important as to determine whether or not the law applies in any particular case.

For this reason we will forego direct answers to your questions and try to give a simple explanation of the application of the inverse square law.

Our statement, as we recall it, said that the use of mirrors and lenses in connection with a light source did not affect the operation of the law of inverse squares. We did not mean by this that the light intensity on the motion picture screen, when illuminated by the projector optic system, would be the same as when the lenses, film, etc., were removed, and the light from the arc alone were to shine, unobstructed, on the screen. Such a statement, of course, would be silly, and would justify your question, "Why use lenses?"

The thing we meant to bring out was this: Suppose we have an arc lamp operating in open space with no lenses or mirrors placed before it. At a distance of ten feet from the crater we will have an intensity, let us say, of forty foot-candles. Then at 20 feet, according to the law of inverse squares, the intensity would be one-fourth of this, or ten foot-candles, and at forty feet it would be one-sixteenth of forty foot-candles, or 2.5, etc.

Now let us suppose that we place a lens (or concave mirror) in front of the arc crater so that the crater is placed at the focal point of the lens. We will then have a rough form of searchlight, since the rays will emerge from each other. Now we say that the intensity of light from this crude searchlight will also vary inversely as the square of the distance of the point from the source, but the light intensities in this case will be much higher than where no lens is used.

As an example, we may find, depending upon the diameter of the lens, that at a distance of fifty feet from the lens the intensity is 100 foot-candles (due to the concentrating power of the lens), then at 100 feet the intensity will be one-fourth of this, or twenty-five foot-candles, and at 200 feet it will be one-sixteenth of 100 foot-candles, or 6.25. In spite of the fact that these intensities are higher than those obtained from the arc used alone, they will all follow the inverse square law in exactly the same manner as if they were provided by a much more powerful arc, used without the lens.

Lens Becomes Source of Light

When any lens is placed before a light source (providing the source is not placed inside of the lens focal point) the lens simply becomes an artificial source of light which is just as bright as the original source, minus a 10 per cent loss in the lens, and much larger than the light source.

The fact that the lens is larger than the original source results in the intense beams of light obtained from them since if the lens were no larger than the arc crater it

James Amus. Co. Open New Theatres

Contain First Ohio Installations of Carrier Eng. System

James Amusement Enterprises, Columbus, O., has recently opened two new motion picture theatres in that city: one, the Clinton, between North Broadway and Brighton Road, and the other, the Eastern, in that section of the city.

The last of the two to be completed, the Clinton, is estimated to have cost $300,000 and has a seating capacity of 1,500.

The Clinton Theatre was built under the personal supervision of William M. James, president of the James Amusement Enterprises, and forms the eighth theatre in the string which was started by Mr. James fifteen years ago with the Broadway. All the legal details of acquiring the site and the legal phases of financing were cared for by John A. Connor, vice-president of the James Amusement Enterprises and general counsel for the company. The house will be operated under the direction of J. Real Neth, secretary-treasurer of the James interests, who has supervision over all the houses. John McCormick, who has been connected with the James theatres in different capacities for some time and who recently has been at the State Theatre. . . .

Both the Eastern and Clinton each contains one of the two first Carrier Engineering systems of cooling and ventilating to be installed in any Ohio theatre.

Bronx, N.Y., Operators Plan Large Playhouse

One of largest commitments filed recently in the Bronx, New York City, was for a proposed theatre structure to be built by the Efficient Building Corp. from plans by Nathan Rotholz. The theatre will occupy a plot on the south side of Burnside Avenue, east of Anthony Avenue. The estimated cost of the project is placed at $1,500,000 by the architect.

Wurlitzer Adds To Program

The Strand Theatre, Stronghurst, Ill., has recently installed a new Wurlitzer organ. The instrument, one of the latest factory models, has greatly added to the musical program of this house.

Cedar Rapids Has Three Theatres Under Way

PAPERS were recently filed at Cedar Rapids, Ia., by the Frank Amusement Company of Waterloo incorporating the Orpheum Building Company with a capital stock of $400,000. The corporation proposes to erect a $700,000 vaudeville and motion picture theatre seating 2,500 persons.

It is understood that the Orpheum Theatre Company owns a half interest in the project.

The new building will be three stories high, will cover half a block and provide space for thirteen stores, sixteen offices and twenty-eight apartments. Work is to be started in the spring and completed next November.

This is the third new theatre announced for Cedar Rapids in recent weeks.

Equip't Orders Accurate Business Barometer

Possibly one of the most accurate barometers of increasing motion picture theatre construction is to be found in the orders for projection equipment as such equipment is an absolute essential in every new theatre.

The Hertner Transverter, because of the fact that it has been on the market since 1915, and is, therefore, universally known, is showing even greater sales since the first of January than the remarkably high sales record of 1926.

Mr. Hertner, president of The Hertner Electric Company, manufacturing the Hertner Transverter, states that all sizes are being ordered up to and including 500 ampere capacity with special preference for the horizontal and multiple types.

Recent orders which they have received include the following theatres:

would do no good, because then the arc crater working alone would provide the same intensity as when used with this very small lens.

The use of a large lens simply results in apparently increasing the size of the light source and if the area of the lens be multiplied by the brightness of the arc (minus 10 per cent loss) and this in turn divided by the square of the distance of some point from the lens, we would have the intensity of light at that point.

If the lens is now removed, the intensity of light at the same point would be equal to the area of the arc crater, multiplied by the brightness of the arc and divided by the square of the distance between the point and the arc crater.

The lens, as we said before, simply serves to increase the apparent size of arc crater so that the bigger the lens (in diameter) the greater will be the beam candle-power.

A Real Idea!
Our Sign appears to be absolutely new. A Bank President

Equipping this bank sign with Reco Color Hoods made it "like new." Make your sign a new one, at small cost.
Reco Color Hoods
fit standard size bulbs. Six rich, non-fading colors. The color is in the glass. Superior to dipping and cheaper.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"Devil's Island"—Chadwick, Randolph Theatre, Chicago

Tribune: "The plot, which is interesting because it is based on fact, unfolds smoothly, sustained by considerable dramatic incident. Miss Frederick is as appealing as Jeanette Picto, the loyal Frenchwoman. Richard Tucker is nice and manly as the surgeon. George Lewis as their son is a fine upstanding young chap and little Marion Nixon as his sweetheart as is her habit brings charm to her role. 'Devil's Island' has been quite thoughtfully staged."

News: "Movies with penal colonies for locales are unusual. So 'Devil's Island' was a bit more interesting than usual as far as its scene was concerned. Some straightaway direction and a good performance by Pauline Frederick doubtless added to my enjoyment of the production. George Lewis and Marion Nixon are personable youngsters and John Miljan in a few brief scenes makes the most of his opportunities."

"The Bells"—Chadwick, Loew's State, New York

Daily News: "Lionel Barrymore is at his best. The direction of James Young is excellent throughout, and there are bits of camera work surpassing that seen in many more highly touted pictures. The supporting cast is good, especially Caroline Frances Cooke and Gustav von Seyfertitz. Lorimer Johnston, Lola Todd and Edward Phillips give convincing performances, with no overacting."

'Faust"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Capitol Theatre, New York

Times: "Here is a picture which is as far removed from the ordinary movie as a Tintoretto painting. It inspires with its wealth of imagination, its shadows and soft lights, its astounding camera feats and its admirable portrayals. No writer need be ashamed of saying that there are countless scenes in this production that virtually defy description, and as one watches the figurantes, one is confronted with a myriad of new screen ideas."

World: "Magnificently beautiful in its intelligence, in its photography, in its acting and direction. Possesses greatness and power and many touches of magic."

News: "A picture anybody will enjoy for its sheer beauty and dramatic power. This is one of the most beautiful pictures you've had an opportunity to see in many moons. Mr. Murnau, with the aid of an extraordinarily able cameraman, has fashioned a film that ought to be pleasing to even the most devout worshipper of Goethe."

Telegram: "Show us a picture that is more worthy of a long and luminous reign on Broadway at top prices and two-a-day showings and much advance trumpeting. The Capitol is at Broadway and Fiftieth Street for fans to make a beaten pathway to its doors. Of 'Faust,' the fairest jewel of Ufa's diadem, it shall be said with shining eyes and bated breath."

"When a Man's a Prince"—Pathe Metropolitan Theatre, Atlanta, Georgia

Georgian: "To my mind the most important motion picture event of the year—the return of Ben Turpin to the screen.

"Since Ben had last flickered in Atlanta he has passed through the poignancy of grief and the ecstasy of joy and I was delighted to see that despite all these emotions he remains the screen's greatest caricaturist.

"As I see it, there is no art so well defined and no art so rarely attained as the art of burlesque. It is the very refinement of incongruity—and all humor is built on incongruity. And of all the actors on the silver sheet, Turpin, alone, seems to have grasped burlesque's possibilties. The picture is one uninterrupted roar. If you miss it, no single spark of humor burns in your soul."

Why we insist....

IT is often said by engineers who have examined our manufacturing methods, that we are over-conscientious in adherence to details. We have but one answer:

The Simplex Organization has labored constantly for many years toward one ideal—perfection in Projector performance. The accomplishments we have made toward that end is in no small measure due to our insistence on highest quality of all materials and the greatest vigilance in the making of each part.

Perfect projection is possible only by the most accurate functioning of every mechanical part. Proof of that is revealed by the finer results obtained from a Projector equipped with genuine Simplex parts as compared with one fitted with substitute Simplex parts.

Parts made by the Simplex Organization must uphold the gratifying reputation of Simplex Projectors. They have a great responsibility. There can be no laxity in their manufacture. Substitute Simplex parts carry no such responsibility.

The Simplex Organization stands back of every Projector and every replacement part it manufactures. It guarantees the correct functioning of every machine properly equipped with genuine Simplex parts. For the sake of better performance as well as for your own financial protection, use only genuine Simplex parts in your Simplex Projector.

a Good Time was

Twelve of America's noted personalities saw Rod La Rocque in "The Cruise of the Jasper B"....And did they have a great time....Read what they have to say...............

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER

Widely known writer and humorist author of the famous work "Pigs is Pigs"

"When I saw Don Marquis' picture, 'The Cruise of the Jasper B', I laughed so much that it was worth three added years of life, seven gallons of tonic and five hundred dollars. Heaven and Will Hays know I'm no motion picture critic but when I laugh I laugh—and I'm willing to say that I never laughed more than at the absolutely joyous nonsense of 'The Cruise of the Jasper B'. In my opinion it is one of the six funniest pictures ever made in this or any other world, including the Scandinavian."

JOS. CUMMINGS CHASE

World famous painter

"As The Man in the Street, or A Typical Man About Town, or A Representative Home-loving Husband (or what not), I hasten to go on record. That picture 'Jasper B' by Don Marquis gave me more hilarious joy than any movie I ever saw. I unlimbered laughs that I haven't let loose since I was a kid. I must see it again."

GRANTLAND RICE

Most prominent sport writer

"I think it was one of the most humorous and interesting motion pictures I have seen in a long time. It is a new type, of high standard, ably directed, with a uniqe angle to work from."

FRANK D. CASEY

Art Editor of Life

"I enjoyed Don Marquis' picture very much. There's no doubt in my mind that the soldiers, tanks, aeroplanes and squadrons and battleships make as smashing a finish as I have ever seen. Best wishes to the "Cruise of the Jasper B."

ROGER B. WHITMAN

Prominent author and editor

"I am glad to take the opportunity to tell you that "The Cruise of the Jasper B' is quite the funniest film that I have ever seen—and I saw 'Charley's Aunt' three times."

"Uproariously funny! Ye gods! If I were a druggist I'd sue you for restraint of trade—miles of adhesive tape will be needed by the audience to patch up all the sides that will be split from laughter when this thing goes on."

D. A. McKINLAY
Prominent New York publisher

"The Cruise of the Jasper B." is a corker. It starts the chuckles going at the first title. It finds every funny bone in ones body. Voluntary and involuntary muscles give up to waves of laughter."

H. T. WEBSTER
Famous cartoonist

"It is gorgeous satire and fairly reeks with laughs."

FRAZIER HUNT
Associate Editor in Chief, International Magazine Company, Inc.

"The Cruise of the Jasper B.' is just about the gentlest kind of satire that has ever been put on the screen. I liked it a lot."

GEORGE B. MALLON
Vice president Bankers Trust Company of New York and president of the famous Dutch Treat Club

"The laughter increased with each succeeding reel, and I feel sure that the picture would be greatly enjoyed by the average moving picture fan."

WALLACE IRWIN
Noted American poet, author and humorist

"Although I am a commuter and usually have to go home before the show is over, I stayed through the final reel of Don Marquis' picture 'The Cruise of the Jasper B.' I think it is about the most successful comedy movie I have ever seen."

A. W. HUTAF
Advertising Executive

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S

Triumph of Showmanship

NOT since "The Big Parade" has Broadway welcomed a picture with such enthusiasm. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest Great White Way sensation is packing the cheering mobs into the Central Theatre at $2. A true triumph of showmanship, swept into fame by months of advance promotion and now the raging hit of New York. A thriller plus a heart-throb bigger than "The Old Nest." Contracts are going. Act quick. This is the opportunity of a showman's life-time.

MONEY!

—seldom have the newspaper critics agreed so unanimously on a box-office hit.

READ THESE REVIEWS! USE THEM IN ADS!

HARRIETTE UNDERHILL —N. Y. Herald-Tribune, says:

"OUR advice is if you haven't made out your list of the 10 best pictures of the year don't do it until you see 'The Fire Brigade'. One of the pleasantest surprises of the season. 'The Fire Brigade' takes you straight through a night of fighting the flames from the moment the alarm is sounded. It is one of the most exciting, inspiring, breath-taking pictures it has ever been our good fortune to sit through. Each member of the cast deserves to be decorated, and Will Nigh, the director, has kindled a fire that will not soon be extinguished. Don't fail to see 'The Fire Brigade'."

ROSE PELSWICK — N. Y. Journal, says:

"'THE Fire Brigade' dashes thrillingly into the Central. 'The Fire Brigade' stopped traffic at the premiere last night. The picture is packed with thrills. The heroic firemen are at last glorified in celluloid."

MAC in Daily Review, says:

"UNQUESTIONABLY the greatest fire picture yet produced. The Fire Brigade' is a showman's delight. I have witnessed many a first-run showing on Broadway, and never have I seen a picture that has received a finer reception.

"Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have got a picture in 'The Fire Brigade' that merits the word special, if any picture ever does. That spells roadshow and showmanship. The question is not will it make money, but how much will it make. It's a sure winner!"

ARTHUR JAMES —Motion Pictures Today, says:

"'FIRE BRIGADE' a hit. Daily press unanimous in its praise of the thriller. At times the audience became so excited that it burst forth with cheers and prolonged applause. Absolutely no doubt about the box value of this picture, and it looks as though it will have a Broadway home for some time."

WILELLA WALDORF —N. Y. Eve. Post, says:

"STIRRINGLY presented. Unflaggingly interesting and full of thrills. As exciting as the historic chariot race in 'Ben Hur'."

ROSCOE McGOWEN—Daily News, says:

"'THE Fire Brigade' volcano of heroism and thrills. 'The Fire Brigade' not only rhymes with 'The Big Parade' but is as worthy a portrayal of the heroic deeds of peace as the other is of the deeds of war. No scene in any picture has tingled my spine and made me sit up as straight as did the sight of those three gallant old fire horses racing along-side modern motor trucks, with the spark-spitting old steamer careening along behind. The fire fighting in this film is the real thing and done by real firemen. It is a glorious picture and worth everybody's while to see. The love scene ranks as one of the best. I think I'll have to say more of this film later. Meanwhile see it for yourself. There's not a dragging moment in it."

FRED SCHADER—Variety, says:

"'FIRE BRIGADE' a darn good special. It is by far the best of the fire pictures on the screen to date. Atop of that it is about as good a sob puller as 'Over the Hill' was, and that is saying a lot. This is sure to click. It is an out-and-out hokum thriller of the type mass audiences eat up."

DOROTHY HERZOG —New York Mirror, says:

"'THE FIRE BRIGADE' is the greatest thriller on Broadway. The terrific climax lifted a first night audience to its feet applauding and cheering with a sustained enthusiasm. 'The Fire Brigade' is a stirring tribute to the men who protect the public's welfare but who seldom win recognition. Put it on your must list and book it with your Christmas gaieties."

HERB CRUIKSHANK —Morning Telegraph, says:

"YOU are here and now guaranteed 'kick' of your life at the Central Theatre, where 'The Fire Brigade' will fight the flames for many a day and night. Will Nigh has directed a masterpiece. Hard-boiled or soft, you will stand up and cheer when old Bert Woodruff guides his three dashing steeds at break-neck speed to the orphanage fire. To me the three horses supply the biggest thrill. There are others in abundance. A smashing melodrama that will make you cheer through your tears."

JIMMIE ADAMS COMEDIES

The public is hungry for laughs. And the theatre that provides more and better comedy is building for bigger profits just as surely as the restaurant that provides better food, and more of it, for the same money.

Jimmie Adams Comedies bring action, pep, laughs and a delightful comedy personality to your screen, in addition to the clever stories and fine production quality for which Christie-made pictures are famous. They are truly first aid to the laugh-hungry public, and to your box-office.

SHORT FEATURES

Strength--And Insurance

Centralizing the command of the allied armies helped to hasten victory. Centralization of authority makes for strength in business just as it does in war.

The position of Educational Pictures, and their ability to serve you, the exhibitor, have just been materially strengthened by a step in this direction. With the establishment of a new corporation—EDUCATIONAL PICTURES, INC.—the producing units, making about half of Educational's short features product are consolidated with the distributing machinery. All are now under one command.

For seven years Educational has been serving you faithfully—with the highest type of short features product on the market. That should be insurance enough for the 13,000 theatres that look to Educational for "the spice of the program." But here is still further insurance—a policy guaranteeing you a continuance of the best the market affords; giving you added assurance that Educational will "deliver" on its bigger plans for the next year.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, FEBRUARY 18, 1927 No. 7

Announcing "The Showman"

THE forward march of the industry is keyed to the theatre—in all its branches—construction, equipment, management and showmanly operation. As the theatre goes, so goes the industry. It is the life-blood of the business. And it has now become both a science and an art.

This means that, more and more, the theatre is becoming a specialized field of endeavor; it therefore deserves specialized publication treatment on a scale never before attempted in this field.

* * *

RECOGNIZING the commanding importance of the theatre of to-day and tomorrow, Motion Picture News announces the publication, monthly, of "The Showman," in which the whole field of theatre activity will be covered.

This section will be incorporated in Motion Picture News. In form, it will be attractive, just as the fine theatres to-day are attractive in themselves.

In contents, it will be practical and comprehensive, and deal, on an expert basis, with the complete theatre—all its problems and its innovations; the exploiting of pictures as well as the exploiting of the theatre as a show in itself.

In gathering this material together monthly, Motion Picture News is responding to a general demand from the exhibitor and the advertiser. "The Showman" will be an extension of our service in showmanship—in the broadest meaning of the word—a service which, beginning with the first issue of The News, has been carried right through, broadening as the industry has developed.

In each issue in which it appears, "The Showman" will be stressed as of the first importance. By placing it within the issue, instead of isolating it as a separate section, we shall make it easier to file and of permanent value.

* * *

THE theatre of to-day is a showmanship unit. It works for one single pleasing effect on its patrons. The picture, and its exploitation, vital as they are, can no longer be considered the only problem of showmanship.

Showmanship means, now, the whole theatre. "The Showman" in Motion Picture News will be built on that idea. And we shall spare no effort to make it of the greatest possible service.

"The Showman's" first appearance will be in the issue of March 4. Watch for further detailed announcements.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

LOUIS B. MAYER talked informally and interestingly the other morning on the production situation, describing some of the methods in use at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer plant. He had just returned from a few days' rest at Palm Beach, and was looking fit and hearty. He emphasized, above all, the fact that ordinary commonsense was at the foundation of M-G-M-'s production success.

"I'd love to be called a genius," he said, "if it were true, but it isn't. I just saw two and two side by side and decided that they made four. I ignored the traditional way of doing things and used plain commonsense.

"Take this matter of previewing a picture and then remaking as much as may be necessary to get it right. In the beginning they called our studio "Mayer's Garden of Retakes," but they don't laugh at us now. We see it on the screen and if it isn't right we make it right.

"There is a case in point right now, 'The Mysterious Island.' We filmed a considerable part of it, then discovered that we were on the wrong track, so we simply stopped work. When we have the script the way we want it, we will go ahead again.

"That is why we have 65 players in our stock company. Every player in 'The Mysterious Island' is under contract to us, and when we want to reassemble the cast we will have them at hand. That makes it possible for us to take unlimited time on each picture, when necessary. If we didn't have the players in our own stock company, we couldn't be sure of getting them again when we wanted them."

Screen Originals

MR. MAYER is a strong supporter of the original screen story, written to fit a definite idea created at the studio. Most of the company's successes, he pointed out, have been written directly for the screen. The box-office, he said, would give its own answer to anyone who doubted that good pictures, well cast, could go over without previous appearance as a novel or play.

"We have 71 writers under contract for just that purpose," he continued. "Some of them will prove capable, others will not. Those who do not make the grade are dropped when their trial period expires, and others are taken on to replace them.

Broadway Grosses

BUSINESS up and down Broadway this week continued good in most quarters. The Capitol, with "The General," got off to a strong start on Saturday and Sunday, though business has not held up so well since. The week should be in excess of $50,000, unless it should taper off further, which appears unlikely.

The Mark Strand is enjoying rushing business with "McFadden's Flats," which will be held for a second week. An extra show is being given at 10:30 a.m., and the gross on the week should be well over the $40,000 mark.

The record for a non-holiday week is being broken at the Paramount with "It." The holiday record would probably be broken were it not for the large number who come to the first show at reduced prices and sit through the first de luxe performance. As it is, the week should touch $75,000.

The Rialto is doing splendid business on "The Kid Brother," though it fluctuates from day to day in an unexplained manner. Probably about $32,500 on the week.

The situation on the two-dollar pictures is pretty much unchanged. Practically all are doing good, steady business.

"Flesh and the Devil," incidentally, came within $1,700 of the $250,000 predicted for its four weeks at the Capitol.

A Roadshow Record

WHAT was claimed as the largest day's receipts ever taken in by a roadshow outside of New York was registered by "The Big Parade" in a four-day engagement at the Auditorium in Omaha, with $4,408 for the first day and $15,914 for the four days.

Close on the heels of this came the announcement, a few days later, that "Beau Geste," in Chicago, had taken in $5,215 in one day at the Auditorium.

Judge Menjou

AN important annual event at the University of Florida is a beauty contest in which photographs of lovely girls from all parts of Florida are collected and published in the college paper, after which first, second and third honors are awarded. This year the students requested Adolphe Menjou to act as judge. He has accepted and his selection of the winners will be published in The Seminole.

Chinese Home Production

LUTHER M. JEE, general manager of the Peacock Motion Picture Corporation of China, and formerly a student here, contributes an interesting article on film conditions there. He traces the growth of interest in films in China from its first beginnings, 18 or 20 years ago, and states that the natives are beginning to patronize the theatres to a greater extent. This will ultimately mean a much larger market.

The number of productions made in China is steadily increasing, and they are more popular than any other, even though technically inferior, since the Chinese can comprehend them more fully than occidental features. From 1921 to 1923, six features were produced. In 1924, 14 were made; in 1925, 37; and in 1926 about 57 domestic films were released, most of them with considerable success. This, however, as Mr. Jee points out will result in an increased popularity of motion pictures among the natives, which will in turn benefit high grade American films.

Joy Girl Special Arrives

BEARING the array of screen talent which Fox Films rounded up to play in the screen version of "The Joy Girl," the Joy Girl Special arrived on schedule in Palm Beach on Monday, according to telegraphic advices received at the Fox Films home office in New York. The Joy Girl Special was under the command of Allan Dwan, who will direct the picture. It left New York last Saturday night, operating on a ten-minute headway over the crack Orange Blossom Flyer, fastest of trains plying between New York and the popular Florida winter resort.

Every member of the cast of twenty-eight players stepped off the train well rested and ready for the ten strenuous days they will work before the camera on the exteriors which Mr. Dwan has scheduled for production while they are in Palm Beach.

Olive Borden, who was brought from the West Coast Studios to star in "The Joy Girl," was the subject of a welcome at the station which was worthy of traveling royalty. It was a case of the South welcoming one of its own. Miss Borden is a true Southerner, calling Norfolk, Va., her birthplace.

A reception to Miss Borden was given at the Ritz-Carlton last Friday afternoon, to introduce her to the other members of the cast and the press.

A surprise was ushered in just before the party broke up by Joseph W. Engel, studio manager. He had in tow none other than Marie Dressler, whom he had just signed to play an important comedy role in Miss Borden's picture.

It would be justifiable if Miss Borden felt a wee bit proud of being the guest of honor at this party. She is barely nineteen and a year ago was an unknown. Her first featured role was in "The Yankee Senor" starring Tom Mix, released January 10, 1926.

The first production still to be wired from Los Angeles to New York. It is of Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree in "Mr. Wu," and was sent by Pete Smith, M-G-M studio publicity chief, to the home office in New York

Others in the east who were on hand to honor Miss Borden were: Mary Alden, William Norris, Helen Chandler and Flora Sheffield, who quit "The Constant Nymph" company to join "The Joy Girl" personnel; Jerry Miley, Frank Walsh, assistant to D. W. Griffith, and who will take turns at acting and assisting Mr. Dwan, and a number of others.

Scenarist's Broadway Play

OLGA PRINTZLAU, screen scenarist, is speeding eastward for the premiere in Brooklyn on February 14 of a Broadway stage play written by her, "Window Panes." She wrote it 10 years ago as a scenario, but it was never sold. Another play, "The Sting," has been sold for production.

Ralston-Arlen Nuptials

JOBYNA RALSTON and Richard Arlen were married this week at Riverside, at Southern California's famous "Place of Honeymoons," the Mission Inn. Miss Ralston and Arlen admitted their engagement several months ago, shortly before the latter left for a long location trip with the "Wings" company, and announced that they would be married sometime in February. Arlen returned to the studio last week only to find that Miss Ralston had been cast to play opposite him in the production as his sweetheart.

Welcome Dinner To Ray Hall

The Welcome Dinner to Ray Hall, new editor of Pathe News, by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., personnel at the Hotel Roosevelt, New York City, on January 31

That was the last straw. This week they persuaded director William Wellman to allow them two days' leave, and made a dash for Riverside where the knot was tied. Their honeymoon, however, will be short. Both will be back on the "Wings" set Monday with a wedding trip planned at the conclusion of the picture.

Murnau Completes "Sunrise"

AFTER three months of preparation and four months of actual shooting, F. W. Murnau has completed "Sunrise," his first American picture for Fox Films. In its present form it has about a dozen subtitles, and a few of these may be eliminated. Winfield R. Sheehan, whose producing courage was responsible for engaging the noted German director and giving him a free hand in working in an American studio, has been in daily touch with the work and pronounces himself thoroughly satisfied with the outcome of the experiment. "Sunrise" will be awaited by the trade and the public with unparalleled interest.

Meanwhile, elsewhere on the Fox lot, a little girl who plays one of the two principal roles in the picture has been elevated to the dignity of her own bungalow dressing-room—Janet Gaynor, who in 18 months has traveled farther than most screen aspirants travel in many years. Almost unknown a year ago, she has played some of the prize roles of the year in "The Return of Peter Grimm," "Seventh Heaven" and "Sunrise."

Stills By Wire

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER this week set a precedent by sending a production still from coast to coast via the American Telephone and Telegraph wires, for the first time in history.

The photograph, made in California on the set where Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree were appearing in "Mr. Wu," was immediately sent over the wire by Pete Smith of the West Coast publicity department and within seven minutes was completely transmitted to New York.

The industry will undoubtedly be quick to recognize the possibilities of telephoning production photos from West to East to take care of special preview engagements and advance showing and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's innovation is expected to have an important bearing on subsequent activities in this field.

An Excellent Photographic Book

AN unusually comprehensive and thorough textbook on the theory, principles and practice of photography, "Photography, Its Principles and Practice," has just been brought out by the D. Van Nostrand Company, 8 Warren Street, New York City. Written by C. B. Neblette, member of the faculty of the Texas A. & M. College, and former director of the division of photography at Pennsylvania State College, it combines more completely than we have ever seen the scientific side of photography with the practical. It delves deeply into optics, chemistry and the like, yet it is not lacking in formulæ and methods for everyday work. Every photographer should find it invaluable, and the motion picture cameraman should derive much from it, though it does not treat directly of his work.

"U" Aids Japanese Films

UNIVERSAL has entered into a distributing arrangement with a Japanese producing organization, we learn from a four-page advertising section in The Japan Times and Mail. Ryosuke Tachibana, proprietor of the Uzumasa studio at Kyoto, will make the pictures with Japanese stories, staff and casts, and the Universal offices will distribute them throughout Japan. Domestic production is a strong factor in the Orient, and this appeals to us as a sane move to work with this situation instead of vainly fighting it. It is, incidentally, the seventh foreign country in which Carl Laemmle has helped to foster native production.

Another Prince Coming

PRINCE JOACHIM ALBRECHT, cousin of ex-Kaiser Wilhelm, who is a distinguished composer and orchestra conductor, will visit America for a concert tour.

The Joy Girl Special which carried Allan Dwan and the Fox company last Saturday to make exteriors at Palm Beach for "The Joy Girl." Olive Borden is seen in the centre between Neil Hamilton and Jerry Miley

Preliminary arrangements are being made by Holmes C. Walton, who is in receipt of cable advices from Prince Louis de Bourbon stating that Prince Louis, together with the Marquis de Byron, Baron Lemheny and Count Adolf von Arnim, will arrive on the President Harding. Prince Louis is authorized to close contracts for Prince Joachim's tour.

We'll Bet He Likes "It"

EXHIBITORS are credited with fertile minds when it comes to finding excuses for not buying a certain picture, but one of the record excuses recently came into the P.D.C. offices from a salesman in New Brunswick.

He was negotiating with an exhibitor for the P.D.C. line-up, when the prospect pointed to one title and said: "I don't want that picture, anyway."

The salesman looked at the indicated title and saw that it was "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary," considered one of the best on the program and having in the cast May Robson, who played the role on the stage.

"What's the matter with that?" he asked. "That's going to be a knock-out."

"Don't care," said the exhibitor. "I paint my own signs and that title is too long."

"When a Man Loves" Opening

ESTABLISHING a precedent in the first presentation of a feature picture on Broadway Warner Brothers offered to a specially invited audience of critics and professionals the latest John Barrymore picture, "When a Man Loves," and their new Vitaphone program at a matinee at the Selwyn Theatre, Thursday, February 3. The premier was characterized by the absence of the crowds who usually make traffic difficult, if not impossible, in front of a theatre showing for the first time a much advertised film. Absent, too, the glamour associated inevitably with the night and its myriad of lights. Apart from that the first performance was of the same character as others; i.e., attended by every motion picture star and executive in New York at the time and able to get away from studio or office with a sprinkling of who's who in the financial, social, theatrical and distinctly "Broadway" worlds. This meant a crowded house repeated at the evening showing of the film and the music-picture synchronization.

The Vitaphone program was generally effective and acceptable. It is sufficiently diversified to please, or should, almost every taste. Grand opera represented by Gigli, Talley, Jean Gordon, Mary Lewis and Charles Hackett, and for the proletariat (in a music sense), Waring's Pennsylvanians and Van and Schenck.

Among those invited were the following: Ethel Barrymore, Mme. Alda, Giulio Gatti-Casazza, Fred Stone, Wilton Lackaye, John E. No "Medal" Can Touch You

WITH a committee of prominent exhibitors as judges, in conjunction with officials of Metropolitan, "Getting Gertie's Garter" has been selected as the Gold Medal Metropolitan production made during 1926, and medals have been awarded to the star, Marie Prevost, and the director, E. Mason Hopper, for their outstanding work in connection with this recently-completed production.

The selection of "Getting Gertie's Garter" as the "most entertaining production filmed by the company in 1926" was made by officials of the company and the exhibitor committee, composed of J. H. Goldberg, booking manager of West Coast Theatres; Harry C. Arthur, president of North American Theatres, and E. H. Emmick, president of Golden State Theatres; based on audience tests of the production held recently in various Coast towns. In studying the audience reports and making the selections of "Getting Gertie's Garter" as Metropolitan's best entertainment of the past year's production, Al Christie and William Sistrom, general manager of Metropolitan, acted for the company, in collaboration with the prominent exhibitor judges.

Executive's Father Dies

JAMES GRAINGER, 77, father of James R. Grainger, general sales manager of Fox Film Corporation, and E. C. Grainger of the home office staff of that company, died at his home in Medford, Mass., Sunday. Mr. Grainger was one of the pioneers in the merchandising business in Boston and had been associated in executive capacities with various leading department stores in Boston. At the time of his death he was Merchandising Director of the Jordan & Marsh Store in the Hub. He was well known in Boston and one of the oldest residents of Medford.

The funeral will be held in Medford, Mass., Tuesday.

Max Davidson Weds

MAX DAVIDSON, player of Jewish character roles in Hal Roach's Pathe comedies, was recently married in Hollywood to the surprise of his host of friends in the film colony, taking as his bride Miss Alice Marti of Honolulu.

Mrs. Davidson has been visiting in Los Angeles for the past few months, and the nuptials were the outcome of a whirlwind romance of that duration.

Early in the week, the comedian surreptitiously purchased a commodious Beverly Hills home for his bride, and Hal Roach presented him with a long-term contract as a wedding present.

Cohen Appointment Confirmed

Production Manager of Short Features Department of F.P.-L.; Plans Announced for News Reel, Comedies, etc.

New Paramount short subjects building, located near Times Square, New York City

COINCIDENT with the announcement of plans for the establishment of a short features department in Famous Players-Lasky is the confirmation by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of the company, of the appointment of Emmanuel Cohen as production manager of the newly inaugurated service. Mr. Cohen, who has been head of the Pathe News Reel since its inception 13 years ago, has just assumed his duties at Paramount.

The news reel, which will be the keystone of the short feature structure, will have all the resources of the company back of it, and arrangements are being made to develop the organization to a point never before attained, according to the Paramount statement. Already negotiations have been completed for the establishment of staff cameramen in the most important news centers in the world, and one of Mr. Cohen's first duties will be the construction of a modern short features building for which plans have already been drawn.

In addition to getting out the news reel, Mr. Cohen will be responsible for the production of comedy and novelty features which will be supplemented by the distribution of short subjects made by affiliated producers. Included in the Paramount product will be a series of two-reel comedies starring Edward Everett Horton, which will be made by Hollywood Productions at the Metropolitan studios in Hollywood, with William R. Fraser as president and general manager of the company. Sales of all Paramount short features will be under the general direction of George W. Weeks, who will also co-operate with the outside producers of Paramount short releases.

"We feel that we are particularly fortunate in obtaining Mr. Cohen as the head of our new Short Features Department," said Mr. Kent. "As the pioneer in the news-reel field he has won the confidence not only of the trade whom he has served so long and well, but also of high-ranking officials of the various governments throughout the world. Therefore, the Paramount News Reel is not an experiment; it will be handled and directed by the leader in the news reel field, and the organization which Mr. Cohen has already started to build is an earnest of what we plan to make this important factor of our product . . ."

Mr. Cohen was particularly enthusiastic over the prospects for the Paramount News. "For years," he said, "I have had in the back of my mind facilities which would make possible the development of the news reel to a point which will seem revolutionary to those who think of the news reel only in its present state. I vision a vast organization for the collection and dissemination of news in picture form. The big press associations like the Associated Press, the United Press, Reuters, Ltd., which to us seem tremendous engines for the spread of intelligence, will be equalled when the news reel reaches the extent of its potentialities . . ."

Emmanuel Cohen

Following the publication of rumors that Mr. Cohen was to join Paramount came many messages of congratulations from prominent government officials who have known Mr. Cohen for years. Some of these laudatory letters and telegrams follow:

Vice-President Dawes—As you start on your new work as editor of the Paramount News Reel I send to you my sincere congratulations and my best wishes for success.

Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett of the United States Navy—I want to congratulate Famous Players on its selection of you as editor for its news reel, and to express to you my appreciation for the hearty co-operation that you have always shown in fostering naval aviation and the national defense. I trust that in your new field there will be a continuation of our personal and official co-operation.

Major-General Mason M. Patrick, chief of the Air Corps—I have just learned that Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has finally succeeded in making you one of its notable staff. I congratulate this company upon enlisting you under its banner. I hope very much that the change will be a pleasant one for you and that you will keep up your interest in the air corps and in all matters that affect our national defense.

Major-General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps—I am writing to felicitate you on your new field of activity and to congratulate the company with which you are to be associated on acquiring the services of a man of such ability as yourself.

Many epistles expressing similar sentiments were received from Admiral W. S. Benson, of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, United States Senator Richard P. Ernst of Kentucky, Everett Sanders, secretary to President Coolidge, T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the Shipping Board, E. Ross Bartley, secretary to the Vice-President and Commander John Stapler of the Navy.

Lasky Predicts Change in Projection; Mentions Three Dimension Film

JESSE L. LASKY predicts "extraordinary developments and changes in the one phase of motion pictures which has been at a standstill"—projection. All other branches of the industry have experienced many adjustments but, until the present, "projection has been, with few refinements, the same as in the days of the first pictures," says Mr. Lasky. Famous is now using the Magnascope, which permits the projection of a picture many times the size of the ordinary screen, in the presentation of "Old Ironsides."

Many other changes are under way, says the Paramount vice-president, who also forecasts the early use of three dimension film. He states that successful experiments are being conducted along projection lines in connection with the showing of "Wings," which will soon be presented with innovations in this branch of the mechanical side of the industry.

Talking Pictures Figure in Week's News

Shubert-Warner Deal Rumored; Coast Inventor Claims Improvement; G.E. Device Is Demonstrated

TALKING pictures were again in the foreground this week, with rumors of a Shubert-Warner tie-up on Vitaphone, a new device announced in San Francisco, and formal announcement of the General Electric Company's method.

The Shubert-Warner deal is said to involve Vitaphone attractions for the Shubert legitimate houses throughout the country. It is also said that the Shuberts plan to adapt some of their musical comedy successes to Vitaphone and film, including ''The Student Prince.'' This has not been confirmed, but it is known that Warner Bros. are making certain plans in connection with ''The Student Prince.''

Rudolph Spreckels, chairman of the Federal Telegraph Company of California, announced this week in San Francisco that his company had acquired control of the Theodore H. Nakken patent for talking films, and that the inventor was developing his method for them. Newspaper reports made sweeping claims for this as a basic patent, but the attorney for Lee De Forest in New York declared that he was familiar with the Nakken patent, which he said was of a highly specific nature and would not affect the field as a whole. He characterized newspaper reports of the fundamental nature of the patent as highly ridiculous.

The General Electric device has been demonstrated and is of the type which records directly on the film by means of light, without any supplementary phonograph record. It is understood that the G. E. will market this itself through a subsidiary company.

The process, the result of several years of experimenting in the General Engineering Laboratory of the company, means but slight change in standard motion picture projectors, since it involves only the addition of a sound-reproducing attachment and a loud speaker suitable for auditorium use. Both the picture and the sound are recorded on the same film.

One of the demonstrations has been with music to accompany feature films, the music being by a full concert orchestra. Development of this field requires no change in the technique of making the original film. After the original picture film has been made and titled, the accompanying music is played by a concert orchestra and is recorded on a film. The picture and sound records are then printed on one film in the proper time relation.

Another type has been the showing of singers and instrumentalists while they are presenting programs. Similar demonstrations have been made with vocal and instrumental soloists, with string and with vocal quartets, and with speakers.

Outstanding among the features of the new apparatus are that both the picture and sound records are on the same standard motion picture film, and that a standard motion picture projector, with an attachment for the sound reproducer, is used. Since the picture and sound records are printed side by side on the film, it necessarily follows that the two must be properly timed or synchronized at all times.

European Films Acquired

American Companies to Distribute Foreign Productions, Some in U.S., Others Throughout World

EVIDENCE of the increasingly international nature of film distribution by American companies was furnished this week in abundance. E. E. Shauer, general manager of Paramount's foreign department, and T. A. Welsh, of the British firm of Welsh-Pearson, concluded a deal by which Mr. Shauer's department will distribute throughout the entire world (not including the U. S.) a British production, ''Huntingtower,'' to star Sir Harry Lauder.

Production of the picture will be launched in London and Scotland early this summer and will be directed by George Pearson, who will first make a visit to Hollywood. It is an original written by Col. John Buchan, a British author.

In addition, Famous has purchased from Arthur A. Lees, agent of Gaumont, ''Second to None'' for Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the Dutch East Indies.

Fox Films has announced that it will release in the U. S. on April 3d ''Madame Wants No Children,'' produced in Germany by Fox. It stars Maria Corda and was directed by Alexander Korda, and will be the first of the Fox German productions to be released in this country.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has arranged for the distribution in France, the U. S., Belgium and Switzerland of ''Mlle. from Armentieres,'' and in Australia and New Zealand of ''Mons.'' Both are British films.

King's Speech Thought to Mean British Quota

THE speech made by the King of England at the opening of Parliament on Tuesday announced that a bill will be introduced to encourage the production and exhibition of British films. This presumably refers to a quota measure, and is thought by observers to virtually assure the passage of a measure of this nature. If so, this will mean definite restrictions on the importation of outside pictures into Great Britain. The recent Imperial Conference voted to leave action on this up to each individual country or dominion in the empire.

Harry Reichenbach Dinner Guest of Green Room Club

The Green Room Club will on Sunday evening, February 13th, tender a beefsteak dinner to Harry Reichenbach. Harry has for years acted as toastmaster on the occasions when men and women prominent in public and theatrical life, have been immortalized and impugned at the well-known Green Room Club luncheons and dinners. Harry has worked hard and willingly for the Green Room Club at all times, and in recognition of his efforts, the club has decided to thank him publicly and impressively for his services. So this time he will come as ''The Jest of Honor'' and experience some of the sensations which the favored few who have been so honored by the Club have felt in the past.

Bert Robinson, well-known Green Roomer, has been appointed by Prompter Paul Meyer as the Doorman for the occasion. Wilton Lackaye will serve as roastmaster.

D. W. Griffith Sued by Ex-Soldier for $50,000

Alleging that his right hand had been blown off by the premature explosion of a cannon during the filming of ''The Battle of Bunker Hill,'' a part of Griffith's production of ''America'' in 1923, Edward K. Bender, of Philadelphia, Pa., former private in the Eighteenth Infantry, stationed at Fort Slocum, New Rochelle, started suit this week against the producers in the Supreme Court at White Plains, N.Y.

"Metropolis" Replaces "The Rough Riders" at Cohan

Owing to the fact that the cutting, titling and editing of ''The Rough Riders,'' the Paramount road-show vehicle, will take longer than originally estimated by its producers, the picture will not open at the Cohan Theatre on February 21st as planned. Instead ''Metropolis,'' the Ufa production distributed in this country by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will have its United States premiere at that theatre.

"Carmen" to Be Given in Talking Pictures

Grand opera with a Metropolitan Grand Opera Company cast will be presented in talking picture form this season, according to Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers. The first presentation of the kind, he said, will be ''Carmen,'' cut to thirty minutes, with Martinelli starring. This will be part of the prologue accompanying a film featuring Syd Chaplin.

Famous Canadian Acquires Savoy at Moose Jaw, Sask.

The Savoy Theatre at Moose Jaw, Sask., Canada, has been acquired by Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, and has been reopened after a thorough renovation. E. P. Fields, manager of the Capitol Theatre at Moose Jaw, is also manager of the Savoy.

Educational Merges Interests

Holding Company Formed to Consolidate Exchanges and Major Portion of Producing Units

ALL Educational Exchanges in the United States and Canada, which number 36, and the producing interests supplying the major portion of the company's output have been consolidated and will be operated under a new holding company known as Educational Pictures, Inc., announced E. W. Hammons, president of Educational Film Exchanges, who also heads the new company, this week.

This merging of interests has been effected through a deal with Dillon, Read & Company which had its inception back in November of 1926, when negotiations for refinancing of Educational were opened with the object of allowing the company a larger working capital in order to continue the brand names of productions under the Educational banner in a contemplated centralization of both exchange and producing units. Also Educational, which was distributing a large portion of its product made by units financed by outside interests, would be enabled to engage extensively in production, functioning as a producer-distributor organization.

As a result of the arrangements made Educational Pictures, Inc., is authorized to issue $3,500,000 preferred stock and 250,000 shares of common, of which $2,000,000 preferred, with warrants to buy common, is offered now through Dillon, Read & Company. The maximum number of common shares to be issued at this time is 162,630.

E. W. Hammons

Since Educational established its national system of exchanges in 1919, these exchanges have been operated by subsidiary corporations, the majority of whose stock has been held by Educational Film Exchanges. Under the refinancing plan now announced, these subsidiary companies will be owned outright by Educational Pictures. The controlling interest remains in the same hands as in the past and there will be no change in management or personnel, Hammons stated. Holders of stock in the Educational exchanges now become stockholders in the parent company, which takes over operation of the exchanges.

The producing units now to be consolidated include four comanies heretofore controlled by Gauntlett & Co., which have produced for Educational release the Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Mermaid, Tuxedo, Juvenile and Cameo comedies, all of which are made at the Educational studios. The subsidiary corporation which acquired the studios is included in the consolidation. The film business and certain assets of Gauntlett & Company, Inc., are also to be acquired. Product in addition to that supplied by Gauntlett & Co. is distributed under annual contracts made with other producers except the distribution of Kinograms, which is controlled by contract extending to 1930.

Growth of Educational since 1922 is cited by the number of accounts served each year. They are:

June, 1922, 5,700; June, 1923, 6,500; June, 1924, 7,100; June, 1925, 8,500; in June, 1926, 10,100; while at the beginning of this year there were on Educational's books, 13,000 active accounts.

Mr. Hammons said in reference to the Educational personnel:

“Other important executives of the constituent companies, who have contributed largely to the companies' growth and success, will remain in charge of their operations.”

“Educational's controlling interest,” declared Mr. Hammons, “will remain in the same hands as in the past.”

Busy Week For Merger Rumors

Hearst Linked By Reports to Keith-P. D. C.-Pathe Pool; M. - G. - M. Less Anxious Now

RUMORS have been unusually active this week concerning various projects for further mergers of film concerns. These have had both United Artists and Cosmopolitan lined up with the supposedly impending Pathe-Keith-P.D.C., although there has been nothing to confirm this in any definite way.

The Pathe-Keith-P.D.C. merger is understood to be nearing a satisfactory consummation, with the probability of certain prominent producer-directors joining the group, D. W. Griffith and James Cruze both being named in this connection.

William Randolph Hearst is claimed to be seriously considering aligning himself with the combination, although there is no reason to suppose that he is dissatisfied with his present Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer tie-up.

Another active rumor had United Artists joining the Keith-P.D.C.-Pathe pool. This may have been started by a reported deal in New Orleans, where United Artists may take over an Orpheum house. Keith, meanwhile, is said to be quietly planning to bring the Orpheum circuit into the parent corporation, consolidating all of its interests.

Lou Anger, directing vice-president of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., arrived in New York this week for an indefinite stay. He announced that several deals for houses were pending which he expected to complete shortly. Deals have been closed in Seattle, Los Angeles and Detroit.

Rumors of a Keith-Albee and Shubert merger with motion picture interests were strongly denied by E. F. Albee and Lee Shubert, both at Palm Beach.

Wall Street, meanwhile, continues to seethe with similar film merger rumors. The “Wall Street Journal” recently said:

“Several Stock Exchange houses were discussing plans for combinations in the motion picture and theatrical field and intimations were made that conditions have been shaping themselves favorably. Most of them were of the opinion that Loew's would benefit, particularly, if such proposals are consummated satisfactorily.”

In a similar vein was a note by the financial editor of “The New York American,” which was first to print the story of the Educational reorganization:

“Recent quiet absorption of Loew's has attracted attention, and those who have carried on part of the buying are now hinting at merger developments. It is maintained that the controlling interests of three of the leading moving picture companies have held several conferences recently, and it is thought that they have discussed the advisability of consolidation and whether or not the Federal Trade Commission would approve of such action.”

Talk of the M.-G.-M. and United Artists merger was strongly current this week, it being understood that Chaplin had largely removed his objections to the plan. Louis B. Mayer in an interview, however, stated that he saw less reason for it than before, and less likelihood of it. M.-G.-M., he felt, would benefit little by such a move at this time.

Many Prominent People at Opening of New Saenger Theatre

MANY people prominent in the civic, commercial and motion picture world attended the formal opening of the New Saenger Theatre, New Orleans, on February fourth. The dedicatory performance was held at 7:30 o'clock in the evening of Friday, February fourth, and the first public showing given at 11 o'clock the following morning.

Preceding the formal opening was a street parade participated in by Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Sam Katz, president of the Publix Theatres Corporation; Robert Lieber and Richard A. Rowland, president and vice-president, respectively, of First National Pictures; Joseph Schenck, president of United Artists; S. R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Col. E. A. Schiller, vice-president of Loew's, Inc., and Nicholas Schenck, vice-president and general manager of Loew's, Inc., and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Lou Metzger, general manager of Universal Film Corporation.

Gov. Simpson of Louisiana and Mayor O'Keefe of New Orleans led the state and city officials.

Following the parade, the assembed notables, executives of the Saenger Theatres, and business leaders were entertained at a testimonial luncheon tendered by the Association of Commerce to the Saenger Theatres, Inc., at which Judge Rufus E. Foster presided as master of ceremonies. Charles Rosen represented the Saenger interests and Mrs. Elizabeth Werlein spoke for the Will Hays organization.

Announce New Features for Roxy Theatre

Equipped for Natural Vision ana Vitaphone; United Artists, Pathe and Universal Features Booked

ANNOUNCEMENTS by company officials this week regarding special equipment which will be a feature of the Roxy Theatre in New York include the statement that the huge playhouse to be presided over by S. L. Rothafel will have facilities for the presentation of the Spoor Natural Vision pictures, thus confirming a report published some time ago by "Motion Picture News." The first production employing this new three-dimension photography, "The Flag Maker" is nearing completion under the direction of J. Stuart Blackton at studios on the West Coast, and it is likely that the work will have its premiere at the Roxy.

It was also formally announced that Rothafel had signed a contract with Vitaphone officials for the installation of Vitaphone in the new theatre, probably the first to have this equipment built into the structure as a permanent fixture.

Work on the theatre is being rushed to make possible its opening to the public, tentatively scheduled to take place the first week in March. Meantime Rothafel is busy signing up screen attractions and members of the "gang" who will appear as principals in the stage presentations to be offered at the Roxy.

Gloria Swanson, whose first independent production for United Artists, "The Love of Sunya," will be the opening attraction, made a tour of inspection of the theatre on Tuesday of this week. Following the formal "signing of the papers" which give Roxy the premiere booking of "The Love of Sunya," Miss Swanson, with Roxy as her guide and a large collection of newspaper photographers and reporters forming a column behind her, picked her way under and around scaffolding and builders' debris on a tour of inspection which took her from the stage, through the large auditorium and finally up to the very dome of the house, where, as flashlights boomed she penciled her initials and the date on a ledge of plaster supporting some gilt frieze.

Universal announced that "The Love Thrill," that company's newest production starring Laura La Plante, has been booked for an early showing. The La Plante picture was directed by Millard Webb and has Tom Moore as leading man opposite the star.

"Alaskan Adventures," a pictorial record of the adventures of Art Young and Jack Robertson, well-known explorers, in the wilds of the North, has been booked by Roxy for one of the early presentations at his new playhouse. This Pathe release was signed up by Roxy during the past week.

Serveral of the artists associated with Roxy at the Capitol have been engaged to star as members of his new "gang." Among these are Mlle. Maria Gambarelli, dancer; Douglas Stanbury, baritone; Phil Ohman and Victor Arden, pianists; Adrian Da Silva, tenor; Celia Branz, contralto; Geoffrey O'Hara, composer and singer; Dorothy Miller, soprano; Gladys Rice, coloratura soprano; Beatrice Belkin, soprano; Anne Robison, soprano; Joseph Stopak, violinist; Daddy Jim Coombs, basso; Frank Moulan, comedian; and Florence Mulholland, contralto.

Scotia Films Co. to Produce All Scotch Pictures

The Scotia Films Company, organized to produce Scotch pictures, will make all Scotch feature films with every attention to correct details. The founders of the company are all Scotch and are in a position to make their productions accurate. The Scotia representatives and connections abroad assure the success of the company's releases.

Scotia is now busy with the production of "Tam O'Shanter" from the Robert Burns poem. This will be followed by a series of other stories dealing with the Scotch and their native characteristics.

Marquee Signs May Be Nine Feet High in New York City

Through the efforts of the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce, the ordinance relating to marquee signs has been amended so that now marquee signs may be nine feet in height in New York City. The greatest height reached by the signs under the original ordinance was six feet, but owing to ambiguous wording different interpretations had been given the regulation in different boroughs. The new amendment, which was introduced by Alderman Soloman, now awaits the formality of obtaining the signature of the Mayor.

Senator King Seeks Repeal of Admission Tax

REPEAL of the tax on admission will be sought by Senator King of Utah, effective July 1, next, when the Senate takes up for consideration the bill recently passed by the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C., exempting from tax steamship tickets purchased by World War Veterans for their trip to France next summer, the Senator announced.

Several bills have been introduced in the House for this purpose. Such legislation must originate with the lower body, but once a tax bill is in, amendments can be made by the Senate. This is the first opportunity the Senate has had this session to attempt tax relief of any sort. Failure of Senator King's effort will mean that relief must go over to the next session.

The increased exemption from the admission tax made effective March 29, 1926, resulted in a decrease of $3,873,539 in the collections from that source in 1926, as compared with 1925, figures made public this week by the Treasury Department at Washington, D.C., show.

Total collections from the admission tax were $20,900,775 last year, against $24,774,315 in 1925. With the exception of but two States, Florida and New Hampshire, collections throughout the country in 1926 were below those of the preceding year, the outstanding decreases being $554,000 in New York, $400,000 in California, $351,000 in Massachusetts, $273,000 in Ohio, $219,000 in Pennsylvania and Michigan. $215,000 in Maryland, $200,000 in Illinois, $185,000 in Indiana, $174,000 in Texas, $133,000 in Utah and $110,000 in Missouri. Collections in Florida increased $134.000, to $374,579, and in New Hampshire, $15,000, to $34,200.

Scripts Must Be Made Unreadable

Part Two of a Series of Articles Proposing an Altogether New Approach to Screen Continuity

(Part Two)

(Editor's Note: As this series enters a field in which there is much to be discovered, The News will welcome comment or criticism from readers. They are published in a spirit of exploration rather than argument; they are an attempt to find out what a continuity should be rather than a brief for any particular form. They are not necessarily to be taken as representing the views of the Editor.)

By L. C. Moen

THE drawback to a discussion of this sort is that it should be done on celluloid and not on paper. The man who would write a book on motion pictures should make it into a film. In writing about music, on the other hand, you can insert bits of the actual score and the musically trained person will be able to "hear" it very well. No one has yet made anyone "see" a motion picture by writing about it. Why is this?

It is because Music has evolved a system of notation and writing that presents all its elements. Music is sound wedded to rhythm, and musical notation indicates melody, harmony, counterpoint, volume, tempo, accent, phrasing and what not. A motion picture is light wedded to rhythm—and the present scenario is like a piece of music which set forth the melody but gave no idea of harmony, tempo, counterpoint, accent or any other point—and melody alone is not music. With such a score before him, a musician would have to experiment around to find the right tempo, the most effective rhythms, the proper harmonies—and that is just what happens in making a motion picture from the present continuity. The producing unit is furnished with a "lead sheet" on which one little thin line of notes indicates the melody—even the expression marks and the time values are left off—and with this it must make music!

Yet — and note this well — despite the fact that Music has evolved a system which makes it possible to set down a composition on paper and know how it will sound when played, no art leaves freer rein for individual interpretation. Those who sneer at "mechanized production" might as well sneer at "mechanized music" because it is a thing of dots on five-line staves.

Light and Sound

Now no orchestra would attempt to play the "Fifth Symphony" from a written description of it, no matter how brilliant. Although motion pictures are not abstract in the sense that music is, you can no more put light-rhythms into words than you can sound-rhythms. You must compose a thing in terms of its own elements. Understand, I am not for abolishing the continuity; I am for making it workable, and a continuity solely of words can never be.

A play is essentially a different thing; its appeal is one of words. When people recall Warfield in "The Music Master," they think of the speech: "If you don't vant her—I vant her," and not of the grouping and action on the stage when that famous line was spoken. Most good plays are good reading for their own sake; when a scenario is too interesting as reading matter—watch out! The treatment may be as entertaining and gripping as you like, but the working script should be deliberately unreadable. Before a story is filmed it should be stripped of nouns, verbs and adjectives and reduced to pictorial motions. Then you will know what you have. The most fascinating script I ever read made a production so terrible that it is still a pet joke in the industry—except to those who made it.

The basic weakness in the industry, in this respect, is the belief that a motion picture is primarily a thing of situations told through acting. That is the secondary phase. Primarily it is a thing of rhythm and light—because those situations and that acting, when photographed, become little patches of black and white and gray which acquire the illusion of motion on the screen through the magic of the projector. If the acting and situations cannot be effectively put into those little patches of silver deposit, and synthesized into motion on the silver screen—what good are they?

Is Situation Important?

The emphasis naturally falls on situation and emotion, because those are the final result—but they go from the author's mind to the spectator's heart through the medium of light-rhythms, and nothing else. When you shoot a thousand feet of film, you have made 16,000 little pictorial compositions, whether you like to admit it or not; and when you project them on a screen you are creating definite rhythm and tempo, and nothing you can do will alter that fact. If you ignore it, your successes are due to lucky accident and little more. Rhythm and tempo and composition arouse emotion, too—rhythm is the most primitive and most potent of all means—and if it is not the emotion you want, heaven help your situations and your story!

Suppose, before going further, we define a few of these terms in an effort to get down to specific practice. First of all, what is a motion picture? Leaving educational and abstract films out of it, we might define it thus:

MOTION PICTURE: An emotion expressed through light-rhythms.

Just what, then, is this thing called "Rhythm"? No one has ever defined it adequately (the weakness of words, again!) although it is the vital principle governing the movement of the solar system, the functions of the human body, and life itself. Webster says:

"RHYTHM. (1) In the widest sense, a dividing into short periods by a regular succession of motions, impulses, sounds, accents, etc., producing an agreeable effect, as in music, poetry, the dance, or the like. (2) Movement in musical time, with periodical recurrence of accent; the measured beat or pulse which marks the character and expression of the music; symmetry of movement and accent."

Taking the last five words as the significant portion of the definition, suppose we track down this word "symmetry."

"SYMMETRY. (1) A due proportion of the several parts of a body to each other; adaptation of the forms or dimensions of the several parts of a thing to each other; the union and conformity of the members of a work to the whole."

Not hard to see the relation between those terms and a successful motion picture, is it? Turn for a moment to Emile Jacques-Dalcroze, the foremost student of rhythm today:

Dramatic Rhythm

"Rhythm as a dramatic force acts directly on the most fundamental emotions of mankind. . . . Continuous rhythmic motion is as different from mere gesture as poetry is from prose. . . . The thread of a rhythmic continuity may unite any group of actors for the realization of a dramatic piece."

We must make a careful distinction at this point between rhythm and tempo, since the two are frequently confused in writing about motion pictures. Rhythm we have defined. Webster says of tempo:

"TEMPO. The rate or degree of movement in time."

Tempo, in other words, is the measurement of regular intervals of time; rhythm, a more inclusive term, may deal with a succession of various tempi, and is the effect created by intervals which may be irregular.

Later on we shall deal with rhythms of motion, rhythms of light and rhythms of scene-length—but motion pictures are a space-art as well as a time-art, so we may well consider a few more definitions before passing on. We must deal not only with rhythm and tempo but with movements in space, which clearly brings us to the field of mechanics (using that word in its broadest sense). Specifically, it is in the field of dynamics, and of that Webster says:

"DYNAMICS. (1) That branch of mechanics which treats of the motion of bodies (kinematics) and the action of forces in producing or changing their motion (kinetics)."

This brings us two other terms which we shall be using hereafter, kinetics and kinematics, so let us define them and have it over with:

"KINETIC. Moving or causing motion; motory; active, as opposed to latent."

"KINEMATICS. The science which treats of motions considered in themselves, or apart from their causes; the comparison and relation of motions."

With these terms in hand, we may now proceed to a practical discussion of their application to commercial picture production, and next week we will show the two ways—and the only two—in which this may be done. The one we may call Improvisation, the other, Composition. The first is the present road to outstanding success; the other is perhaps the method of the future.

Fox Gets Foothold in Phila. Through Leasing House, Building Another

FOX Theatres have secured a foothold in Philadelphia through the acquisition of the lease of the Equitable Theatre, now nearing completion at Broad and Locust streets, simultaneously with the completion of plans for a 5,000-seat first-run house on which construction will be started within 90 days, with the opening scheduled for Fall.

The Equitable, a 1,700-seat house, will be known as the Fox Locust and the theatre in process of erection has been named the Fox. Several distributors have been reported at various times as planning to invade this stronghold of the Stanley interests, but so far Fox is the only company to carry through contemplated activity.

Decrease in U. S. Film Exports for 1926

Considerable Decline During 1926 as Compared With 1925; Latin America Biggest Buyer

EXPORTS of motion picture films from the United States declined considerably during 1926 as compared with 1925 shipments according to the Motion Picture Section, Department of Commerce. Exports of positive film during the year totaled 214,026,620 linear feet, valued at $6,395,923 as compared with 225,656,151 linear feet valued at $6,787,687 in the preceding year. Foreign shipments of negative film amounted to 6,600,000 linear feet, valued at $1,334,960 against 9,929,643 linear feet, valued at $1,893,058 in 1925.

One of the outstanding developments of this country's foreign trade in motion picture film during the past year was the rise of Latin America to the position of leading foreign market for American films, from a standpoint of quantity. During 1926 a total of 73,592,660 linear feet of film valued at $2,242,680 was shipped to the countries of Latin America as compared with 63,441,406 linear feet, valued at $1,933,561 in 1925. This increase of more than 10,000,000 linear feet in the volume of motion picture films exported to Latin America placed that area in advance of Europe, whose receipts of American films declined to 63,128,710 linear feet, valued at $3,010,521 in 1926 from a total of 86,671,126 linear feet, valued at $4,071,877 in 1925. It is apparent from these figures, however, that Europe still remains the outstanding market for American motion pictures in point of value.

Little change occurred in the Far Eastern market in 1926, exports to that area totaling 62,920,764 linear feet. valued at $1,746,076 during the year, as compared with 62,436,168 linear feet, valued at $1,760,642 in the preceding year. Shipments to Canada decreased during the year to 20,985,072 linear feet, valued at $731,604 from the total of 23,037,094 linear feet, valued at $914,665 in 1925. Exports to Africa amounted to 3,390,344 linear feet valued at $120,903 as compared with 3,397,730 linear feet, valud at $131,568 in the year before.

With regard to individual markets, Australia led in inports from this country with 26,188,320 linear feet in 1926 as compared with 24,488,797 linear feet in 1925; Canada was second, though her imports decreased by nearly 3,000,000 feet; Argentina was the third foreign market with imports of 20,922,708; Brazil next with 13,947,118, then France with 9,414,489, Mexico, 9,274,404, the Straits Settlements, 9,197,205, Germany, 7,134,739; Japan, 6,327,091, the next five countries being British West Indies, New Zealand, Cuba, Chile and Sweden.

Exports from this country of sensitized not exposed film likewise decreased in 1926 to 41,437,050 linar feet with a declared value of $1,033,207 from the total of 74,605,179 linear feet valued at $1,588,529 in the year 1925.

Ballantyne Appointed Pathe W. D. Sales Mgr.

R. S. Ballantyne

HARRY SCOTT, general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces the appointment of R. S. Ballantyne to the position of sales manager Western division and also the assignments of Roy O. Pearson to the managership of the Kansas City branch office and of Walter Branson to that of the Omaha exchange.

Mr. Ballantyne, who has been assistant Southern division sales manager, takes up his new duties in the West on Monday, February 14. His territory composes Butte, Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake City, San Francisco and Seattle.

Ann Howe Wins Salary Suit Against Albion Productions

Ann Howe, "the protege of radio," won her suit for salary against Albion Productions, Inc., when the jury of six, in City Court before Judge Edgar J. Lauer, took but one minute to decide in her favor. Miss Howe was awarded $535, the amount she sought in her suit for alleged non-payment of balance on salary.

Miss Howe claimed that this amount was the balance due on a total of $1,500 for making a comedy in which she was co-starred with Wally Van. The defense claimed that Albion Productions had no responsibility in the matter. Norman S. Samuels, counsel for Albion, declared that Lariat Productions produced the picture under a sub-contract and were responsible for the amount Miss Howe sought.

Miss Howe's representative, Sol Rosenblatt, intimated that the suit is a preliminary move toward further litigation by Miss Howe involving $19,500, the balance for a series of comedies which were to have been completed from July 15, 1926, to January 1, 1927. The actress had been under contract to Albion during that period and has thus been prevented from working for any other film company. Another action for breach of contract has also been started, the two suits involving over $34,000. Tom Barrett of the "Morning Telegraph," who edited and titled the first Ann Howe picture and her manager, Don Meaney, appeared as witnesses for Miss Howe.

Films Will Show Immigrants United States Agriculture

Arrangements have been made between the Office of Motion Pictures, of the United States Department of Agriculture and Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, whereby the Government films of an educational character will be used to cultivate and promote Americanization of immigrants. The films will be shown to the immigrants arriving at American ports as a part of the Americanization service recently inaugurated by the Hays organization.

Many leading feature productions are included in the film program, which consists mostly of historical, geographical and natural classifications. The four United States Department of Agriculture educationals selected are expected to assist in enlightening the new Americans about the agricultural resources of the nation and American farming methods.

Flames Ravage "U's" Capitol at Plant City, Fla.

Universal's Capitol Theatre at Plant City, Fla., was completely gutted by fire which broke out in the theatre Monday night, January 31. News of the loss reached Dan Michalove early Tuesday morning on his return from Jacksonville, where he had gone following the tragic death, on Friday night, of his Jacksonville branch manager, John R. Barton.

Mr. Michalove left immediately for Plant City to complete plans for the rebuilding of the Capitol, which seated 600. The theatre was covered by insurance and will be rebuilt as soon as details are perfected.

Many Firms Obtain New York Incorporation Charters

Motion picture companies incorporating in New York State at Albany during the past week included the Warner Bros. Newton, William A. Sands, New York City; Fedak Productions, Inc., $35,000, Sari Fedak, John S. Vajda, Joseph Teichner, New York City; Noeabe Amusement Corporation, Beacon, $10,000, Leon Samuels, Murry Karp, Florence Simeone, New York City.

"Now We're in the Air" next Wallace Beery Comedy

Wallace Beery will go up in the air sooner than he expected due to a rearrangement of the Paramount production schedule. "Fireman, Save My Child," which had been set as Beery's next effort, will not be produced until the comedy of the air service is completed.

This will round out the comedian's cycle of comedies. He was seen as a doughboy in "Behind the Front," and followed that with the potrayal of a gob in "We're in the Navy Now." At present Beery is making "The Big Sneeze," adapted from "Looie the Fourteenth," which depicts the tribulations of an American doughboy left behind when his buddies returned across the Atlantic after the Armistice was signed.

Iowa Exhibitor Closes Because of Sunday Law

L. D. HENDRIX, manager of the Strand Theatre at Mount Vernon, Iowa, where there is a Sunday closing ordinance, has closed his theatre and informs the city council that he will not open the house until the council makes it possible for him to operate on Sunday.

Laemmle Award of $5,000 for Writers' Ideas

Prizes from $2,000 Down to $100; Open to Newspaper and Magazine Scribes

Carl Laemmle

WITH the idea of developing practical, helpful and constructive ideas for the advancement of the quality of motion pictures, Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures, announced this week the establishment of the Laemmle Award, consisting of annual prizes in the aggregate to $5,000 for published ideas which might prove of benefit in the production of films.

The Award is open to writers on newspapers, magazines and trade journals throughout the world and the prizes are offered for suggestions having to do with any phase of the business. The only requirement is that they be published in a recognized publication and that they be sent, together with a letter, to Carl Laemmle, Laemmle Award, 730 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Before announcing the Award, Mr. Laemmle confered with Will Hays and found the M. P. P. D. A. president entirely in sympathy with his plans. Mr. Hays further consented, at the request of Mr. Laemmle, to serve as chairman of the board of decision and to appoint a committee of disinterested newspaper and magazine men to comprise that board. The board, as selected by Mr. Hays, includes Karl A. Bickel, president of the United Press, Kent Cooper, general manager of the Associated Press, Arthur H. Kirchhofer, president, National Press Club, Washington, D.C., James R. Quirk, editor of "Photoplay Magazine," and Jean Sapene, publisher of "Le Matin," the Paris newspaper.

"This Board will draw up its own rules for the estimate of the suggestions sent in," said Mr. Laemmle, "all of which must first have appeared in a newspaper, magazine or trade organ of national distribution. Quite naturally, they will be judged first from their practicability, but I sincerely hope that no one having a brilliant suggestion will fail to send it because he or she doesn't know in what way it could be used. The art of moving pictures has made such strides in the past few years and such brilliant achievements lie just beyond its present accomplishment that it is impossible to say what apparently fantastic idea may be a thoroughly accepted practice in the future."

Chicago's Movie Ball Set for May 4th

Plans for what promises to be the greatest Movie Ball ever held in Chicago are rapidly being completed by the Exhibitors Association of Chicago through the following committees: Hall, Joe Koppel, Wm. J. Sweeney; publicity, Fred Gilford, W. K. Hollander, Max Balaban, Harry Asher, and Art Schoenstadt; entertainment and music, Joe Pastor, John Balaban, Mort Singer, Louis Marks, J. J. Cooney, Louis P. Newhafer, A. J. Jones, and Max Slott; tickets and finance, Ludwig Siegel, Nate Ascher, Barney Balaban, James Coston, V. R. Langdon, Frank Schaefer, Julius Goodman, and Leo Salkin; advertising and program, Charles Kamp, A. Saperstein, Emil Stern, Bob Gumbiner, Sam Halper. The Movie Ball will mark the opening of the New Stevens Hotel, and May 4th has been set as the date. Steps have already been taken which assure the presence of a number of prominent stars. Complete details will be made public by those in charge within a few days.

"U" Nets $1,968,089

A NEW high record for earnings was established by Universal Pictures during the fiscal year which ended November 6, 1926, when net earnings of $1,968,089 were reported. The earnings compare with $1,925,506 during the preceding year, and, after preferred dividend requirements, were at the rate of $6.41 per share on 250,000 shares of no par value common stock outstanding, compared with $6.18 per share during 1925. Gross income of $27,676,926 showed an increase of $2,853,400 over preceding year.

Universal still follows the policy of charging off the total cost of films at the time of release, contrary to the general practice of other film companies, which amortize the cost over a period of one to two years. Business for the first quarter of the new year, ending Feb. 5, 1927, has been greatly in excess of the same period last year. Gross and net for the past two years compare as follows:

Gross income.....	$27,676,926	$24,823,526
Net after taxes....	1,968,089	1,925,508
Prfd. Div............	364,288	380,000
Net for common....	1,603,801	1,545,506
Per share..............	$6.41	$6.18

Publix-Saenger Expands

Acquisition of North Carolina Theatres Seen as Indication of Activity in Southern Field

IT IS expected that the Publix-Saenger Company, formed recently in Charlotte, N.C., will extend its interests throughout the Southern field in the near future. The company has proceeded slowly but now is prepared to put into operation the theatre aquisition program it has adopted.

A deal recently closed gives the company control of the following North Carolina theatres: National, Imperial, Alamo and Carolina, Greensboro, State and Superba, Raleigh; Paris Savoy, Orpheum and Midway, Durham; Broadway, Savoy and Carolina, Fayetteville, and Carolina, Chapel Hill.

The company now is considering a site for a theatre at Winston-Salem and is said to be considering houses in other cities of this and adjoining states.

Plans for the $1,000,000 Publix-Saenger house in Knoxville, Tenn., which have been deferred for some time, are to be resumed, it is understood. The company now has the Lyric here. For some time the Gay Street site of the proposed theatre has been boarded off.

In And Out of Town

KARL KRAMER, Eastern sales director for Universal, returned to the home office recently after an extended sales trip during which he took in most of the exchanges in his division. In his rapid swing along the Eastern seaboard, he visited Albany, Toronto, Buffalo, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington.

AFTER a stay of only two weeks in New York City, Dale Hanshaw, president of Sierra Pictures, has returned to Hollywood.

E. E. SHAUER, general manager of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, sails on the Aquitania Friday night of this week for one of his customary trips to Europe. Accompanying him will be R. M. Blumenthal, a member of the staff of the foreign department.

JOSEPH A. McCONVILLE and Abe Montague, of Independent Films, Boston, Columbia franchise holders in that locality, are visiting the Columbia home office this week, where they are discussing the booking of the new season's product.

EDMUND GOULDING, director of "Paris," "Sally, Irene and Mary" and "Women Love Diamonds" for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, arrived in New York Thursday, Feb. 3rd, and is expected to remain for several weeks. He will glance over the theatrical and literary field with an eye to possible material for his next picture.

Theatre Bandits Active at Toronto and Montreal

A series of theatre robberies has taken place in Eastern Canada and in only one case has any arrest been made by the police concerned. The first occurred when James Adams, manager of Loew's Theatre, Montreal, was held up in his office, the bandits carrying off $7,000. Subsequent robberies occurred at the Pantages Theatre, Toronto, where $1,200 was takn; the Tivoli Theatre, Hamilton, Ontario, where the thieves got $700, and the Laurier Theatre, Hull, Quebec, where $100 was snatched from the box office.

The latest robbery occurred at the Tivoli Theatre, Toronto, when the so-called "cat bandit," held up the cashier. The latter threw the cash box on the floor, scattering the money, and then ran screaming for help. In the meantime the bandit scraped up approximately $90 and escaped, despite a cordon of 30 policemen surrounding a building where he had taken refuge.

At Montreal, B. M. Garfield, manager of the Rialto Theatre, and his wife, were held up in the manager's office when Mr. Garfield was forced to open the safe and hand over $469 to three armed robbers. Two arrests were made in this instance but guilt has not yet been established.

Locations for "Branding Iron" in Canadian Rockies

Desirable scenic spots in the vicinity of the famous Lake Louise in the Rocky Mountain region of Banff, Canada, will form the background of "The Branding Iron," which Reginald Barker is to direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Location scouts, led by Harry Schenck, have been searching for suitable locations for several weeks. Barker plans to leave for Canada directly upon the completion of interior scenes which he is shooting at the M-G-M studio. "The Branding Iron" features Lionel Barrymore, Aileen Pringle and T. Roy Barnes.

"One Chance in Million," Wm. Fairbanks' Next Lumas

William Fairbanks reports from the West Coast that his next production for Lumas release will be entitled "One Chance in a Million." The story is a mystery crook melodrama and production is now under way under the supervision of Sam Bischoff. Supporting Fairbanks are Charles K. French, Henry Herbert, Eddie Broden and Veora Daniels. L. V. Jefferson wrote the story and he is also doing the continuity. Mason Noel Smith is directing the production.

Leaves to Select Locations for "Knockout Reilly"

Charles Kirk, a member of Paramount's Long Island studio art department, left this week for Northern Maine, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, to select locations for Richard Dix's new picture, "The Roughneck Gentleman." Mary Brian, who is Dix's leading lady in "Knockout Reilly," will also appear as the heroine in the new feature. Production is expected to begin on March 3 under the direction of Elmer Clifton, who produced "Down to the Sea in Ships."

Jack Jevne Added to Writing Staff of United Artists

The United Artists staff of writers was recently augmented when Jack Jevne signed a long term contract with that company. The United Artists studio writing staff will move shortly into a new model office at the reconstructed film plant on Santa Monica Boulevard. Additional writers are expected to be signed, in view of the fact that United Artists will build a sixty-acre auxiliary studio in Culver City to care for the organization's 1927 program calling for doubling of production over last year.

Larry Kent Cast for Role in Paramount's "Soundings"

Larry Kent, one of the promising young screen players, is to portray an important role in Paramount's screen version of "Soundings," the best seller by A. Hamilton Gibbs. Kent will play the brother of Vera Veronina, the Russian actress recently acquired by Paramount, who will make her screen debut in this production.

M-G-M Schedules Productions

Louis B. Mayer Tells of Pictures in Work and Those Contemplated for Early Filming

ON his arrival in New York this week, Louis B. Mayer, vice-president and production head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, announced that his company is in the midst of its most ambitious production program with ten companies at present working at the Culver City studios and as many more preparing to start work on pictures for the new season.

The M-G-M studios will reach the peak of production activity for this year within the next few weeks, according to Mr. Mayer, when "The Trail of '98" and several other special productions will get under way.

Films in Production

Among the pictures being filmed at the present time are: "Old Heidelberg," with Ramon Novarro and Norma Shearer co-starred, under the direction of Ernst Lubitsch; "Mr. Wu," starring Lon Chaney and directed by William Nigh, who made "The Fire Brigade," "The Branding Iron," with a cast including Lionel Barrymore, Aileen Pringle and T. Roy Barnes; King Vidor's new production, as yet unnamed; "Red, White and Blue," directed by Sam Wood; "Tillie the Toiler," a new Marion Davies production, directed by Herbert Henley; "The Grey Hat," another of F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson's delightful screen comedies, under the direction of Harry Millarde and featuring Lew Cody and Renee Adoree; "Frisco Sally Levy," directed by William Beaudine.

Another picture in production is a new unnamed historical Western, starring Tim McCoy and directed by W. S. Van Dyke, who made "War Paint" and "Winners of the Wilderness." The story is from the pen of Peter B. Kyne.

Mr. Mayer indicated the immediate filming of the following productions:

"The Trail of '98," to be directed by Clarence Brown; "The Enemy," Channing Pollock's stage play, which will star Lillian Gish and will be made by Victor Seastrom; "Twelve Miles Out," which will star John Gilbert, under the direction of Jack Conway; "Anna Karinina," Count Leo Tolstoi's immortal Russian love story, which Dimitri Buchowetzke will direct; "The Unknown," an original story, to be directed by Tod Browning, starring Lon Chaney; "The Callahans and the Murphys," Kathleen Norris' famous novel, to be directed by George Hill; "Jenny Lind," an original story by Dorothy Farnum, based on the life of the great Swedish singer; "Smarty," an original comedy drama by F. Hugh Herbert and Florence Ryerson, to be directed by Robert Z. Leonard; an unnamed and original story now being prepared for the studio by Jack Black, former convict and inmate of several penal institutions; "Captain Salvation," the famous melodramatic novel of the same name, which is to be directed by John S. Robertson:

"The Bugle Call," Jackie Coogan's first starring vehicle under his new M-G-M contract, which will be directed by Edward Sedgwick; "Spring Fever," a comedy drama based on Vincent Lawrence's stage play, to be directed by Sam Taylor; "The Dog of Mystery," an original story to be directed by Chester Franklin, featuring a clever dog actor; "Becky," a lavish Cosmopolitan production based on the novel of the same name, to be directed by John A. McCarthy; "The Wind," an adaptation of Dorothy Scarborough's novel, starring Lillian Gish; an original story of the early steamboat days, and a new production by John H. Stahl.

Players Re-signed

Mr. Mayer indicated that with the expiration of players' contracts, his organization is renewing the vast majority of them.

Besides the well known film directors who already have been assigned productions, Mayer indicated the following would soon start work on new M-G-M screen offerings: Edmund Goulding, Edward Sedgwick, Benjamin Christianson, Christy Cabanno, Marcel DeSano and Viatcheslaz Tourjansky, who was brought to America from Russia.

The still at the left shows Francis McDonald and James Bradbury, Jr., who have important roles in the production; the portraits are of Shirley Mason and Malcolm McGregor, who play the leading feminine and male roles, respectively; and the scene at the right shows Barbara Tennant, Frances Raymond and Miss Mason

Vitaphone For Stanley Co.

Circuit Signs for Device for Eight Houses; Many Artists Contract for Service

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Vitaphone Corporation that the Stanley Circuit has signed for the service for eight of its houses.

The houses signed are: Strand Theatre, Brooklyn; Strand Theatre, Albany; Troy Theatre at Troy; Strand Theatre, Syracuse; Victoria Theatre, Buffalo; the Strand Theatres in Worcester and Lynn, Massachusetts; and the Liberty Theatre at East Liberty, Pittsburgh.

Installations are under way in these houses and actual playing dates for Vitaphone will be announced shortly.

It is also stated that S. L. Rothafel, managing director of the new Roxy Theatre, has signed for the installation of Vitaphone in his theatre which will open early in March.

The Vitaphone has secured the services of many operatic, concert and vaudeville stars including Giovanni Martinelli, dramatic tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who has signed a three-year contract; others are Bernardo De Pace, mandolin virtuoso, Sissle and Blake, Roger Wolfe Kahn and his orchestra, Van and Schenck, well-known vaudeville team, and the Flonzaley Quartette, known to all concert patrons.

A. G. Stolte Named as Manager of Blank House

A. H. BLANK, of the Blank theatrical enterprises, announces his appointment of Arthur G. Stolte as manager of the new 3,000-seat Riviera Theatre, located in Omaha on March 15. Mr. Stolte and his wife will move from Des Moines to Omaha within the next three weeks. He will devote his entire time to the finishing and opening of the new house, which is another link in the Publix chain and the work of the theatre architect, John Eberson. The opening of the Riviera is expected to be a theatrical event in the Middle West.

A. G. Stolte

Mr. Stolte will have under his supervision more than 100 employees in the operation of the Riviera. A publicity organization is to be formed immediately and a thirty-piece orchestra engaged. Immediately upon the arrival of Mr. Stolte at Omaha a staff of twenty-five ushers and a large stage crew will be assembled.

Mr. Stolte plans to leave this week where he will spend two weeks working with the Balaban and Katz preparatory to assuming his new post about the middle of March. Mr. Stolte came to Des Moines from Omaha ten years ago to open the Des Moines Theatre. In the past year he has managed a large group of the Blank theatres. He recently opened the new Englert Theatre in Iowa City and was working on the new Newton Theatre in the Maytag Hotel when the Omaha appointment was made.

Clayton B. Bond New Warner Chicago Division Manager

Clayton E. Bond has been appointed division manager over Warner Bros. Chicago division with supervision over the Mid-West metropolis, St. Louis and Milwaukee branches. He fills the place vacated by Edwin Silverman, who was recently appointed sales manager of Warner Bros. Mr. Bond has been identified with First National as sales executive and more recently with Balaban and Katz' Mid-Western Theatre Circuit. The new Warner executive is well known in the Middle West, where he is thoroughly acquainted with exhibitors and showmen.

Alberta Vaughn Signed for Columbia's "Romantic Age"

After searching for several weeks to find the feminine player suitable for the ultra-modern role of the flapper in "The Romantic Age," Columbia Pictures has engaged Alberta Vaughn for that feminine lead in the company's forthcoming production. "The Romantic Age" is one of "the 24" on Columbia's present season product. Eugene O'Brien plays the man and is the only other player chosen for the cast so far.

M-G-M Buys Material In "Saga of Billy the Kid"

"The Saga of Billy the Kid," Walter N. Burns' picturesque novel of the life of that famous character of the Middle West, has been acquired by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for utilization as screen material. "Billy the Kid" has many exploits to his credit and Burns' account is said to be authentic.

Announce Cast for Tiffany's "The Princess of Hoboken"

Tiffany Productions announces the complete cast for "The Princess of Hoboken," the farce comedy now being filmed. In the list are Edmund Burns, Blanche Mahaffey, Ethel Clayton, Lou Tellegan, Babe London, Charles McHugh, Aggie Herring, Charles Crockett, Harry Bailey and Sidney D'Albrook. The story tells of a Hoboken waitress who impersonates a Russian princess at the opening of a Russian cafe and the complications that arise in the wake of her deception.

Asher and Small Acquire "Wine, Women, and Song"

A deal was consummated the other day on the West Coast between Edward Small and L. J. Selznick whereby Small and E. M. Asher acquired the screen rights to the stage production of "Wine, Women and Song" from Mr. Selznick, who owned the screen rights to the stage piece. "Wine, Women and Song" will be one of the Asher and Small independent productions and will be made in the very near future. No director has been named as yet.

Tom Mix Starts "Outlaws of Red River"

Immediately upon completing "The Broncho Twister," Tom Mix, Fox Films Western star, started production on "Outlaws of Red River," which Lou Seiler will direct. The new Mix film is based on a story by the late Gerald Beaumont of the same name. Majorie Daw will be the star's leading lady. Others in the cast are Lee Shumway, Ellen Woosten, Jimmy Downs, Virginia Marshall, Arthur Claytob, William Conklin and Duke Lee.

Warners Choose Alan Crosland to Direct "Black Ivory"

Alan Crosland, now at work on the Dolores Costello starring vehicle, "A Million Bid," is the choice of the Warner Bros. to direct "Black Ivory," the extended run production on the Warner schedule to follow "Noah's Ark." A search is now in progress for the actress who will play opposite Monte Blue in this production of the novel by Polan Banks

Famous Gives New Assignment to Fay Wray, New Star

Fay Wray, who until her performance in "The Wedding March" had been practically an unknown, is coming East to interpret the leading feminine role in "The Devil Is Alive," an original story by Owen Davis which Herbert Brenon is to direct. The story is described as ultra modernistic and a defense of the modern girl.

Postpone "Good Service" for "The Girl Friend"

Following "Special Delivery," Eddie Cantor's next vehicle for Paramount will be "The Girl Friend," adapted from the musical comedy of that name which played in New York City. "Good Service" had originally been planned as Cantor's next vehicle, but it has been postponed until after the completion of "The Girl Friend."

Capitol, "U" House, Plant City, Fla., Destroyed by Fire

The Capitol Theatre, Plant City, Fla., operated by Universal in connection with their circuit in that State, was destroyed by fire of an unknown origin shortly after midnight, the morning of February 1st, with a loss of $50,000.

An employee of the theatre, attracted to the building by smoke, entered and found the stage a mass of flames. The local fire force found that they were unable to cope with the flames alone so help had to be sent for to Lakeland, 12 miles away, and to Tampa, a distance of 22 miles. Both of these cities rushed equipment to assist in subduing the conflagration and after five hours of work the fire was extinguished. The block was saved, but the theatre was a total loss.

New equipment, worth $6,000, had just been installed in the Capitol and a new pipe organ, valued at $15,000, was to have been installed next week. It is announced that the house will be rebuilt at once.

Varconi Cast for M-G-M's "Anna Karenina"

Victor Varconi, European stage and screen actor, is to portray the leading male role in "Anna Karenina," the Tolstoy classic which Dimitri Buchowetzki will direct in a few weeks for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Company. The scenario of "Anna Karenina" has been prepared by Lorna Moon. Every effort will be made to present in this production a faithful and gripping screen translation of the Russian novelist's story.

Production on "Romeo and Juliet" Looms Near

An adequate treatment of "Romeo and Juliet"—one which meets all situations—is fast taking shape in the Universal scenario department and all indications point to an early production of this Shakespeare classic, reads an announcement from Carl Laemmle, Universal president who is now at "U" City supervising production.

No definite plans are forthcoming as to how the picture experts at Universal are adapting the play and its story, but it is said that they have surmounted all obstacles and that the story will be produced with all its beauty unimpaired and without elimination which might be abhorrent to lovers of the English poet.

Laemmle believes that Mary Philbin and Norman Kerry can properly handle the roles of the impassioned lovers in the Shakespeare romance which will be the most ambitious photodrama ever attempted by his organization.

Discussion at Universal City has waxed strong of late as to who will direct this Universal super-picture. The number of megaphone maestros is very limited, it is said, and narrows itself down to less than six, of whom two are now in the Universal organization. Their names are withheld, but it is pointed out that Universal has capable men in Pollard, Sloman, Olcott, Baggot, Seiter, Reynolds, Johnson and Edward Laemmle, not forgetting the new comer, Paul Leni, and the woman director, Lois Weber.

Announce Ten Charter Members of First National's K. O. Club

First National announced this week the first ten members in its K. O. Club, the sales organization formed to honor the men who make the greatest sale of the company's product during a period of three months. The first members, elected following a review of their records, are A. P. Bibber, Boston; Harold I. Cass, Kansas City; S. D. Chapman and W. B. Collins, Detroit; F. J. Leonard, Philadelphia; W. R. Mitchell, Toronto; Lee W. Moffitt, Louisville; R. J. Morrison, Denver; Max Pincus, Buffalo, and H. P. Underwood, Pittsburgh.

Election to K. O. Club charter membership followed the review of the records of First National's sales roster, numbering more than 100 men, during a three month period ending January 1. Each of the ten charter members was credited with a super-fine record, indicating sales far in excess of established quotas.

In addition to being elected to the club these ten men have been awarded cash bonuses and a bronze K. O. button which they will wear for the next three months, at the end of which time a second induction of members will be made.

P. D. C. Directors Rushed

De Mille Cutting "King of Kings"; Both Studios Taxed for Sufficient Space

At the present time both the De Mille and Metropolitan studios are fully occupied with directors and their units turning out Producers Distributing Corporation releases; at no time in its history has either studio teemed with a like activity, say the officials.

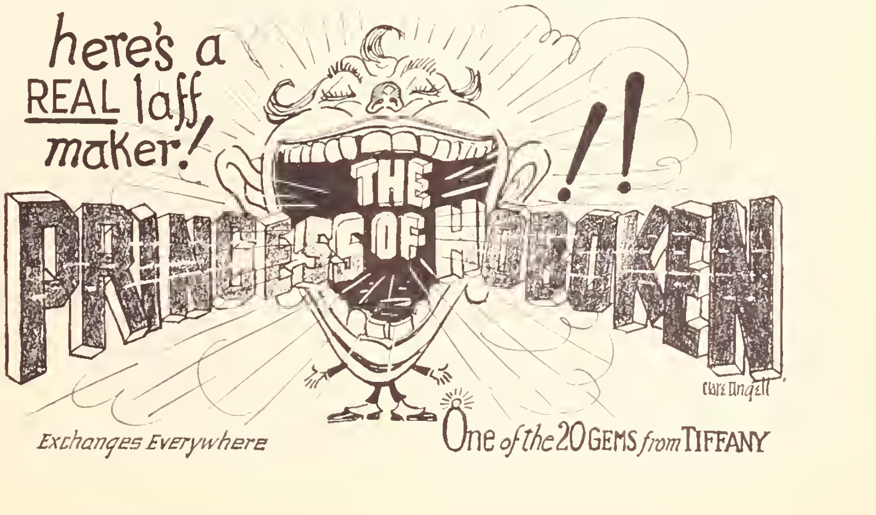
Cecil B. De Mille is well into his job of cutting and assembling "The King of Kings" and it is expected that this work will require fully six more weeks. William De Mille is in the midst of direction of "The Little Adventuress," in which Vera Reynolds has the starring role.

Paul Sloane has started work on "Turkish Delight," Irvin Cobb's first original for the screen, with Julia Faye in the featured feminine role. Donald Crisp starts soon on "Vanity," which will star Leatrice Joy. An original from the pen of Douglas Doty. Nils Olaf Chrisander, Cecil B. DeMille's importation from UFA, is directing "The Heart Thief" at Metropolitan with Joseph Schildkraut and Lya de Putti in the featured roles.

E. Mason Hopper is busy on the direction of Marie Prevost in "The Night Bride" at Metropolitan. Scott Sidney is cutting and editing "No Control," his most recent production, which has in its leading roles Harrison Ford and Phyllis Haver. William K. Howard is awaiting the decision of De Mille officials as to his next assignment and Rupert Julian is into preliminary arrangements for "Silk," which he will direct at the De Mille studio.

Reed Howes and Clara Bow in "Rough House Rose"

Reed Howes will be Clara Bow's leading man in her next Paramount starring picture, "Rough House Rosie," which is being directed by Frank Strayer, a new director who produced in nine days Columbia's "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," which played many first run houses. Howes has appeared in pictures for Rayart, Warner Bros. and Universal. He attended the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration upon his graduation from Utah University. However, he did not undertake a business career, going upon the New York stage instead, where he played opposite Peggy Wood in the Shubert production, "Artists' Life."



DeMille Shooting Entire Film on Panchromatic

TO gain the most from the futuristic and usual color schemes embodied in the sets by Anton Grot for "The Little Adventuress," and yet to retain their pleasing softness, William De Mille is filming the entire picture in panchromatic—that type of stock which has always been used for photographing exteriors, such as sunsets, cloud clusters and backgrounds of vivid and contrasting colorings. In rendering this decision De Mille feels that the move is a wise one even though it be radical inasmuch as 90 percent of the scenes are interiors.

Advices from the De Mille studio indicate that the screening of early scenes unquestionably revealed the decision to have been a happy one.

Complete Cast Chosen for "The Poor Nut"

Screen names of prominence are included in the complete cast of "The Poor Nut," the Jess Smith production being made for First National release, now in work at Tech Art's Western studio. The complete cast as announced by Smith follows: Jack Mulhall, the poor nut himself, Charles Murray, Jane Winton, Jean Arthur, Paul Kelly, Cornelius Keefe, Maurice Ryan, Henry Vibart and Bruce Gordon. Production starts next week under the direction of Richard Wallace. Jack Wagner has been engaged as gag man, Jimmie O'Shea as assistant director and Dave Kesson as photographer. Henry Hobart will be editorial supervisor. Paul Scofield has done the continuity.

"The Poor Nut" is a college story, revolving around a young man, to all appearance a nut who, under the influence of a beautiful co-ed, becomes the hero of the college because of his prowess as an athlete. One of California's well known universities will supply the background.

Greta Nissen Co-stars in "We're All Gamblers"

Greta Nissen, the blond Norsewoman who scored decisively opposite Adolphe Menjou in "Blond or Brunette," has been chosen as Thomas Meighan's leading lady for the second successive picture. She will appear as the heroine in the star's next one, "We're All Gamblers," an original by Owen Davis. She also appeared with Meighan and Evelyn Brent in "Blind Alleys," in which she dons a dark wig and plays the part of a Cuban girl. Meighan and Davis are now vacationing in Florida.

Emil Jannings Begins Work on His First American Film

"The Man Who Forgot God," Emil Jannings' first American-made starring picture, has just gone into production at the West Coast studio of Paramount under Victor Fleming's direction. Belle Bennett will appear opposite the Continental star. Lil Dagover, former Ufa player, has the "other woman" role. Lajos Biro and Jules Furthman made the adaptation of the original story and Furthman prepared the screen play.

Robert Kane Assembling Unit for "Broadway Nights"

Director Joe Boyle put "Broadway Nights," Robert Kane's production for First National, into work this week with a well balanced cast headed by Lois Wilson and Sam Hardy. Portraying an important role in the picture is Barbara Stanwick, a dancer discovered in Greenwich Village by Willard Mack, who featured her in his Broadway drama, "The Noose," and whom Robert Kane has signed to a long term contract to appear in several of his future productions for First National. Louis John Bartels, creator of the title role of George Kelly's "The Show Off," has also been signed for the Kane production. Phillip Stange will be seen in a supporting role.

Texas Guinan, the hand-clapping hostess of one of New York's night clubs, and several of her "gang" are to appear in different sequences. Kane has retained Bunny Weldon, night-club producer, to stage the theatre and night club scenes in the picture. Kane is now negotiating with the producer of a current revue to use his theatre and show as background for several of these scenes.

Forrest Halsey adapted this original story by Norman Houston. Charles Maguire and Earl Roebuck, who wrote the continuity, will act as assistant directors. Ernest Haller will be at the cameras and Leland Haywood will fill the post of production manager. Robert Haas is doing the designing. Mr. Halsey will remain with the unit throughout production as supervising editor.

"Bachelor's Baby" Is Columbia's Second Feb. Release

Columbia Pictures announces as the second release for February, "The Bachelor's Baby," a comedy which will supplement "The Wreck," the crook melodrama which is the present month's first release. The production is an adaptation of "The Girl Who Smiles," based on the magazine story "Too Many Keys" by Garrett Fort. The featured roles are played by Helene Chadwick and Harry Myers. In the supporting cast are Midget Gustav, one of the attractions of the Al G. Barnes circus, Edith Yorke, Pat Harmon and James Marcus. Frank Strayer, Columbia's comedy director, directed.

"Wedding March" Takes Over 18 Months

MORE than one year and a half will have been spent on the preparation and production of Paramount's roadshow, "The Wedding March," which Eric von Stroheim is producing, before it is ready for release. He began his labors on the script in 1925. The final shots are still to be taken and it is estimated that it will be some four months before it is ready for presentation. Stroheim is also the star of the picture as well as the director.

Molly O'Day Is Cast Opposite Richard Barthelmess

A role described as the type which will make its portrayer and one which demands a high dramatic talent of its creator is the assignment given Molly O'Day, a newcomer in the ranks of First National's stock company of players. Miss O'Day is to play the leading feminine role in support of Richard Barthelmess in "The Patent Leather Kid." In the opinions of Al Rockett, who will produce the picture, and Alfred Santell, its director, the seventeen-year-old feminine player stands out preeminent among the scores of aspirants for the part and that she is now doubtlessly headed for stardom within the next couple of years, even though her experience to date includes only twelve months in two-reel comedies.

Rupert Hughes wrote "The Patent Leather Kid" and Adela Rogers St. Johns the adaptation. It was scenarized by Winifred Dunn.

Max Asher Engaged to Act in Stern Bros. Comedies

Max Asher, comedian in "We're in the Navy Now," "Who Goes There?" "Rough House Rosie" and more recently in "Alias the Deacon," has been signed by the Stern Bros. to play in the "What Happened to Jane" series of two-reel comedies which will star Thelma Daniels and Charles King under the direction of Scott Pembroke.

Pembroke is another acquisition on the Stern staff. He has recently been writing and directing for F.B.O. He was a member of the Stern Bros. directorial corps last year.

Decide on "Woman on Trial" as Title of Negri's Next

The title of Pola Negri's new Paramount starring vehicle will be "The Woman on Trial." The story is based on a stage play by Ernest Vajda. It has a modern setting in a metropolitan atmosphere. Ricardo Cortez is Miss Negri's leading man. Mauritz Stiller is directing.

"The Thirteenth Chair" Title of M-G-M Mystery Drama

"The Thirteenth Chair" is the final title for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new mystery drama which Chester Franklin is to direct as his intial M-G-M vehicle. It is an original by Franklin and Douglas Furber and production is likely to start within the coming week. Lionel Barrymore will have the leading character role.

Laemmle Appoints Friedman to European Post

Joseph Friedman

JOSEPH FRIEDMAN, veteran Universal sales executive, has been appointed by Carl Laemmle as European supervisor for Universal Pictures in which capacity he will manage Universal distribution in all European countries except Great Britain.

Friedman, who is now general manager of Universal's New York exchange, sails for Europe aboard the S.S. Olympic. N. L. Manheim, Universal export manager, is now in Berlin awaiting Friedman's arrival to induct him into office. Manheim is also officiating at the opening of the Matador Film Exchanges, the new Universal exchange system in Germany. Mr. Friedman's successor at the New York exchange has not been announced.

Carnivals Must Pay $500 License Fee at Lake Wales

Motion picture theatre enterprises of Lake Wales, Fla., are not likely to suffer from competition of traveling tent shows and carnivals. A recent city ordinance has fixed the sum of $500 as the license which such shows must pay for the privilege of showing one day in Lake Wales.

News of the passage of this measure in Lake Wales was brought to Atlanta this week by N. W. Remond, former Atlanta theatre manager, who now owns and operates the Scenic Theatre at Lake Wales.

Film Arts Guild Terminates Cameo Arrangement

The booking arrangement whereby the Film Arts Guild has been playing specially selected pictures at the Cameo Theatre in New York City has been terminated. The Guild states that the rupture came because of the Guild's inability to control completely the bookings at the small playhouse. Symon Gould is president of the Film Arts Guild. B. S. Moss controls the Cameo.

The Guild intimates that it will continue its activities elsewhere and says that an announcement of future plans will be made soon.

Bergsvik, Ingram's Electrician, Invents New Spot-Light

A new type of spot-light for use in motion picture studios has been invented and built by Chris M. Bergsvik, chief electrician for Rex Ingram's Productions. The new light is an improvement over the old, inasmuch as it gives instantaneous lighting and a much greater facility in "spotting."

Ingram's general production manager, Harry Lachman, was so pleased with Bergsvik's invention that he ordered ten duplicates to be used in "The Garden of Allah," Ingram's new production, which is now being filmed in Northern Africa.

Stanley Active in Phila.

Circuit Plans Erection of $5,000,000 House and Acquires Seven Others in Quaker City

THE Stanley Company of America this week announced plans for the building of a $5,000,000 house on Market Street, Philadelphia, and, in addition, states that it has acquired the entire Stiefel theatre interests in that city, comprising six neighborhood houses and one in course of construction at Twenty-first Street and Ridge Avenue.

The $5,000,000 theatre will be erected at the northwest corner of Twentieth and Market streets and will have a seating capacity of 5,000, with a main floor loge and balcony. It will be equipped with all the latest modern appliances, including an elevator orchestra pit, high speed signal control elevators to take patrons to the top level of the balcony, an organ with three consoles, all manner of lighting systems, both direct and indirect, and an up-to-the-minute heating and ventilating system. It is expected that the ground for the new structure will be broken within a few days.

The properties that have been transferred to the Stanley Company are the Poplar Theatre, Sixth Street and Poplar; the Fairmount, Franklin and Fairmount avenues; the Elite, Twenty-seventh Street and Girard Avenue; the Twenty-fourth Street, Twenty-fourth and Brown streets; the Columbia, Twenty-seventh Street and Columbia Avenue, and the York Street, Twenty-sixth and York streets. Transfer was made by Samuel H. Stiefel and Nathan A. Stiefel, sons of Abraham Stiefel, a retired motion picture exhibitor. The new house at Twenty-first and Ridge Avenue will be particularly pretentious and will add considerably to the attractiveness of the locality.

M.P.T.O.A. Meets May 17

National Convention of Exhibitor Body to be Held in Columbus, Ohio; Three Day Session

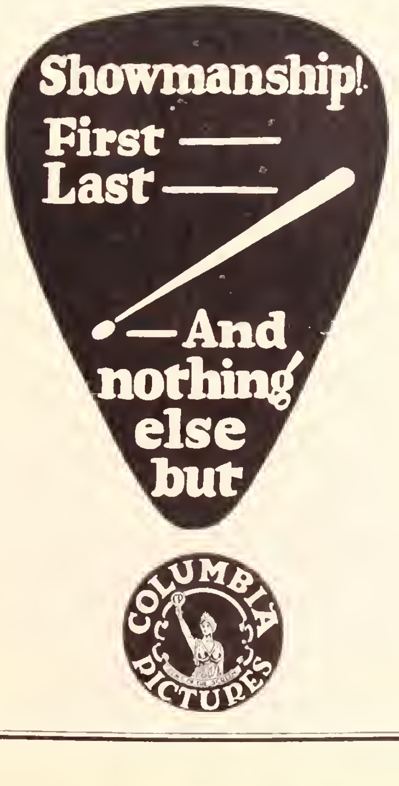
THE eighth annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be held in Columbus, Ohio, May 17th to 19th, was the decision of the administrative committee this week, when it accepted the invitation of P. J. Wood, business manager of the Ohio unit, for the holding of the meetings in Columbus.

J. J. Harwood of Cleveland was named chairman of the committee on arrangements for the forthcoming sessions. He is to name a sub-committee to work on plans. The decision means that the holding of a mass meeting of independent theatres prior to the national meeting has been abandoned and, instead, the proposed meeting will be combined with the Columbus convention. The mass meeting previously was postponed on account of the illness of Harry Davis, chairman of the administrative committee.

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce has been co-operating with William James, head of the State unit, to bring the national convention to the Ohio city, and has assured a record reception to delegates.

At yesterday's meeting a resolution was passed calling on the public to withhold judgment of Charles Chaplin until he has opportunity to state his case in court when, the committee is advised, he would completely vindicate himself. Chaplin's films were lauded for their wholesomeness.

Harwood, Nathan Yammins, M. E. Comerford, M. J. O'Toole, Joseph M. Seider and R. F. Woodhull attended the meeting.



Year's Earnings for "U" Are $1,900,000

Universal's earnings for the year ending November 7, 1926, are estimated at $1,900,000 after all charges and before preferred dividends, according to "The New York Times." Earnings are equal to more than $6 per share on the 250,000 shares of common. Sales for 1926 were materially greater than for 1925 and the first quarter earnings for 1927 will exceed those of 1926. During the year, Universal released 218 subjects, and this exclusive of news reels.

Hight, Former Chicago "News" Man, Dead

Will M. Hight, veteran Chicago theatrical man and publicist, and who at one time was Chicago representative of Motion Picture News, died suddenly from heart disease in Los Angeles, Cal., last week. His wife, Mary Hight, was with him at the time of his death and brought the remains back to Chicago for interment, the funeral being held on Tuesday, February 8th.

Warners to Complete Schedule Early in May

PRIOR to his leaving the Coast for New York where he is now mapping out the Warner Bros. schedule for next year, Jack L. Warner issued the order for high speed on all productions in the course of filming and began preparation on several other stories so that this year's program can be finished early in May.

The production chief personally supervised the preparation of a script for a new Patsy Ruth Miller feature. The title of this film will be announced later as a "surprise feature" for exhibitors. Miss Miller is vacationing at Arrowhead and has just finished "What Every Girl Should Know" under the direction of Charles Reisner. Meanwhile five production units are now in work and it is hoped that five more films will be completed inside of the next month.

"Matinee Ladies," starring May McAvoy, is in its third week of filming. Monte Blue and company are in Death Valley filming dramatic sequences for "The Brute." Several realistic touches will be injected into "White Flannels" inasmuch as varsity players of the University of Southern California are participating in the football episodes. The cast for Rin-Tin-Tin's "Tracked by the Police" has also been completed. Dolores Costello's vehicle, "A Million Bid," is at work on a California mission set which occupies most of the space on the largest of the Warner Bros. set.

Casting Completed for Esther Ralston's First Starring Film

The complete cast for "Fashions for Women," Esther Ralston's first Paramount starring production, includes Einar Hanson, Raymond Hatton, Edward Martindel, Maud Wayne, Charles Darvis, William Orlamond, Agostino Borgoto, Edward Faust and Yvonne Howell. Hanson recently finished a featured role with Miss Ralston in Frank Lloyd's "Children of Divorce." Besides marking Esther Ralston's debut as a star, "Fashions for Women" will introduce for the first time in Paramount history the work of a woman director—that of Dorothy Arzner. The story of "Fashions for Women" was adapted by Jules Furthman and Herman Mankiewicz from the stage play, "The Girl of the Hour." It was scenarized by Percy Heath.

Norma Talmadge Adds to Cast of Her "Camille"

With the resuming of work by Fred Niblo at the Hollywood studio of United Artists, after several days on location taking scenes for her modern version of "Camille," Norma Talmadge has made some important additions to the supporting cast of her latest First National starring vehicle. The new members of the cast include Alec B. Francis, Helen Jerome Eddy, Albert Conti, Etta Lee, Michael Visaroff and Evelyn Selbie.

Hundreds of extras and scores of motorcars and other vehicles are being pressed into service for use in the Paris boulevard sequences of "Camille." Oliver Marsh, photographer of serveral of the star's pictures, heads the battery of cameras shooting the story. Some radical new ideas are promised in the camera work.

First National Films Will Be Shorter

Rowland Declares Public Wants Faster Action; States Reduced Length Improves Pictures

RICHARD A. ROWLAND, general and production manager of First National Pictures, this week announced his decision to release First National productions in shorter lengths in the future as it is his contention that the public wants its picture fare speeded up and, likewise, it is his belief that the story is improved when concentrated.

"Many things," says Mr. Rowland, who is now at the company's Burbank studios, "enter into the problem of exhibition nowadays, which render it imperative that feature productions be made shorter than heretofore. Henceforth most First National pictures will be limited to approximately 6,000 feet, except in the case of specials.

"The public has become tired of lengthy pictures—this fact has been demonstrated time and again. Also, with the modern method of arranging programs, with prologues, vaudeville and special features interspersed, too long a picture cuts into the exhibitor's profits. A film running seven reels or more practically cuts out one performance a day—a serious consideration for the exhibitor.

"Technically, pictures today are cut so that much superfluous footage is eliminated. Intermediate shots are often discarded. It is possible to jump from a close-up to a long shot or vice-versa, without breaking the continuity or spoiling the effect.

"This is a fast-moving age, and the public wants its motion picture entertainment to move at a similar speed. It has long been my contention that practically any picture can be improved from an artistic and dramatic standpoint by shortening it—consequently our decision to cut down the length of most First National pictures is not only in keeping with the speed of the times, but will, I am sure, result in the improvement of our product."

Fox Studio Work Finished

Million Dollar Expansion Program Completed; Indoor Equipment Installed; Location Plot Developed

THE program of reconstruction, expansion and improvement at the Fox Film Studio in Hollywood and location acreage was completed this week, at an estimated total cost of $1,000,000, which was expended in erecting new stages, purchases of electrical, wardrobe and furniture equipment and the development of the 150-acre outdoor studio.

The property, purchased by Mr. Fox in 1917, is located on the west side of Western Avenue, at Sunset Boulevard and comprises thirteen and a half acres. In addition 150 acres have been purchased at Fox Hills and this is expected to fulfill the needs of the producers. On the original site are the executive buildings, four theatres for the use of directors and eight stages, three of which are said to be the largest in the world.

Development work has not been completed at the Fox Hills property, but it is expected that when improvements contemplated have been made it will be one of the most beautiful spots in lower California. An idea of the size of the tract may be had from the fact that a set for "Sunrise," one of the Fox films, is a mile long and half a mile wide; incidentally the cost of erection was $200,000.

The program of reconstruction has been under the supervision of Winfield R. Sheehan, vice-president and general manager of Fox Films, and he was aided in the work by Sol M. Wurtzel, general manager of the studio, Technical Director William Darling and Electrical Superintendent Calvin Hoffner, who, it is claimed, has perfected a new lighting system which eliminates Kleig eyes.

Other improvements include bungalows, especially constructed for the stars, and permanent sets on the location lot representing Spanish haciendas, German towns, French villages and English estates; $150,000 worth of furniture, the installation of modern fire fighting apparatus, camera equipment worth $50,000 and a 500-kilowatt motor generator capable of lighting a city of 150,000 population.

M. H. Hoffman Returns From Abroad

M. H. Hoffman, of Tiffany, returned on the Olympic this week from a visit to London and the Continent. He is expected to make an important announcement soon on the result of his trip.

Tie-up with the Marine recruiting offices of Dallas, Tex., netted the Melba Theatre there an excellent campaign for "Tin Hats" (M-G-M). Above is the ambulance, donated by the recruiting service as ballyhoo for the Melba showing. On the right is the lobby display for the picture at the Melba

Consistent attention to lobby display with emphasis on loud and noisy effects, has helped the Blackstone Theatre in Pittsburgh, to pay dividends as a second-run in a first-run neighborhood. A typical display at the Blackstone is that shown in the photo above, featuring exploitation for First National's "Ranson's Folly." The Blackstone is managed by R. P. Wheeler.

Credits Lobby Displays With Big Returns on Small Outlay

MAKING a second-run house pay dividends in a first-run neighborhood was the job tackled by R. P. Wheeler, when he became manager of Stanley-Rowland and Clark's Blackstone Theatre at Pittsburgh, Pa. Located on Fifth Avenue, downtown, in the very heart of Pittsburgh's theatrical section, with two major first-run houses directly across the street, the Blackstone continues to play its split-week programs to capacity houses.

Mr. Wheeler gives two reasons for the success of the Blackstone under its current policy. First, the use of only the strongest features obtainable, and secondly, the use of strong lobby displays.

"The company's present policy gives us the strongest features," said Mr. Wheeler, "from four to six weeks after they have had their first run in Pittsburgh. They are second-run in fact only, for we handle them much in the same way we would handle a return engagement of a particularly popular feature. That is the spirit around the Blackstone. By working in close harmony with Mr. Dygert, Stanley-Rowland and Clark's director of advertising and publicity, we are able to get together some powerful lobby displays. Displays that have all the ear marks of first-run pictures.

"The most important part of our exploitation program is the consistent attention we devote to our lobby. We are in a position where we must yell for attention, running in close competition with so many first-run houses—and we do it with displays of a loud and noisy nature. For example, in showing the First National feature, 'Ransom's Folly,' starring Richard Barthelmess, we secured a fifteen-foot spread from the First National exchange, and hung it from the lobby proscenium, down to the rear of the box office. The effect was startling, to be sure, but it was also profitable. 'Ranson's Folly' enjoyed an excellent business, despite inclement weather, bitter cold, and rival first-run productions."

Harold B. Dygert, Stanley-Rowland and Clark's publicity director, gives the Blackstone credit for hanging up box office records with a minimum of expensive advertising.

"The lobby is the thing with the Blackstone," says Dygert. "Every effort is made to give the lobby all the trimmings necessary."

Perutz Makes Income Tax Blanks More Interesting

It won't be long now before people will be thinking about their income tax, so Manager W. S. Perutz got out a supplemental income tax blank when Richard Dix in "Paradise for Two" played at the Lincoln Theatre, Lincoln, Nebr.

The blank contained eleven questions of the comedy variety, as: "Are you married or single? Why?" "Do you drink? If so, where do you get it?" "Exclusive of Bootleggers, how many people are dependent on you for support?" etc.

At the bottom of the questionnaire was, "Official advice! For further information, see other side." The other side enlightened the people that "Paradise for Two" was playing at the Lincoln.

Double - Barrelled Publicity for "Michael Strogoff"

If a tie-up with one newspaper is good, a tie-up with two is better, reasons Al Kaufman, manager of the Cameo Theatre in Pittsburgh, and so when he had "Michael Strogoff" set in for the week opening on Christmas Day, he arranged special morning showing the day before to which he invited the carriers of both the "Gazette Times" and the "Telegraph."

School Blackboards Sniped for Show

"Tell It to the Marines" Scribbled by Charlotte High Students

Manager Warren Irvin went in for something different when he lined up three High School students to print the title of the picture on the High School blackboards when "Tell It to the Marines" played at the Imperial Theatre, Charlotte, N.C.

For a whole week in advance of showing, these three High School students arrived at the school early enough to print the title of picture, theatre, and play dates on all the blackboards before the general student body put in their appearance.

This stunt was done with the knowledge of the teachers and permission from the principal. These boys placed three oil paintings in the entrance lobby of the school and placed another one on the school bulletin board.

The stunt cost a few passes, but it was well worth it.

Gives Passes as Rewards for Careful Driving

The Pantages Theatre in Vancouver, B. C., has always been popular, but recently it has become absolutely top hole. The reason is the new form of publicity recently originated and put into effect by Kenneth Tallmadge, the manager of the house.

Tallmadge believes that if bad automobile drivers should be penalized, good ones should be rewarded. And so he prepares 20 passes each week, good for any day but Saturday, which he issues to the traffic policemen of Vancouver. They, at their own discretion, give them to the drivers who they feel are most deserving of reward.

Base Drive on Title "Lunatic at Large"

We Made 'Em Curious to See Play With Such a Strange Name

BY BOB HARVEY

(Publicity Director T. & D. Theatre, Oakland)

They roar at the antics of Errol in this one, but the title is rather hard to get over unless you can set the town talking about it in advance. I decided to make 'em curious to see what kind of a story could be given such a strange name.

To this end we made up 20,000 teasers. These were about the size of a business card and contained on one side a wise crack such as "The Lunatic At Large is looking for husbands who are shell shocked from watching their wives eat peanuts"—and on the reverse our regular announcement. Some of the wise cracks were taken from the titles in "The Lunatic at Large."

We distributed the 20,000 cards in barbershops, beauty parlors, pool rooms, cafes, hotels, cigar stores, dance halls and everywhere that people gathered, especially where the young people meet. The wise crackers will always remember and repeat any funny gag, and ours certainly handed them chuckles aplenty. They even came to the theatre and asked for them.

In small towns where kid business is sought after, managers can further elaborate on this scheme by having the cards numbered or lettered, thus giving the kids a chance to gather a full set of the jokes and turning them in in return for a free pass. This starts the kids "swapping" cards and helps make 'em talk about your house and attraction.

Complimented by Press for Ads

Alec Sayles, manager of the Leland in Albany, and a former newspaperman, was complimented by the press of the city last week on his outstanding newspaper ads in connection with the run of "Tell it to the Marines."

Moving Sign Advertises "Nervous Wreck" at L. A. Theatre

NOVEL sidewalk and lobby signs, which could be seen jiggling a block away from in front of the Broadway Palace Theatre, Los Angeles, were designed for the run of "The Nervous Wreck," by Jim Quinn, exploitation director of Producers Distributing Corporation in Los Angeles. A complete description of how the simply-constructed arrangements are made is as follows:

The letters of "The Nervous Wreck" are made of light galvanized iron, the various arms of the letters loosely riveted together so that they will swing free when motive power is attached. The letters are nailed to a bar which goes across the top of the sign. The entire sign is swung from light wire.

A quarter-horse power motor supplies power to set the signs and letters jiggling. A spring belt goes from the motor to a bicycle wheel, which serves to cut down the speed of the motion. From the hub of the bicycle wheel, with about two-inch thrust, goes a light-driving bar attached by wire to the sign so that for every revolution of the bicycle wheel one sideways motion is imparted to the sign and letters.

By means of iron angle-bars, which may be bought for five or ten cents in hardware stores, wiring may be run to any number of signs. At the Broadway Palace Theatre, three signs were used, two in front of the theatre and one across the sidewalk under the marquee. The latter is the most effective, if only one is used.

When the iron letters jiggle back and forth, the noise of the various iron parts of the letters clacking against each other, add to the effect of the moving sign.

The speed may be cut down or increased by shifting the driving bar, which is attached to the hub of the bicycle wheel.

Army Discharge Heralds "Izzy Murphy"

W. C. MacNAUGHTON, manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Roxbury, Mass., designed a novelty herald which figured importantly in attracting the public's attention to his presentation of "Private Izzy Murphy." The herald was in the form of an army discharge—printed on yellow paper, and in size four inches by eight inches. It was folded through the center.

The "dishonorable discharge" bore on its front cover the lines "United States Army" with a line in small type reading "of theatregoers." "You are dishonorably discharged. For offense committed see inside." On the inside of the folder was the information that all who do not avail themselves of seeing "Private Izzy Murphy" are to be cut off, in disgrace, from the "army of theatregoers." The declaration was signed by "George Jessel, Commander-in-Chief of the Army of Fun."

Merchants Supply Props for "Paradise" Lobby Display

A novel and effective tie-up was procured by M. W. Korach, general manager of the Silverman Brothers' chain, for the Strand Theatre, Akron, Ohio, during the engagement of "Paradise."

The tie-up was effected with several pet shops and florists. The managements of these stores lent a selection of bird cages with canaries, tropical palms, aquariæ, and a generous assortment of mounted birds and animals. These were all set in the inside lobby of the Strand about a large framed poster of Milton Sills, giving the proper tropical setting to "Paradise," and affording the merchants sufficient advertising to make them more than satisfied with the tie-up.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of 'Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Studio Briefs

Preparation for the production of two new Warner pictures has been started. Casting on "Tracked by the Police" has been practically completed, the principals now being Rin-Tin-Tin, starred, Jason Robards, Douglas Gerrard, Tom Santschi, Heinie Conklin and Tom McGuire. Johnnie Grey is at work on the scenario based on Gregory Rogers' story. Ray Enright will direct. The other film, "The Brute," starring Monte Blue, will go into work as soon as Irving Cummings, director, and Bill Guthrie, location manager, have finished their task of selecting location scenes. The support for Blue includes Leila Hyams, Clyde Cook, Carrol Nye and Paul Nichols.

Heading a company of thirty, Richard Dix and Mary Brian left last week for Lake Placid, N.Y., where a week will be spent in filming exteriors for "Knockout Reilly," which Malcolm St. Clair is directing for Paramount. The production unit includes Harry Gribbon, who has an important role in the picture, Larry McGrath, Billy Viderbeek and four lesser pugilistic luminaries who appear in the film.

Frankie Darro, F.B.O. juvenile, has won for himself the role of a crippled brother to Conway Tearle in "Moulders of Men," on which Ralph Ince has just started production. Frankie has just reached his eighth birthday and has been in the films for four years.

A long term contract with Warner Bros. has been signed by Tom Gibson, scenarist, whose first assignment will be "The Climbers," Irene Rich's next starring vehicle which Paul L. Stein will direct. Gibson's last two scripts were "Kid Boots" and "The Palm Beach Girl," both for Famous Players-Lasky.

Mary Carr, who was last seen as the old French grandmother in "Blonde or Brunette," has been re-signed by Paramount to appear in "Afraid to Love," Florence Vidor's next starring vehicle. E. H. Griffith will direct this picture. In its cast are Clive Brook, Jocelyn Lee and Arthur Lubin.

Fred Scheussler, former head of the casting offices at Warner Brothers, Universal City, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and other producing plants, has assumed his new duties as casting director of the United Artists studio in Hollywood. Scheussler's staff will also function for the U.A. sixty-acre auxiliary studio to be constructed immediately in Culver City.

Vera Veronica, Russian actress who has just arrived in Hollywood, will attempt her first screen work when she portrays a role in "Soundings," Julian Josephsen's screen adaptation of A. Hamilton Gibbs' story. Lois Moran has the leading feminine role, with Douglas Gilmore playing opposite her. Rowland V. Lee will direct.

Earl Snell, scenarist, has been placed under a long term contract to write for Universal. His first assignment is the adaptation and continuity for a Reginald Denny special, which will be made when that star has recovered from his illness. He recently sold an original, "The Denver Dude," to Universal as a starring vehicle for Hoot Gibson. The signing of the long term contract followed.

The newest addition to Adolphe Menjou's supporting cast in "Evening Clothes," his current starring vehicle now in production under the direction of Luther Reed, Paramount director, is Lilyan Tashman. In the supporting cast are Virginia Valli, Noah Beery, Louise Brooks and Lido Manetti.

Portraying the two "rivals" in George Randolph Chester's story, "Quarantined Rivals," which Gotham is producing, will be Robert Agnew and Ray Hallor, with the former carrying the bulk of the work. Kathleen Collins, borrowed from First National, is to portray the girl in the case. Appearing in supporting roles will be John Miljan, Viola Daniels, Big Boy Williams, Clarissa Selwynne, Josephine Borie and William A. O'Connor. Archie Mayo is directing "Quarantined Rivals," while Ray June is taking care of the photography and Glenn Belt is supervising production.

Alphonz Ethier, who played in the stage production of Sam Benneli's "The Jest," will be seen in the Tiffany production, "Cheaters," an original story by Harry Kerr, which has just been finished.

Under the direction of Ben Stoloff, "A.W.O.L.," Fox Films' war comedy in which Sammy Cohen and Ted McNamara, the comedy team from "What Price Glory?" have two of the featured roles, has just been completed. Gene Cameron has the leading male role. Others in the cast are Judy King, Betty Francisco, Holmes Herbert and Charles Gorman.

Gibson Gowland, who played the role of McTigue in Von Stroheim's "Greed," has been engaged to portray one of the principals in "The Broken Gate," a Tiffany production which is scheduled for release in February.

Cosmo Hamilton, English novelist and playwright, has been engaged by Pierre Bedard, production manager for the Swanson Producing Corporation, to do the subtitles for "The Love of Sunya," Miss Swanson's first independent picture for United Artists.

Irving Bacon is the latest addition to the cast of "Salvation Jane," Viola Dana's newest feature for F.B.O. Phil Rosen is directing the production with Park Jones, Fay Holderness and Erville Alderson in the cast.

Lucien Littlefield, character actor of both stage and screen, has been added to the cast of "Cheating Cheaters," a Universal production which Edward Laemmle will direct. Littlefield also has an important role in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Featured in "Cheating Cheaters" are Betty Compson and Kenneth Harlan.

After five years of experience in vaudeville, Edwin August, former screen star, director and author, is making his film comeback in a small role as a companion detective to Tom Moore in "Cabaret," Gilda Gray's new Paramount starring picture. August is renewing his friendships with Harry A. Fishbeck, chief photographer of "Cabaret," and others whom he knew during the making of his last picture before transferring his activities to the stage.

Otis Harlan, the comedian with the queer, paddling gait, has been signed on a long term contract by Universal. Harlan has appeared in several Universal productions such as "Oh! Doctor," "What Happened to Jones," "The Silent Rider" and "Down the Stretch."

Alan Hale, director, will lay aside his megaphone and don the grease paint once again for the next few weeks to play the villain in "Vanity," Leatrice Joy's next De Mille feature. His return to acting, however, will be but temporary and only because it has been deemed necessary to postpone the starting of his next picture—the first of four which he will direct for De Mille.

Percy Heath, one of the first scenarists in the motion picture industry, has signed a long term contract with Famous Players-Lasky as a member of the writing staff. He has just completed the screen play of "Fashions for Women," Esther Ralston's initial starring vehicle which Dorothy Arzner is directing.

Nils Olaf Chrisander, who recently finished directing "Fighting Love," has just started on his second American production, "The Heart Thief." Samuel Morris Pike adapted the story which is being supervised by Walter Woods. Henry Cronjager is shooting the picture in which are cast Joseph Schildkraut and Lya De Putti in the leads and Robert Edeson, Charles Gerrard and Eulalie Jensen.

Henry Kolker, veteran character actor of stage and screen, has been signed by Paramount to play in "Rough House Rosie," Clara Bow's next starring vehicle.

Short-Subjects and Serials

Production of Pathecomedies in Full Swing

"Love's Languid Lure," a new Mack Sennett Pathecomedy starring Ben Turpin, has been completed under the direction of Lige Conley. It is now in the final editing and titling stage.

Alf Goulding is busily engaged in the direction of "Smith's Cook;" a new comedy of the trials and tribulations of "those Smiths." The principals, Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Mary Ann Jackson, are aided in the funmaking by Polly Moran, George Grey, Vernon Dent, Irving Bacon and Omar, the huge canine actor. Vernon Walter and Sam Moran are taking care of the photography.

The comedy team of Madeline Hurlock and Eddie Quillan is hard at work on a new farce woven about the recent Catalina Channel swim. Among others, Earl Rodney is directing Alma Bennett, Andy Clyde, and Barney Hellum. William Williams and Lee Davis are grinding the cameras.

Jeff Moffitt and Phil Whitman are preparing for a feature-length comedy, an adaptation of Johnny Burke's vaudeville soldier monologue, "Dirty Work." Harry Edwards is collaborating on the script with the two scenarists. Johnny Burke's vaudeville work won the praise of Mack Sennett and a long term movie contract. He will be starred in a screen version of his act.

New "Jane" Comedies in Work at Sterns' Studio

The "What Happened to Jane" series of two-reel comedies which the Stern Brothers are producing for Universal release during the current season, has been resumed at the Hollywood studio of the Sterns. The eighth has just gone into production with Scott Pembrock directing. Thelma Daniels is the featured player, replacing Wanda Wiley, the former "Jane." In the cast of the new comedy are Charles King, Max Asher, Lillian Worth and Frank Whitson.

American Cinema Acquires Rights to Eight Stories

The American Cinema Association through A. J. Moeller, its president, has acquired rights to eight more stories for ACA, including "Be Yourself," an original by a new writer, Edna Neff, which is soon to make its appearance in a well-known magazine. The other stories are "The New Pathway," "Female Help Wanted," "Detour," "Shock Proof," "Wholesale Only," "The Golden Bubble" and "The Luminous Dial."

"Old Tin Sides," Standard Comedy, in Production

F.B.O.'s standard comedy due for release on March 7 will be known by the title of "Old Tin Sides." Gil Pratt, director, is now in the midst of production on this one. In it are the fat men trio, Fatty Alexander, Fat Carr and Kewpie Ross.

Pathe's Feb. 20 Line-Up

Includes Roach and Sennett Two-Reel Comedies; Diversified Novelties and News Subjects

HEADING the list of Pathe releases for February 20th are two two-reel comedies, one a Hal Roach and the other a Mack Sennett production; other short features are "Weatherproof," a Grantland Rice Spotlight, the fourth chapter of "On Guard," the current Patheserial, "Topics of the Day, No. 48," "The Mail Pilot," an "Aesop's Fable," "Pathe Review No. 48" and two issues of Pathe News.

"Why Girls Say No" is the title of the Roach production which co-features Marjorie Daw and Creighton Hale with a supporting cast including Max Davidson, Anne Brody, and Spec O'Donnell. Leo McCarey directed under the supervision of F. Richard Jones. It is another serio-comic tale of the Irish and the Jews.

"Peaches and Plumbers" is the Mack Sennett offering with Madeline Hurlock and Billy Bevans in the leading roles supported by Thelma Hill and Stanley Blystone with Eddie Cline directing under the supervision of J. A. Waldron. The story concerns the love affairs of a plumber and an heiress though the plumber is married.

"Weatherproof" is a Grantland Rice picture in which indoor games of winter are featured—volley-ball, basketball, gymnastics, squash and bowling. It takes in a group of sports in which hundreds of thousands are now participating.

"On Guard," the current Patheserial, reaches its fourth chapter with the episode entitled "The Sinister Warning." Cullen Landis is the star of this serial with a cast including Muriel Kingston, Louise DuPre, Walter P. Lewis, Tom Blake, Edward Burns, Hal Forde, Gus de Wilde and Tom Poland.

Topics of the Day, No. 8, presents choice bits of wit and humor compiled from the international press. "The Mail Pilot" is the week's offering of the Aesop's Film Fables Series of animated cartoon comedies. Pathe Review No. 8 presents: "Fighting Fashions": The Japanese love celebrations and this unit shows the Samurai warriors clad in quaint fighting togs doing their symbolical dances; "The Bulwarks of Havana": A Pathecolor unit shows the ancient fortifications protecting Cuba's capital; "The Somersault Slicker," an acrobatic novelty in which a juvenile gymnast shows the old boys some new tricks. This feature, presenting Robert Coleman, nine-year-old acrobat, was made with the new process-camera invented by Alvin V. Knechtel. The program is completed by two issues of Pathe News, Nos. 18 and 19, presenting last minute happenings from the four corners of the earth.

Gilstrom to Direct "Cash and Carry" for Christie

Al Christie, comedy producer for Educational, has signed Arvid Gilstrom to direct the next Educational-Christie opus, "Cash and Carry," featuring Neal Burns, with Edna Marion portraying the chief feminine part. The team of Burns and Marion has been featured in several Christies this season, among them "The Daffy Dill" and "Dodging Trouble."

Gilstrom will augment the Christie staff of directors, which now includes Harold Beaudine, William Watson, Walter Graham and Robert Kerr.

"Somebody's Fault," Hamilton's Next Educational

Educational's new comedy offering featuring Lloyd Hamilton will see the rotund comedian cast as a rookie electrician. The comedy has been named "Somebody's Fault" and it is destined for March release. Norman Taurog, who wrote the story for this laugh picture, is the author of the new comedy and again was at the megaphone as is usual with Hamilton comedies.

Appearing opposite Hamilton is Estelle Bradley, who has been alternating between feminine roles in Mermaids. Bob Kortman and Al Thompson have supporting roles.

Boheme to Produce Third Comedy, "That's Nothing"

The Boheme Film Corporation, which is producing a series of twelve two-reel comedies, featuring William Cassio, Italian stage and screen comic, will begin work shortly on the third of a series, "That's Nothing," an original story by C. M. Avella. The two other comedies recently completed were "The Master Mind" and "The Jolly Tavern" at the Vitagraph Brooklyn studio. Herman Obrocke, who photographed the first two, is the only member of the production staff so far decided upon.

Rex Archer Juvenile Lead in Centennial's Historical Series

The juvenile lead in "The Liberty Boys of '76," the series of historical two-reelers which John Raymond and Steward B. Stern Bros. Schedule Comedy Productions

Work Started on Line-up for 1927-28; Production Budget Doubled; Five Comedy Series Contemplated

A NEW and ambitious production project, more important and more extensive than anything the Sterns have yet attempted, has just been started at the Hollywood studio of the comedy producers for Universal. The production forces will have the advantage of a larger studio, up-to-the-minute equipment, and a large array of talent and technical experts.

The Sterns production budget is double that of last year and the company is planning in broad strokes for the coming season. The new budget will approximate $1,500,000.

Five series of two-reel comedies are included in the new schedule: "The Newlyweds and Their Baby," a series of twelve, to be released as Universal Junior Jewels, and "Let George Do It," "Buster Brown," "Keeping Up with the Joneses" and "Mike and Ike," each series to comprise thirteen comedies to be released as Stern Brothers comedies.

Julius Stern, president of the corporation, has hopes of being foremost in the field next season with a new style of product. Outlining plans for the new season, Mr. Stern declared that a new era in screen comedy production is in the offing. He believes that the millions who follow the antics of their newspaper comic favorites enjoy seeing them on the screen and will come week in and week out to follow their adventures. Thus there is a demand for more continuity in characterization and theme. The Sterns say they are applying psychology in transferring cartoon characters to the screen.

Assign Titles to Charley Bower F.B.O. Comedies

Number seven and eight of the Charley Bower's Novelty comedy series, which F. B.O. are handling, have received definite titles. The first is called "He Couldn't Help It" and the latter "Shoosh!" Number seven is released on February 21 and number eight on March 21.

Work Finished on "Grandpa's Boy," a "Big Boy" Film

Production work has been completed on "Big Boy's" new Educational-Juvenile comedy. This two-reeler, in which Charles Lamont directed the three-year-old baby star, has been titled "Grandpa's Boy."

Jim Adams' "Here Comes Precious" About Done

"Here Comes Precious," a new Jimmie Adams-Educational offering which presents the comedian in an entirely new characterization, is rapidly nearing completion at the Educational studio.

Opinions on Current Productions

"Shoulder Arms"

(Pathe Comedy—Three Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a picture which should bring fame to the man who wrote, directed and starred in it. His name is Charles Chaplin. I understand that he is an Englishman who came to this country a short time ago with an organization called Fred Karno's Company, presenting a sketch called, "A Night in an English Music Hall." In the latter Chaplin played the role of a drunk who falls from a stage box and does other amazing acrobatic stunts, always without speaking a word. He took a test a short time ago at the Keystone Studios and as a result has been used in several one and two-reel affairs. This one, called "Shoulder Arms," is the most ambitious thing he has done yet and augurs well for his future. With the right direction he should go far, for he has a marked pantomimic ability. He affects a derby hat, short, stubby black moustache, baggy, ill-fitting trousers and shoes obviously too large for him. Also he invariably carries a short cane, which he wields constantly. The effect is quite ludicrous.

In this new offering of Pathe, which Chaplin himself has written, he burlesques the World War, a dangerous thing at this time, with the war still on. He is a private in the trenches. At the end he captures, single-handed, the Kaiser, Crown Prince and Von Hindenburg, and turns them over to the Allies' general staff. Of course, this is rather absurd and improbable, being contrary to history as written so far, but it is laughable.

It is important on several scores, for it marks the appearance of a comedian who should go far. I say this, dangerous as prophecy always is. Also, he has, as author, evolved some amusing situations satirizing life in the trenches.

In his support is another Chaplin named Syd—presumably his brother or cousin or something—and an attractive actress named Edna Purviance. I recommend readers to see this piece and exhibitors to book the same. Some day they may look back and say, "I told you so" when this young English pantomimist becomes a full-fledged star, as I personally, have no doubt he will become.

"Felix the Cat Dines and Pines"

(Educational-Sullivan Cartoon—One Reel)

"DR. CALIGARI'S CABINET" in an animated cartoon; that is what results in this Pat Sullivan when his protege, "Felix," cats not wisely but too well. The dream that results would satisfy the most exacting, futuristic impressionist. Before this he has worked out a most ingenious progressive dinner. The illegal drink that should precede all dinners (with apologies to Volstead) he secures by sucking the contents of a punch-bowl in a convenient window through a bit of spaghetti. The soup is gotten by wringing the beard of an old gentleman who vociferously inhales his. The chicken problem is unsolved because the descendants of the fowl intended for consumption come to their mother's aid and rout "Felix."

It is because of this that he descends on a refuse heap and consumes an old shoe. And then the nightmare which might have been staged by a German movie director. "Never Again!" is the logical vow of "Felix" in the matter of indiscriminate meals.

Snappy stuff and out of the usual run and so should score.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Fiddlesticks"

(Educational-Curiosities—One Reel)

THE movie side-show this week runs the gamut. New York with boys fishing for coins through sidewalk gratings. Then a real fish, a radium species produced by the phosphorus of the Bay of Naples. A star fish and transparent member of the finny tribe complete the piscatorial exhibit.

A native Floridian capturing an alligator and then wrestling with the same on dry land is followed by an inventive and ingenious negro driving a car which he assembled and built from pieces of other cars found on the roads of his native State. He has a minimum overhead getting his coal from passing trains.

A bee-catching plant, largest rooster in the world and highest jumping chicken (not a chorus girl) come along in order.

Then for a finale, New Guinea. Here two native tribes, separated by a valley, never come in contact with each other, but through horns and tom-toms they hurl insults and challenges at each other. It never seems to occur to them to come to grips. They content themselves with this battle over the air. How the radio would help them out!—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Wedding Yells"

(Educational-Tuxedo Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

CONSIDERING Johnny Arthur's diffidence in the presence of women—it is a wonder he got the courage to propose to Anita Garvin—it was hard lines to have the vamp accuse him of being such a cave-man and practically wrecking her. But then that was part of the plot to marry Johnny to Kathryn McGuire, the villainess, and it might have succeeded if Kathryn had not become convinced at the last moment that Wallace Lupino, her co-partner in crime, was double-crossing her with the intention of marrying Anita himself. And then she broke down and told the truth so Johnny could and did marry Anita.

Kathryn's story, told as the wedding was halted, of course was given to the audience in a pictorial sequence, Johnny being endowed with a typical villain walrus moustache and morals consistent and in accord with the same. And the pathetic, innocent vamp whom we had met earlier in the picture smoking an elongated cigarette-holder and with all the other attributes and concomitants of a 1927 model vampire. Of course we wanted to break in and tell the bride, her father and the minister that Kathryn was lying, but what could we do being merely guests and spectators at the wedding? Fortunately the truth came out anyway.

It is an amusing, well-directed and acted, wild farce-comedy and will go over on almost any program.

Charles Lamont directed the same.

Portugal Today

(Fox-Variety—786 Feet)

PORTUGAL being one of the European countries little visited by the average American tourist, there is possibly greater interest in a travelogue devoted to that country than those concerning themselves with more popular and generally seen places. The Fox cameraman has shown his usual good judgment in his shots. Always he emphasizes the fact that today Portugal is a republic and former castles owned by Manuel and his forebears are now public buildings or hotels. Architecturally the country is a revelation. Then the commercial phase is dwelt on showing how the wines for which the country is famous are transported in the most primitive fashion and then shipped to the rest of the thirsty world, of course, the United States excepted.

This particular release scheduled for February 20th belongs most emphatically in the series from a photographic and human interest viewpoint.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Ranger's Romance"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FRED GILMAN happens to be riding by—they do in the movies—when the heroine's horses run away with her and the buckboard. What more consistent than that he by a bit of hard riding rescue her. He does. Presented to her father, the latter with a sublime faith that "All's for the Best," Fred discovers that father has been buncoed into buying a worked-out mine. But—just before payment is due—gold is discovered on an adjoining claim with the natural assumption that it runs through. Then follows business of preventing the father from discovering the gold in his own mine and paying off the balance due. Fred Gilman sees to it that the crook is thwarted and in the end put under arrest, for it seems that Gilman all this time is a Texas ranger looking for said crook.

A rather pat and neat little two-reeler that Ray Taylor has directed and which will be released March 12. The usual quota of fights between hero and villains, hard riding to get here or there in time and a satisfactory stranglehold fade-out between brave hero and fair heroine.

"Duck Out"

(Educational-Bobby Vernon—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BOBBY VERNON becomes the assistant to the traveling magician and thus gratifies an ambition to go on the stage. Incidentally he is able to prevent the magician and his crook partners from stealing all the local jewelry and watches handed over in the most guiless, gullible manner by the audience for some reason best known to them and the professor. Frances Lee, one of the Wampas 1927 stars, lends her feminine pulchritude to the leading lady's role, the girl who is in love with Bobby and who assists the professor in his delusion creating acts.

This is really quite an ambitious two-reeler and well done. Three specially constructed sets, a village street scene, hotel foyer and small town theatre, add to the value of the comedy. For the theatre scene showing the re-action on the audience of the professor's tricks a large number of extras are employed. The piece deserves to rank as one of the best of the recent Vernon releases and unquestionably will score everywhere.

Christie produced it, Educational released the same, William Watson directed.

The four principal characters are Bobby Vernon, Frances Lee, Bill Irving and Bill Blaisdell.

"Why Mules Leave Home"

(Universal-Bluebird—One Reel)

VERSATILE actor-writer-director Slim Summerville co-stars in this one-reel Bluebird comedy with Fanny the mule. Probably many actors working under directors think that more should be featured the same way. But that is another story. This one is complicated enough as it is without entering an academic discussion of directors. Slim tries to bid in a pet mule at auction but loses out because of his poverty. He steals the mule anyway. Using the mule as an organ grinder does a monkey, Slim secures a competence. With this he decides to marry the girl, not to make an honest woman of her, because this is not problem play, but because both love the mule. The sheriff, foiled in his love for the girl and the possession of the mule, enters. He also exits with the aid of the mule's hind feet. And that is all. A simple little tale that will be intelligible to the highest-brow. Released March 7.

Taxi! Taxi!

Horton Calls One and Gets Pinched

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IF IT had not started to rain the night the hero (Edward Everett Horton) took the heroine (Marian Nixon) to "Sweeney's" he would not have been compelled to buy a taxicab to take her home, all the other cars being in use. But that is just what happens to you and me when we are similarly situated. But then "if" is an omnipresent word in life anyway, and had this situation not arisen probably he never would have married or been arrested, so it was just as well, after all. He really had no business taking her to the expensive cabaret because he had a small bank account. But you know how it is when you are in love, you are really a lunatic at large.

Just who gets the credit for this Universal picture is hard to figure. George Weston wrote the story; Raymond Cannon adapted it and Melville W. Brown did the continuity. And when that had been done, directed. Edward Everett Horton is starred. Anyway, the result is quite worth-while for there are provided several reels of a quite human, plausible and entertaining story.

An unpretentious yet human story that will interest almost everyone. It deserves the success that will, doubtless, be its portion for everyone concerned has done his bit well.

The Cast: Edward Everett Horton, Marian Nixon, Burr McIntosh, Edward Martindel, William V. Mong, Lucien Littlefield, Freeman Wood. Director and Continuity writer, Melville W. Brown. Author, George Weston. Adaptor, Raymond Cannon.

THEME: Young architect falls in love with boss' niece. Takes her to cabaret. Buys a hold-up taxi to get her home. Runs afoul of police but wins girl and promotion with firm.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Exceptionally capable, well-balanced cast. Human note throughout plot. Amusing situations.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Above and Horton's growing popularity with movie patrons.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 7,173 feet. Released April 24.
Produced and distributed by Universal.

The First Night

Nothing Objectionable in Bedroom Farce

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

THIS is an innocuous farce-comedy which neither soars to the heights nor descends below the mediocre in entertainment value. It has a good story idea but there is a little too much slap-stick treatment and Bert Lytell is not a particularly happy selection as a light comedian; he doesn't seem to let himself go, always a certain restraint not appropriate in a role of this type nor in accord with the director's handling of the other characters. Walter Hiers and a little colored chap, not credited in the cast, contribute the best individual performances; Harry Myers is not the comedian of "The Connecticut Yankee—" days. Though the title and the "paper" suggest a rather risque production, this is not borne out in the picture.

A rejected suitor tries to intimidate his former fiancee and her present fiance by means of threats to her and, through his ability as a female impersonator, to persuade the man that he married "her" in France during the war. The sweethearts marry and spend their first night at a hotel but "she" has enlisted the aid of the house detective and life is made miserable for the newlyweds until the inevitable denouement.

The Cast: Bert Lytell, Dorothy Devore, Harry Myers, Frederic K. Vert, Walter Hiers, Lila Leslie, James Mack, Hazel Keener, Joan Standing, Nellie Bly Baker. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Story by Frederica Sagor.

THEME: Domestic complications for newlyweds when wife's former suitor butts in.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes in the doctor's office and at the hotel. Hiers' and the colored boy's acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Enough, but be careful how you use them. See press book.

DRAWING POWER: Program houses. For the family.

Length, 5,500 feet.

Uneasy Payments

Alberta Vaughn Bobs Her Country Braids

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a story that is of the most gossamer-like quality, yet because of its freshness should go over. The heroine, Alberta Vaughn, wins the Charleston contest in her native town. This justified, from her viewpoint, the invasion of the big city and its theatrical world. She does not land in the theatre but in a cabaret looking for chorus girls for its revue. Handicapped by her long hair and old-fashioned clothes she triumphs over these and lands the job. Then, accepting the advice of hero Jack Luden, silent partner in the cabaret, she "puts on a front." The front consists of visits to a beauty parlor and the equipment of a flat, the latter possible through the O.K. on the installments by the proprietor of the night club. Repulsed when he attempts to force his attentions on her he tips off not only the furniture installment house, so that they strip the house of its furnishings, but also the furrier, gown-maker and dealer in lingerie. The emissaries of the latter establishment succeed in recovering their property so that the heroine is forced to join in the slightly clad chorus at the night club to conceal her dishabille. She has gone there incidentally as the guest of Luden, by this time much in love with the little country girl. Now you understand why the title, "Uneasy Payments."

Burnt Fingers

Second Run House or Double Feature Film

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

IF booked as the other half of a double feature program or, if surrounded by a good short subject bill, this production should send them away satisfied. It has its good points as well as its faults. The faults are a hackneyed theme, titles of the "Came the Dawn" variety, a male lead, Ivan Doline, who "hams" all over the place and, if I'm not greatly mistaken, the picture was made two or three years ago if the clothes worn by the female leads are any indication. But to balance the foregoing, the cast, with the exception of the male lead who "hams," is made up of a number of sterling troupers, the action is kept at a fast tempo, there are several good production highlights, and the element of suspense is well sustained.

The story tells of a night-club gigolo, idol of the lady patrons, and the heroine who tries to recover letters written to him by a girl friend. She visits his apartment, he discovers her, "you are in my power-r-r" but he is shot by an unknown. The usual complications arise, the heroine accused, but the murderer is found and the heroine's sweetheart, who suspected her of "two-timing," is convinced he is the only one.

The Cast: Eileen Percy, Ivan Doline, Henry Mowbray, Edna Murphy, Jane Jennings, J. Roy Bennett, Jimmie Ward, George O'Hara, Wilfred Lucas.

THEME: Girl is suspected of dance partner's murder, her fiance believes it, but "murder will out," so all ends well.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The night-club scenes; the sequence in the gigolo's apartment and the denouement.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: The names in the cast, Eileen Percy, Edna Murphy and George O'Hara.

Length, 5,854 feet. Release date, February, 1927.

Produced by J. C. Barstyn. Released by Pathe.

It

Clara Bow Gives You an Eyeful of It

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THAT much-discussed and bandied word coined by Elinor Glyn to indicate personality certainly fits the star for whom it was originally intended. And that's about all there is to it. The Madame hasn't gone out of her way in searching for something new in plots.

She has traveled a very familiar route—without finding a single novel incident hiding among the hedgerows. Hers is the story of the irrespressible sales girl—who knows her onions—a girl who wins the young boss of the department store over the "how-dare-you?" technique of the society rival. There is some infant appeal, too. And a share of contrasts befitting the upper and lower stations of life.

There is nothing to it but Clara Bow. But she is so dynamic, so sure of her stuff, so abundantly vital—that she makes the film entertaining in spite of itself. Clara has so much "it" that it spills over and engulfs Antonio Moreno. As for Madame Glyn—she defines it in a brief scene and a subtitle.

The Cast: Clara Bow, Antonio Moreno, William Austin, Jacqueline Gadsoon, Julia Swayne Gordon, Priscilla Bonner, Eleanor Lawson, Rose Tapley. Directed by Clarence Badger.

THEME: Comedy-drama of a girl with personality who wins her boss away from rich society girl.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The atmosphere. The spirited performance of star. The scene when boss is vamped. The titles. The settings.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Go after that title. Put it over with teasers, etc. Play up Elinor Glyn and how she coined "It" to fit Clara Bow's personality.

DRAWING POWER: Should draw through desire to see what "It" is and how Clara Bow gets away with it. Suitable for average houses.

Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.
Produced and distributed by Famous Players.

The War Horse

What Price Equine Glory?

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE attempt is to glorify Buck Jones' mount, Eagle, but after all the horse merely shares honors with the Western star. Eagle being conscripted on the Wyoming ranch, Buck enlists with the sole idea of being with the horse in France. There is no pretense of making the world safe for democracy or autocracy, simply the love of a man for a horse. Their adventures in the world war are the subject of the picture by Lambert Hillyer, director, scenarist and co-author with Jones of the story. It is episodic, dealing with Buck's saving a run-away motor-truck, lassoing a German machine gun with a wire lariat, capturing a quad of "Kamerad"-exclaiming Teutons, and crossing a mined bridge to save an advancing brigade and being blown up himself

It is not a pretentious picture and decidedly light and ephemeral, but it does provide an entertaining hour. Then, too, it has the merit of making the horse's part an outstanding phase of the war. On that score alone it is commendable. Little demand is made on any one concerned for histrionic ability because the plot is so elementary and simple. It does ring true, even if your sense of plausibility is somewhat strained, because the war atmosphere is quite successfully created and maintained. Of humor there is little or none. It can be dismissed as a good program picture and nothing more.

The Cast: Buck Jones, Eagle, Lola Todd, Lloyd Whitlock, Stanley Taylor, Yola D'Avril, James Gordon. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Author, Buck Jones and Hillyer. Scenario by latter. Cameraman, Reginald Lyons.

THEME: Cowboy and his horse in world-war.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Buck's rescue of run-away ambulance and lassoing German machine gun.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: First glorification of horse in world war. Buck Jones' popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Length, 4,953 feet. Released February 5, 1927.

When a Man Loves

Excellent Audience Picture Is There With Both Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A PEEP into the romantic era of Louis XV gives us the impression that all of the adventure isn't crammed into this tabloid age. Here is John Barrymore in torn togs and trim togs making love to the manor born—and accomplishing results with exceptionally fine repression. Here is the mistress of the close-up, Dolores Costello, demonstrating how she has progressed in cinematic appeal. Together—not forgetting Warner Oland and Sam De Grasse in the offing—they succeed in investing "When a Man Loves" with considerable charm.

The film is costume all the way—and keeps to its romantic tack until they put up the headsails of melodrama toward the finish. Perhaps some of these "shots" are out of place if one is looking for tone and quality. But Barrymore is Barrymore.

There is a fine vein of pathos engendered when the much-admired Manon leaves her Fabien to share in the luxuries of a pampering playboy; there is a good twist of suspense in following the career of the heartsick youth into the monastery—and out again.

It is well done in a production way, aside from a few painted backdrops. The story keeps its mood—and the players stay in character.

The Cast: John Barrymore, Dolores Costello, Warner Oland, Sam De Grasse, Holmes Herbert, Stuart Holmes, Bertram Grasby, Tom Santschi, Marcelle Corday. Director, Alan Crosland.

THEME: Romantic drama of impoverished youth and maid whose happiness is cut short when political intrigue steals her away. They are reunited.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The romantic scenes. The duel. The scene at Court. The ship episodes. The beauty of Miss Costello and her fine acting. The romantic ardor of Barrymore. The subtitles. The sets.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Emphasize its tone and quality. Play up star and Miss Costello. Tie up with fashion stores, etc.

DRAWING POWER: Star and leading woman and title will attract them. O.K. for all houses.

Length, ten reels.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.

Getting Gertie's Garter

Amusing and Entertaining Picture

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

IN THE days when Avery Hopwood, aided and abetted by producer Al Woods, was writing naughty farces, "Getting Gertie's Garter" was considered as extremely daring and risque. And Hopwood was no person to diminish the naughtiness of the idea when it came to writing the play. Now it is a moving picture with Marie Prevost who, as a bathing girl or otherwise, is the possessor of the shapely leg around which the said garter was supposed to cling with an understandable affection.

Well, anyway, it was highly important that "Gertie's" newest fiance, a fatuous sap, should not know that his beloved could be so sophisticated or have had an ex-fiance. Equally important from the hero's point of view is that his newest inamorata should not know of the same things. Hence, seven reels showing the pursuit of the elusive garter. Starting on ship-board and ending in a haymow, the complete possibilities were exhausted. It resolves itself into quite an amusing and entertaining picture, with the players all working overtime for absurd situations and laughter-provoking ideas. And withal as clean as the most censorious might ask.

The Cast: Marie Prevost, Charles Ray, Harry Myers, Sally Rand, William Orlamond, Fritzi Ridgeway, Franklin Pangborn, Del Henderson, Lila Leslie. Director, E. Mason Hopper. Authors, Avery Hopwood and Willson Collison. Adapter, F. McGrew Willis, who also acted as supervisor. Cameraman, Hal Rosson.

THEME: Sophisticated society comedy-farce concerning attempts of hero to get back incriminating garter given by him to heroine when they were engaged.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Innumerable absurd situations that are suggestive yet so absurd they are funny. Laugh possibilities. Well photographed.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Hopwood's fame and that of his play. Play up "for laughing purposes only."

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,859 feet. Released February 28.

Regional News from Correspondents

THE theatrical bowling league in Troy, N.Y., gave a dinner one night last week that was attended not only by the bowlers themselves, but by the managers of all theatres in that city. Along with the dinner, there was an evening of entertainment with actors from Proctor's Theatre contributing their part. The bowling team from the Lincoln Theatre is now leading the league.

Julius Singer, who is now managing the Universal Exchange in Albany, now feels perfectly at home in the Capitol City, having received a huge box of pretzels from someone in Maryland. Mr. Singer was very generous with his gift.

Abe Dwore, of Schenectady, who with his father, runs the Capital and Cameo theatres, is now talking of erecting a new house during the coming spring. It is said that the theatre will be located midway between the Lincoln and the Star. Abe Stone, who owns the Arbor Hill in Albany, has decided not to erect a new theatre, following the announcement that Harry Hellman would build a new house near Northern Boulevard.

Jake Rosenthal will run what he terms a "carnival week" at his theatre in Troy, beginning February 21, at which time he will give a combined program of vaudeville and pictures, with an increased admission. Mr. Rosenthal is back from a trip to New York City, stopping over to witness one of the fights at Madison Square Garden.

Both Fox and Universal had cameramen in Albany last week, busily engaged in taking pictures of the ice carnival.

Leon Herman, of the Universal sales force in Albany, made a trip to New York City during which he interviewed George Trilling, Arthur Whyte and Walter Hayes, concerning bookings, and then made his way to Madison Square Garden, where he occupied a ringside seat.

Several theatres in Central New York are shortening their weeks. The Colonial, in Norwich, is now running vaudeville but one day a week, while the Palace in Oneonta, is operating only three days a week. E. M. Holden, of Gilbertsville, has closed his theatre for an indefinite period. The Community Theatre in Newcomb is now running every other week.

Julius Berinstein is back in Albany from a trip to New York City, while Louis Buettner, owner of theatres in Hudson Falls and Cohoes, left during the week with Mrs. Buettner, on a six weeks' trip to the Coast.

Jack Sichelman, assistant general sales manager for Fox, was in town during the week, in going over matters with Isadore Schmertz. Arthur Abeles, district manager for Warner Brothers, was also in Albany.

Bill Benton, of Saratoga Springs, will add another theatre to his chain next month when he takes over a house in Plattsburg that has been run for several months by the widow of Jack Matthews.

Jake Elias, of the Cornhill, in Utica, has his two sons come home each week-end from Syracuse University and help him run his theatre.

Bob Wagner, one-time manager of the Rialto, in Little Falls, and who is now running a roadhouse near Rome, has been very ill and lost about eighty pounds in weight.

Frank McCarthy, who looks after affairs in Buffalo and vicinity for First National, was in Albany during the week, and in company with John Bulwinkel, spent a day in Gloversville with the Schine Brothers.

Mrs. Alec Herman, wife of the manager for Pro.-Dis.-Co., in Albany, is back from a trip to New York City.

That Alec Weismann, now of Buffalo, and former manager of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Exchange in Albany, has not forgotten his friends here, is evident from the many postcards that arrive along Film Row and bear Mr. Weismann's name.

The small son of James Rose, owner of theatres in Troy, has been ill. The daughter of Charles Gerry, of the Empire, in Port Henry, is recovering from an attack of measles.

Sol Manheimer has closed the Olympic in Watertown for an indefinite period, during which a new organ will be installed and the house will be completely redecorated. The theatre was recently acquired by the Schine Brothers.

Seattle

FRED QUIMBY, several years ago manager of the Pathe branch in this city, arrived in town last week for a brief visit with Manager George Ballantine of the Fox branch, in his capacity of short subject manager for Fox. During his stay here he announced that he had just submitted his resignation from that office to the Fox company, but announced no plans for the immediate future. He left for the East coast after his visit to the local exchange.

Virgil Goertz, owner of the motion picture theatre at Moclips, Wash., spent a few days here last week. It is reported that he will soon enter the exhibition field at Pacific Beach, a short distance from his present house at Moclips.

Felix Feist, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was a visitor at Manager Ben Fish's local exchange last week. Mr. Feist was accompanied by A. F. Cummings, assistant sales manager, and Dave Bershon, Western district manager, who has been conducting the Eastern visitors on a tour of the Pacific Coast territory.

Knowles Blair, local exploitation, publicity and advertising specialist, last week joined the staff of the Pacific Northwest Theatres' advertising department, "pinch hitting" for Mitch Sutherland as advertising manager of the Fifth Avenue Theatre. Sutherland has been spending the last few weeks in Tacoma at the new Broadway Theatre, and his work has been very capably handled by Mr. Blair.

Howard Fleishman, owner and manager of the Home Theatre in Portland, drove up to Film Row last week in his new Oldsmobile Six.

Howard J. Sheehan, West Coast district manager for Fox, left last week for his headquarters in San Francisco, after a visit of a few days with Manager George Ballantine. No further reports relative to the rumored new Fox house were made public during Mr. Sheehan's stay here.

J. A. Gage, manager of the Educational exchange, is once again feeling his former self, after a few weeks of indisposition resulting from a cold and a case of grippe. Last week he welcomed his wandering salesman, B. Wallace Rucker, back from an extended sales trip into Montana.

Tickets to the Tacoma Theatrical Frolic arrived here last week and indicate a great party—lasting from 3 p.m. to 3 a.m. Entertainment, music and dancing are promised those who attend. The affair will be held at the Greenwich Coliseum, on February 22.

Robert W. Bender, manager of the Columbia Theatre in this city, was out of town for a few days last week on a trip to the Clemmer Theatre in Spokane, in the interests of the Universal company. He was expected back in Seattle on February 1.

Al Rosenberg, head of the De-Luxe Feature Film Exchange, has been receiving the congratulations of film and theatre men on the announcement of the promotion of his brother Jack, a former Seattleite, to the post of publicity and exploitation director of Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles.

Chicago

MANAGER FELIX MENDELSOHN of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, is back at his desk after an enjoyable vacation trip to Bermuda. Sam Berger, who has been in charge in the absence of Mr. Mendelsohn, has gone back to his New York headquarters.

Manager H. C. Young of the National Screen Company has again increased the number of bookers in his office in order to handle the growing business.

Roy McMullen, one of the veterans of the Ascher organization, will be in charge at the big new Sheridan Theatre when it throws its doors open to the public on February 12th.

Felix Fiest was a Chicago visitor this week.

Milt Krueger, popular Warner Brothers salesman, is in the Presbyterian Hospital and his physicians expect to keep him there for three weeks. Mr. Krueger has not been feeling well for some time.

Clayton Bond, recently appointed district manager for Warner Brothers, is spending some time in New York previous to assuming his new duties. Mr. Bond resigned from Balaban & Katz Midwest Theatres, Inc., in order to take his present position, which brings him back to the selling end of the business.

Two winners in this photo! One is "Joe" Merrick, Los Angeles exchange manager for Educational and first to win the coveted E. W. Hammons cup, and the other Estelle Bradley, who plays leads in Mermaid Comedies

A. Gonsior of the Virginia Theatre, Champaign, Ill., was a visitor on Film Row last week.

Aaron Schaak of Newell, Retchin & Schaak has returned from California, where he has been vacationing for several weeks.

Nate Wolf of the Biltmore, Vision and Newberry theatres is spending a fortnight at Hot Springs, Ark. He is accompanied by his family.

Roy Alexander is back at his headquarters at the Universal exchange, after attending the Laemmle anniversary celebration in Los Angeles and enjoying a sight-seeing trip throughout the West.

Miss E. E. Rosecan, who has been representing Pathe in Europe for the past two years, is in Chicago visiting her family and has many interesting stories to tell of film conditions abroad. It will be remembered that Miss Rosecan was instrumental in exposing a ring of film pirates who were operating abroad with American pictures. Miss Rosecan, after vacationing here for a few days, expects to go on to California for a brief visit.

C. C. Jones, former owner and operator of motion picture theatres at Johnson City and Cambria, Ill., is dead. The funeral was held on February 2nd in Johnson City.

Lubliner & Trinz are planning to open their 2,200-seat Belpark Theatre on February 26th. It is understood that a straight picture policy with an admission price of 35 cents will be in effect during the week, with five acts of vaudeville and pictures on Saturday and Sunday at 50 cents admission.

San Francisco

MRS. MAE DOUGLAS, of the local Pathe telephone exchange department, was painfully injured recently when she was struck by an auto. Her escort received a broken arm and dislocated shoulder by the same machine. Mrs. Douglas will be absent from her desk altogether one month.

Nat Holt, popular manager and one of the owners of the Wigwam Theatre, one of the Coast's largest theatres, has announced that he and his partners have taken over the State Theatre in Oakland. Holt's partners persuaded him to also manage this as he made such a remarkable success of the Wigwam Theatre, which was going down before he started to manage it. Previous to taking over the Wigwam, Nat Holt managed the Granada and other houses.

Florida

THE big South Florida Fair is the stellar attraction in Tampa this week and next. The weather is ideal and the attendance this, the first week, has been in excess of 25 per cent greater than any former year. The horse races and the dog races are "dark."

The West Tampa Boys' Club, under the direction of Ralph S. Bowron, is putting on a weekly show now. Two or three reels of comedies and educational subjects are shown in connection with lectures. The boys like the shows and the attendance is running pretty close to the 100 per cent mark.

Charlie Sappal, president of the Macco Amusement Company, has again demonstrated the fact that he has a great big heart and his purse is always open to assist his brother professionals. Charlie heard of the awful automobile accident last Friday night in which Johnny Barton, manager of the Jacksonville branch of the Universal Film Company, was killed, while Simpson, the State representative of the same company, and Barnes of the Liberty were badly shaken up. He went at once to the hotel and arranged to take Simpson back to Jacksonville. Then he went to the undertakers, paid all bills and had the body of Barton shipped to Jacksonville, he accompanying it.

Fred Richards, stage manager of the Victory, Tampa, was painfully injured from a fall from a stepladder while at work in the theatre. He suffered a sprained ankle and a deep cut on the head. After treatment at the hospital he was removed to his home and is doing nicely.

The Broadway, a colored house in Ocala, which has been closed for some time, is to be re-opened this week under the management of A. L. Timpas.

N. B. Blounds, a former film salesman, who is now operating the Majestic at Fort Meade, was a Tampa visitor last Sunday. Mr. Blounds has made quite a success of his house and is planning to make enlargements during the summer months.

S. W. Shuttleworth, a Tampan, was formerly in the government service as gunnery sergeant in the marines, and has the distinction of being the one who taught Lon Chaney and William Haines, the players of the leading roles in the motion picture, "Tell It to the Marines." Mr. Shuttleworth says that Chaney and Haines spent three weeks at the naval base at San Diego, living with the "devil dogs" and receiving training. Mr. Shuttleworth lately returned to Tampa and is in business there.

Milwaukee

FRANK WELTER, manager of the Grand and Bijou theatres at Wausau, was in the city for a few days this week. He announced at this time, his intention of building a new theatre in Wausau, construction of which will be started about April 15th.

BOSTON distributors have notified exhibitors served from that territory that on and after February 5th, delivery of films will only be made by carriers and truckmen who furnish proper credentials that they are financially responsible and that films in their possession are fully protected. The list includes the Parcels Post, American Railway Express and Film Exchange Transfer Co. as general distributors. If exhibitors specify special local truckmen who do not qualify under the description, exhibitors themselves will be held responsible for the film while in possession of these carriers who are acting as agents of the exhibitors. In the latter case the exhibitors must notify the distributors in writing. Action is taken at this time because of recent losses of films in transit by carriers from whom no redress has been obtainable.

Arrangements have been completed for the second annual Bookers Ball, to be held by the Movie Bookers of New England at the State Theatre ball room, Boston, February 25. The entertainment committee has secured many of the leading vaudeville acts which will be in Boston theatres at that time for a part of the entertainment program. At the ball a year ago sufficient funds were raised to maintain one of their members who has been ill for more than a year in a hospital and there is a small balance in the treasury. Proceeds of the forthcoming ball will be used for similar philanthropic purposes.

Mrs. Emma V. Corbett, booker at Warner Brothers, is chairman of the association; Miss Carolyn C. Jones, booker at First National, is treasurer and Miss Florence J. Scully, booker at Educational, is secretary. Committees are: dance, Miss Edna Crovo of American Feature Films and Philip Fox of Independent Films, Inc.; entertainment, Timothy O'Toole of Independent, Harry Smith of Producers and Miss N. F. McLaughlin of American Motion Pictures.

The Rialto Theatre, Providence, one of the Fay theatres, will become a second run house starting next week. It is the first of the larger Providence theatres to become a second run house.

Means, Jr., owner of the Phoenix Opera House at Machias, Me., recently destroyed by fire, is having plans prepared for a new theatre but he will not erect it on the site of the Opera House but will build at Main Street, nearer the business center of the city, in the rear of the Jasper, Farris and Geary stores with entrance from Main Street.

Work will commence next month on a new theatre in Duxbury, Mass., for J. Rudman, of 16 Queensbury Street, South Boston, Mass. Plans have been drawn by Krokyn, Brown & Rosenstein, of Boston.

Extensive alterations are to be made on the Garden Theatre, Springfield, Mass., which has just been taken over by Louis Cohn and Harry Cohen. After alterations, the theatre will run continuous performances daily from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. The new owners also operate the Jefferson, Strand and Phillips theatres in Springfield.

Minneapolis

THE quick work of Miss Louise Means, organist at the Sherman Theatre, St. Cloud, Minn., prevented a panic when a fire broke out in that theatre last week.

Students from St. Benedict's and St. John's Colleges had packed the house for the afternoon performance when flames broke from the projection room. The crowd rushed for the exits and in a moment the aisles were jammed.

Miss Means began to play a march on the organ and order was quickly restored and the audience filed quietly out. The organist continued to play until everyone had left the house. The fire was confined to the projection room and firemen were able to extinguish the blaze before serious damage was done.

The new $50,000 State Theatre in Jackson, Minn., was recently opened by Joe Matuska.

Detroit

SATURDAY, January 29th, 1927, was certainly a red-letter day in the history of the moving picture business in Detroit, in that it marked the official opening of the New Film Exchange Building which has recently been completed by Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Stebbins at a total cost of around $1,500,000.00, including the site that the building occupies.

Invitations were received in good season for the inaugural party that was given by the Detroit Film Board of Trade in collaboration with Mr. and Mrs. Stebbins with the result that about 1,200 of the exhibitors and exchange people in this section attended, besides several distinguished visitors from in and out of town.

On arrival at the grand entrance to the building the guests were greeted by two of the film boys who caused everyone to wonder whether they had been chosen for their size or their good looks, perhaps it was for both reasons, as they certainly made a very favorable impression as they extended the hand of welcome in the name of the industry.

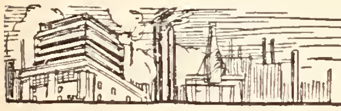
Stepping into one of the blue and gold elevators which are operated by charming young ladies whose uniforms carry out the same motif, the guests were wafted to the seventh floor where the party was in full swing by 9:00 P.M., to music furnished by Jean Goldkette's "Kentucky Colonels" by arrangement with G. Carroll Johnson and Bob Sheehan and the folks were certainly having a good time.

At intervals between the dancing, entertainment was furnished by performers from Art. Rowland's Revue, the National Amusement Company and radio station WJR, and they certainly met with a wonderful reception, the festivities being broadcast to the world by remote control and microphones placed in advantageous positions, and long before the party was officially over WJR moved their entire staff up to this temporary studio and the broadcasting was continued on through the night by the "Merry Old Chief" (Leo Fitzpatrick) and his jesters, including such radio stars as Al. Cameron, Bill Collins, Kathleen Johnston, etc., with "Bernice" at the piano as usual.

Congratulatory telegrams were read over the radio from Laura La Plante, Hoot Gibson, Dustin Farnum, Claire Windsor, The Collegians, John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, Greta Nissen, Colleen Moore, Harry Langdon, Milton Sills, Richard Barthelmess, Marie Prevost, Rin Tin Tin, Dolores Costello, Richard Dix, Leatrice Joy, Ed. Wynn, Johnny Hines and many, many others, with every announcement carrying the information that the program was coming from the WJR studio in the New Exchange Building.

An official inspection of the building from top to bottom was timed for 7:30 P.M., by visiting and resident notables, including several of the home office executives of the various companies who have offices in the new building; among the guests of honor being the following: Governor Fred Green, Mayor John W. Smith, Judge Murphy, Judge Richter, Police Commissioner Rutledge, Universal Sales Director Earl W. Kramer, Charles Steel of First National Pictures, Roy Seery also of First National, Bob Cotton of Produers Distributing Corporation, Claud Penrod of Film Booking Offices.

The whole party was voted a tremendous success by all present and congratulations are in order to Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Stebbins, owners of the building, and Mr. David Palfreyman, secretary of the Detroit Film Board of Trade, and all who collaborated.



St. Louis

ARTICLES of incorporation have been issued to the Jefferson Amusement Company in St. Louis. It has $10,000 capital half paid up. The incorporators are: G. Pliakos, 30 shares; F. Spiros, 19 shares, and B. E. Hamilton, 1 share.

S. G. Hoffman has re-opened the Delmonte Theatre, 5630 Delmar Boulevard, St. Louis, as a subsequent run house. The program will change four times weekly. The seating capacity has been cut from 2,800 to 1,600 seats.

Film salesmen working out of St. Louis were greatly handicapped the past week by flooded roads in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois. Train service in the territory is not very dependable.

.It is reported Dominic Fresana is considering the erection of a 750-seat house at Vandalia, Ill., to cost about $100,000.

Mr. and Mrs. I. W. Rodgers of Poplar Bluff and Cairo, Ill., are now in Cuba.

Funeral services for C. C. Jones, well-known Southern Illinois exhibitor, were held in Johnston City, Ill., on February 2d. He formerly operated houses in Johnston City and Cambria, Ill.

The Monarch Theatre, Farmington, Mo., and Stout's Opera House. Danville, Ky., were destroyed by recent fires.

Houses that are reported to be dark at prsent include the Star, Clinton, Ky.; Palace, Flat Rock, Ill.; Hippodrome, Elsberry, Mo.; Grand, Eldorado, Ill.; Wardell, Wardell, Mo.; Yale, St. Louis, Mo.; Star, Mokane, Mo.; Rodelia, Bland, Mo.; Majestic, Paragould, Ark., and Twilight, Holcomb, Mo.

The Princess Theatre, Black Rock, Ark., has been sold by Mrs. D. Reeves to Smith Brothers.

Out-of-town visitors of the week included: Jimmy Clayton, West Frankfort, Ill.; Joe Alcott, Crystal City, Mo.; Fred Schmidt, Pocahonta, Ill.; Paul Musser, Casey, Ill.; Hurley B. Gould, Lawrenceville, Ill.; Henry Lowry, Highland, Ill., and Peyton Campbell, Downing, Mo.

Prominent home office officials of Producers' Distributing Corporation will hold a joint convention of the sales organizations of the St. Louis and Dallas districts which will be held in St. Louis on February 14th and 15th.

Ralph Morrow, district manager for Dallas, Tex., has charge of Dallas, New Orleans and Oklahoma City branches, while C. D. Hill, head of the St. Louis district, includes the St. Louis, Kansas City, Omaha and Des Moines branches in his territory.

Lee Marcus, general sales manager for F.B.O., was in St. Louis on January 31st and February 1st. C. E. Penrod, division manager, also came over from Indianapolis, Ind., on February 1st. Mr. Marcus is very enthusiastic about the outlook for 1927. He sees it as F.B.O.'s greatest year.

Another visitor of the week was Joe Kern of Columbia Pictures.

Sam Werner, manager of United Film Service, announces that Jerome C. Woolf has joined his sales staff and will travel Eastern Missouri. Woolf formerly was with Warner Brothers. His place there has been filled by G. I. Bradford, who came over from United Artists.

Buffalo

HAROLD RAMSAY, organist at Shea's Buffalo, appeared as guest organist at the North Park last week with much success. He will go to the Kensington soon for a week.

Herbert Straub and the Shea Buffalo Symphony Orchestra and Nicola, the vaudeville headliner at Shea's Hippodrome, entertained the Nobles of Ismailia Temple at their Friday luncheon in the Hotel Statler. The event was well advertised in The Shrine Smile.

C. L. Bird, of the National Theatre Supply Company, of Buffalo, demonstrated a motion picture machine before the part-time school in North Tonawanda the other morning. Such machines are being used for educational purposes in a number of schools, colleges and universities. Several pictures were shown during the demonstration.

The presentation of the Auditorium Orthophonic Victrola at Shea's Buffalo last week brought that theatre much publicity on the part of the Victor dealers, who inserted three full-page ads in addition to many smaller displays placed throughout the week. A private demonstration for Mayor Schwab and officials was put on.

Harry Jenner, of the Fisher and Seneca theatres in Seneca Falls, was seriously injured the other day when his motor car collided with a telegraph pole and overturned. His wife and daughter, riding with him, also were hurt.

Buffalo's next theatre opening will be that of the new North Main Theatre, which has been leased by the Schine Theatrical Corporation. Elmer C. Winegar is expected to be the manager. The house will open in a few days.

Syd Samson, of Bond Photoplays Corporation, doesn't get a bit thinner these days, in spite of the way he is hustling to get his product "set" in the territory.

Reports have it that plans are being revived for another community theatre on Hertel Avenue. The project came up several years ago, but died a natural death. It is reported that an architect now is at work again.

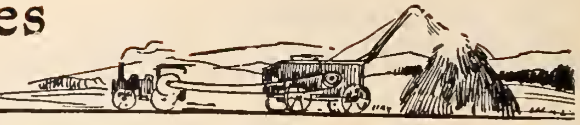
Des Moines



THE second annual Film Board of Trade get-together and banquet which was held at the Fort Des Moines Hotel following the convention of the M.P.T.O.A. of Iowa, on the last day of January was a grand success. About one hundred and fifty were present from all over the State for the event, a more largely representative group than have ever been gotten together before. In the afternoon a meeting of bookers and salesmen was held at which problems of the industry were discussed. Also, general congratulations were issued for the clean record made during the past year. Practically everyone received compliments for the clean work done. At the banquet, in the evening, W. E. Banford, manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was the toastmaster. Each member of the arbitration board made a speech in which they forecast peace and prosperity for the coming year. W. H. Eddy, of Indianola. B. I. Van Dyke of the Royal Theatre, Des Moines. Harry Vickers, of the Star Theatre, Des Moines, and Harry Hersteiner of the Family, Des Moines, are members of the board. Mr. Tilton, of First National, was also one who made a good talk and Mrs. Mary Benjamin, secretary and treasurer of the Film Board, was called upon for some words of welcome. E. P. Smith, business manager for the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa, spoke for the exhibitors in general. Among the film men present from out of town were Jimmy Ambrose, of United Artists headquarters at Omaha; Bob Gary, Universal publicity man, from St. Louis; A. R. Cramer, of the Princess at Mt. Ayr; George Hake, of the Lyric at Belmond; Charley Brown, of the Strand at Iowa City; W. J. Mansfield of Tama; W. F. Smith, of Clarion; W. C. Treloar of Ogden; G. A. Rhodes, of Story City; Mr. Screck and Mr. Lacey, who are associated in the theatre at New Market; L. C. West, of the Colonial Theatre at Grinnell; F. W. Curtis, of the Peoples Theatre at Redfield, and Mr. and Mrs. Shuneman, of the Isis at Webster City.

A feature of the entertainment at the banquet in the evening was the stereopticon slides of different exhibitors and film men, each of which was given a title which was most appropriate. Carl Reese, salesman, was titled, "The Nervous Wreck," while a slide of George Nalor of Universal, at ease in his chair, was captioned, "This Is Not A Motion Picture." A rise was gotten out of Park Agnew, genial host and booker for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, when a picture was shown of his apartment. Harry Hersteiner was represented as "Against What Anyone Else Is For." Dutch Smith and his entertainers concluded the evening's entertainment, which was planned by Les Phillips, manager of Producers Distributors.

At the meeting of the M.P.T.O. A. all angles of the State organization were discussed, including finance and arbitration.

Omar Kenyon has established offices at the headquarters of the M.P.T.O.A. for the Omar Kenyon Booking Office and will share the offices at 214 Iowa Building. Mr. Kenyon has been doing booking of musical and vaudeville acts.

A. H. Blank is now in New Orleans for the opening of the Saenger Theatre there, after which he will go to New York on First National business. Mr. Blank will be back for the opening of his new house at Omaha, the Riviera, on March 12.

Charles H. Gurney has bought the theatre at Estherville which is called the Grand and which was previously operated by Walford & Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Shuneman, who own the Isis Theatre at Webster City, which burned out completely not long ago, announce that they are to rebuild the Isis. They will build again on the site of the old theatre and expect that the building will be complete within three months.

C. E. Carragher, of the Park Theatre at Clear Lake, stopped at the office of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer while in Des Moines, en route for California, where he will spend several months.

The Palace Theatre at Sioux City, one of the houses owned by Alexander Frank, burned down last Sunday morning. The fire started in the theatre and while no film was burned the house suffered a large loss in damage. The theatre is managed by Homer Gill for the Frank Association.

Robert Wynne, checker for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer on percentage engagements, is ill at Broadlawns Hospital with smallpox.

H. A. Kauffman, manager of the Pathe Exchange, attended the sales meeting in Chicago.

The Des Moines Theatre, Des Moines, one of the Blank chain, was recently equipped with two new Simplex machines with Peerless lamps. The theatre is under the management of Herb Grove.

Among other equipment recently sold by the Des Moines office of the National Theatre Supply Company were three machines sold to A. H. Blank's new theatre at Omaha, the Riviera lobby frames for the new theatre to be opened up in a few months at Newton, the Capitol, which is under the Blank management. A double dissolver was also purchased for the Capitol and a Kliegl spotlight.

Bab Pence, inspector for Pathe, has left the employ of that office. She plans to travel on the road with her husband.

Six sidewall light fixtures have recently been added to the equipment of the Garden Theatre at Sigourney operated by Mr. Simpson.

Len Thompson is now operating the Majestic Theatre at Des Moines, which has run a combination of pictures and vaudeville. The theatre is one of the houses owned by A. H. Blank in Des Moines and is leased to Mr. Thompson.

Harris P. Wolsberg, the new district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, visited the Des Moines office with J. E. Flynn, retiring from that office to go to Detroit, and E. M. Saunders, Western sales manager. Mr. Wolsberg comes from Cleveland.

Jake Cohen, recent bridegroom and exhibitor at Ottumwa, Iowa, was a privileged guest at a special showing of a First National feature film.

Les Phillips, manager for Producers Distributors, was in Mason City on film business last week.

New equipment was bought by John Elman of the Amuzu Theatre. He bought a rebuilt Powers head.

N. C. Rice bought an eight-reel film cabinet for his house at Algona, Iowa.

Other equipment recently bought from the National Theatre Supply Company were the two Simplex Mazda units complete, which were purchased by Mr. Dutton for the Plaza Theatre at Manchester. Also two Cinophar lenses purchased by Dehoet and Sons for the Monroe Theatre at Monroe. This theatre was recently taken back again by Dehoet and Sons.

Something new in Iowa territory is the poster exchange, which is operated by Ted Yarowsky at the offices of Tiffany Productions at Eleventh and High. This department has previously been in operation in Omaha, but this is the first office to serve Iowa territory from the Des Moines center.

J. R. Collins, of Muscatine, has bought a half interest in the theatre at Columbus Junction, owned by Ludi Bosten. The theatre is the Lyric. Mr. Collins will take the management of the house.

J. W. Alstott, who operates the Lyric Theatre at Fort Dodge, bought a part interest in the Plaza Theatre at Fort Dodge from F. F. Weiss. Mrs. Georgia Glen also has an interest in the Plaza.

The Miller Opera House at Farmington opened for business recently.

The Onawa Theatre at Onawa, which was recently damaged by fire will be remodelled the management announced. The theatre is now showing in temporary quarters.

The American Legion Theatre at Portsmouth recently opened.

Cincinnati

ACCORDING to what appears to be authentic information, a new theatre is in prospect at Lima, O., which, it is said, will be one of the most modern in this section of the country, especially for a city of this size. The matter is being negotiated by an eastern syndicate of which G. O. Dupius is the representative. The project now hinges on ability of the syndicate to secure the lot it desires, which is owned by L. E. Stamitz, who has intimated his desire to sell provided satisfactory terms can be reached.

Among the recent houses to open is the Holgate Theatre, at Holgate, Ohio, of which Bert Deisler is manager.

R. V. Frk manager of the Piqua Opera House, one of the Piqua Amusement Company chain, entertained the newsboys of the Dayton (Ohio) Daily News at a special matinee, showing ten special reels for the occasion. Erk had no ulterior motive, the affair merely being given out of the goodness of his heart.

Harry Goldstein, Boston, Mass., has been appointed special representative of the Tiffany Co., at Cincinnati, where he will assist the local manager. Goldstein was previously connected with the Franklin Films Co.

Two doors of the Strand Theatre at Dayton, O., were "jimmied" recently, but the would-be burglars were either frightened away or gave up the job in disgust before completing it. The doors, which lead into an alley, were only partially open when the attempted burglary was discovered next morning.

The Palace Theatre, Hamilton, O., which recently celebrated its seventh birthday, was presented with a 150-pound birthday cake by the house employees. The management, in turn, donated the cake to the local Children's Home.

William Orth, Dayton, O., is contemplating the erection of a picture house in that city, as soon as a suitable site can be selected.

New York and New Jersey

EAST is West, and as in this case, North is South, when it comes to employing certain highly successful methods of theatre management, according to E. W. Gould, for the past seven years manager of the Morningside Theatre, Eighth Avenue and 116th Street, New York City.

Mr. Gould came to New York from below the Mason and Dixon Line, where he owned four theatres in Cartersville and Newnan, Ga., prior to the War of 1914. Subsequently he became manager of the Trenton Theatre, Lynchburg, Va., and then joined the Consolidated Circuit, which operates a large number of theatres in Greater New York, including the Morningside.

The same methods he employed in the operation of his Southern houses have proved highly successful in the big city of New York. A straight picture policy and good music, combined with making the Morningside a community institution in its neighborhood, is Mr. Gould's way of making the ticket register sing that much desired and popular refrain, "To the Bank."

One of the things which Mr. Gould ever watches with care is the arrival of prospective patrons in the neighborhood of his theatre. Shortly after a new family moves into his section of the city, Gould sends a personal letter with a pass and invitation to visit the Morningside. This plan invariably results in gaining permanent patrons for the house.

During the summer months, the shows are transferred to the theatre roof, which has 700 seats.

The office employees and factory of the International Projector Corporation recently held their annual bowling tournament at the Broadway Bowling Alleys, Brooklyn, with rather disastrous results for the shop teams. But although the office teams won without much difficulty, the individual scorer was G. Howard of the shop with 212. Low prize went to A. Denaro, also of the shop team. Denaro's was 90. After the tournament dinner was served to all and plans made to continue the contests.

E. W. Gould, manager of the Morningside Theatre, New York City

Lots and lots of talk about this and that local circuit merging their interests, and just talk seems to be all that it really amounts to, with the exception of the possibility of an eventual confirmation of a story appearing in an issue of this publication a few weeks ago, affecting the circuits of Mayer and Schneider, Steiner and Blinderman and a rumor that B. S. Moss was also interested in the deal. Since that time it has been said that the Moss circuit has not been negotiating a merger with any other concern. There remains a possibility, however, that the two other circuits named may combine some time in the near future.

On February 15th the Consolidated Amusement Company, circuit theatre operators of New York City, expect to move their headquarters to the Bond Building, 1560 Broadway.

Another theatre firm, reported to be on their way to the Bond Building, is the Grobe and Nobel circuit. They are said to be due at 1560 the early part of March.

Harry Harris, of uptown New York theatre fame, is again branching out, having negotiated deals whereby he will secure possession of two more theatres. About March 1st he will take possession of a 1,700-seat house at 176th Street and Broadway, recently opened by Messrs, Landau, Buck and Miller. Then Mr. Harris made a long jump to the extreme downtown end of Manhattan Island, where, it is said, he has taken over the lease of the South Ferry Theatre, originally projected by Clarence Cohen. Harry expects to have this house ready about April 1st.

A. H. Schwartz's new theatre structure at College Point, L.I., is progressing nicely and the contractors expect to have it ready for an early spring opening. This house will seat about 2,500.

The new theatre under construction at Tenafly, N.J., will be called the Bergen. This house is being built by Messrs, Schoenbuck and associates and is scheduled for opening on the 28th of February.

Frank Becker, who built the Plaza Theatre, Englewood, N.J., has a new house under way at Fort Lee, which will be known as The Community House.

Rachmiel and Rinzler's new Buffalo Avenue theatre will probably open considerably ahead of time, owing to the unusually rapid progress of construction under the supervision of Louis Frisch. Frisch was also in charge of the R. & R. Ambassador, also in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn.

Joe Hornstein, Eastern district manager of the National Supply Company, manages to keep on the go these days with the ever-increasing list of new theatres and change-overs of equipment in the older houses.

Last week Joe went to Boston with H. A. R. Dutton, president of the National Theatre Supply Co., and this week they will leave for the Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore territory.

Local theatres recently equipped by National Supply include Loew's new Corona Theatre, Proctor's Schenectady Theatre, Harry Suchman's Blenheim, Schoenbuck's Bergen Theatre and the Freeport, L.I., theatre.

Samuel Eckman, Jr., recently appointed New York district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Mr. Eckman is again on duty after a severe attack of pneumonia

Kansas City

FOUR more theatres have been added to the circuit of Capitol Enterprises, with headquarters in Kansas City. The new houses are the Gillham and Lincoln theatres in Kansas City and the Josephson Circuit theatres in Lexington, Mo., and Mexico, Mo.

The Rialto Theatres Corporation has acquired two more Kansas City theatres and, according to C. R. Gregg, secretary, will obtain others in the next few weeks. The Roanoke and Alamo theatres, suburban houses, were obtained this week, the Roanoke formerly being operated by L. J. Lenhart and the Alamo by E. E. Webber. K. S. Duncan is president of the Rialto concern.

An "all movie row dance" now is the hub of conversation along Kansas City's Row. No definite plans have been worked out yet, but there is a strong undercurrent of feeling that such an event would be the most logical method of celebrating what promises to be a prosperous spring season in Kansas City territory.

The Blake Theatre, Webb City, Mo., following improvements costing $20,000, was given a wide heralding last week upon its reopening. The seating capacity has been increased to 1,000, while the best grade of leather upholstered chairs have been installed and a new floor with a gradual incline has replaced what formerly was a steep grade.

Seventy-five members of the William R. Nelson Post of the American Legion were guests last Friday night of the Garden Theatre management in Kansas City.

Among the out-of-town exhibitors in the Kansas City market this week were: G. L. Hooper, Orpheum, Topeka, Kas.; W. Wallace, Orpheum, Leavenworth, Kas.; S. E. Wilhoit, Electric, Springfield, Mo., C. M. Pattee, Pattee Theatre, Lawrence, Kas.; Glenn Dickinson, Dickinson Circuit, Lawrence, Kas.

Harris P. Wolfburg, formerly of Kansas City, but late of Cleveland, who has been appointed Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer district manager in the Kansas City district, succeeding J. E. Flynn, who has been assigned to the Detroit-Cleveland - Cincinnati territory, spent a busy week in Kansas City this week lining up his new work.

The M.-G.-M. Club, composed of employees of the Kansas City Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer branch, "threw" a real party at the Hotel President, Kansas City, last week.

Russell Borg, booker at the Educational branch, is the latest addition to the "happy father" ranks. It was a seven-pound baby boy.

Harry White, Midwest Distributors, Inc., representative, is back on the job again after having undergone an operation.

John Graham has been added to the sales force of the Warner Bros. branch, covering Northern Kansas.

A bridge party was given for women of the First National Exchange Saturday night by Miss Ruth Brewer, of First National, at the latter's home.

C. A. Jones, Educational branch manager, is out in the territory looking for more contracts.

The new Tiffany Exchange is almost ready for its formal opening, being located at 113 West Eighteenth Street. W. P. Bernfield, a veteran of many years, is the branch manager.

All that can be said of W. C. Haynes of Universal and W. G. Bishop of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchanges is that they are growing mustaches for no apparent reason.

Cleveland

THE Lincoln Theatre, located on Madison Avenue and operated by Messrs. Burton and Crockett, has the distinction of being the first Cleveland neighborhood house to sign up for Vitaphone. The installation will be completed by the middle of March. Cleveland's West Side congratulates the Lincoln Theatre for being the first in the field to offer its patrons the newest type of entertainment.

Jack O'Connell is the new manager of the Temple Theatre, Toledo. He resigned from the local Warner Brothers' sales force last week and immediately assumed the managerial mantle. Billy Exton, the former manager, is now with the Smith Amusement Company, which operates a chain of houses in Alliance, Warren and West Virginia.

George Schade of Schade's Theatre, Sandusky, hurt his foot while in Cleveland last week. He hurt it so badly that he was unable to go home for several days. He's not stepping out much even yet.

It's neck and neck with Fred Scheurman and R. O. Flemm of the local Warner Brothers' personnel in the division contest for dates. They're both in first place and now Nat Barach, division manager, is worried. If they end in a tie, the Gladstone bag, which is the first prize, will have to be twins.

Eva Katz, secretary to H. R. Skirboll of the Ohio Educational exchange, has been ill for the past six weeks with pneumonia. She's trying to hurry the convalescence because she has a date to marry Morrey Kohl just as soon as she's well.

John Sebek is a new recruit in the exhibition field. He has just leased a new motion picture theatre in the course of construction at East 131st Street and Metzer Avenue. It's to be completed in about sixty days and will have around a thousand seats. The Sokol Lodge is putting up the building. Mr. Sebek has never been in the picture business before.

Skirboll Brothers, Bill and Harry, respectively, have taken over the Strand Theatre at New Philadelphia. It's a 499-seat house and is now in process of rehabilitation. New equipment is being installed, including two new Superior projection machines, new frames, electric signs and entirely new interior decorations. The Skirbolls also own the Opera House at New Philadelphia, and are enlarging their policy at that theatre. Heretofore the Opera House has confined its programs to pictures. Starting the first of the year, occasional road shows will also be presented. This is an unusual policy as compared to other similar houses in towns of the size of New Philadelphia.

A fire in the Sun Theatre, Buckeye Road and East 88th Street, last Wednesday night drove three hundred people from the building. It originated in the projection booth when a film caught on fire. Meyer Goldstein, 32, of 794 East 125th Street, motion picture operator, was burned about the hands and face trying to break off the film. He was taken to St. Luke's Hospital, where his burns were treated. The flames were out when firemen arrived. Damage is estimated at $1,000. Sam Deutch operates the Sun Theatre.

W. H. Simmons, exploitation manager in these parts for P.D.C., is enjoying the distinction of being borrowed for various other territories. He has just completed a term of weeks in and around Pittsburgh and is now headed for Indiana.

Robert Burns, of Cincinnati, who is a man and not a cigar, is hobbling around on crutches these days, the result of a railroad accident. The train he was traveling on caught on fire. He jumped off and now considers himself lucky that he escaped with nothing worse than a broken ankle. He has been laid up for a couple of weeks, but came down to the P.D.C. office the other day to receive his promotion from salesman to office manager and city salesman. Chester Loewe is exchange manager in Cincinnati. Simultaneously, Ed Riffle was promoted from shipper to booker, and Don (not Danny) Duff was boosted from poster clerk to shipper. And just to make the happy Cincinnati P.D.C. family complete, division manager Robert Cotton paid the outfit a visit.

Joe Ferte, the golden-voiced film salesman of the local P.D.C. exchange, who usually coaxes contracts out of Cleveland exhibitors, is now singing his way into the good graces of the film folks down Canton way.

L. W. Strong, formerly with J. S. Jossey and the Progress Pictures Company, is now office manager for Security Pictures. And Irene Reich, also a graduate of Progress Pictures, is one of the Security family as secretary to Lee Chapman and Fred Schramm.

Members of the Loew's Ohio Theatres organization are busy planning their annual February 22nd celebration. Following the custom of previous years, there will be a dance in the lobby of the State Theatre after the last performance on Washington's birthday.

Manager W. B. Urling has inaugurated a new policy at the Rex Theatre, Steubenville. Starting February 6th, the Rex will offer motion pictures and tabloid acts. The house formerly played a straight picture program.

J. J. Harwood, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, plans to be in New York this week to attend an administration board meeting of the M.P.T.O. of America.

Max Marcus, owner-manager of the U.S. Theatre, Cleveland, is again paying his weekly round of visits to the local exchanges, having fully recovered from his recent illness.

H. H. Harper, manager of the Gordon Theatre, Cleveland, has been confined to his home for the past six weeks. During his illness his sister, Miss Harper, is running the theatre.

Norman Moray, manager of the Cleveland Warner Brothers exchange, celebrated the opening of Vitaphone in this territory by buying a new Auburn sedan.

John F. Royal, manager of B. F. Keith's Palace Theatre, Cleveland, can now enjoy all the comforts of home while screening the new pictures. He has just completed a new private screen room, decorated in the latest drawing-room fashion, and equipped with everything that any screen room could possibly have. It's situated on the mezzanine floor and has been dignified with the name of Salon de Cinema.

Chic Taylor continues to be manager of the Shaw Hayden Theatre, East Cleveland. Taylor managed the house for almost four years for M. B. Horwitz. Recently Horwitz sold the house to Sulverman brothers and Taylor planned to take a rest. But the rest didn't materialize and he's still at the old stand handing out the same old brand of welcome to the Shaw Hayden patrons.

EVIDENCE of the intention of the Chamberlain Amusement Company, of Shamokin, and the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, both of which operate big chains of motion picture and vaudeville theatres, to begin soon the erection of the proposed $625,000 theatre which they plan jointly to build in Williamsport, Pa., was given on January 28 when representatives of both companies made a trip to the latter city.

The Chamberlain and Comerford interests about two years ago purchased the site of the old Hotel Sterling, in Williamsport, with the intention of ultimately building the theatre there, but building operations have not yet been started. L. J. Chamberlain and Frank Gillespie, of the Chamberlain company and J. A. Cadoret, representing the Comerfords, are the officials who have just visited Williamsport. It is understood that while there they were approached by a local real estate man with a proposition to buy the site. However, the theatre men rejected the offer with the statement that the property positively was not for sale and that the new theatre will be erected on the site. The officials were accompanied to Williamsport by an architect with blue prints, and took a number of measurements of the ruins of the hotel, which are located on West Fourth Street.

George A. Huff, owner of the property, has taken over the lease held by C. C. McKnight on the State Theatre, Lock Haven, and will operate the picture house himself in the future.

Mrs. C. Floyd Hopkins, wife of the director-in-chief of the ten Wilmer & Vincent theatres in Harrisburg and Reading, and Mrs. J. W. Rodenhaver, both of Harrisburg, have issued invitations for a bridge-luncheon to be held in the ballroom of the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg, on Wednesday, February 16. There will be about 140 guests.

The lease which Frank Machaver held on the Star Theatre, at McClure, has expired, and the owner of the property, J. W. Klinger, will hereafter operate the theatre personally.

A small fire occurred in the basement of the Blackstone Theatre, Harrisburg, on February 21, caused by an overheated elevator motor. A performance was going on and although smoke entered the auditorium the spectators did not become alarmed and there was no danger of panic.

Edward J. Melniker, new manager of Loew's Regent Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa.

Nathan Appell, head of the Appell Amusement Enterprises, which control practically all the theatres of York, was a member of the committee on arrangements for the thirty-third annual meeting of the Outdoor Advertising Association of Pennsylvania, held recently in Reading. Mr. Appell helped to provide one of the main features of the meeting which was the showing of motion pictures of outdoor life in Pennsylvania. The delegates while in Reading attended performances in the Rajah and the Orpheum theatres.

Leading officials of the Comerford Amusement Company, of Scranton, which operates a big chain of theatres in the United States and Canada, attended the opening of a new Comerford theatre, in Waverly, N.Y., just over the Pennsylvania state line, on January 17. Municipal officials of Waverly were among the guests of honor at the dedicatory exercises.

Denver

L. WEIR, district manager for Producers, left last Tuesday after a several days' visit with A. G. Edwards, local branch manager. While here Mr. Weir supervised the change in the management of the State Theatre.

Ole Nelson, former manager of the Curran Theatre, Boulder, Colo., has been named as manager of the D. & R. Theatres of Denver, according to an announcement made last week by Rick Ricketson, one of the owners of the D. & R. chain. This position was created by the D. & R. Company because of his excellent record as a theatre manager of other theatres of the D. & R. Circuit. The three Denver houses to be under the management of Mr. Nelson are the Queen, Egyptian, and Washington Park.

A. G. Edwards, local branch manager for Producers, has left for a long sales trip in the New Mexico district. He will visit all the principal New Mexico cities.

I. C. Butterbaugh, one of the owners of the Eads Theatre of Eads, Colo., was a Denver visitor last Thursday.

A complimentary pass for twenty-two different Denver theatres was issued to each State Senator and Representative last week. The passes bore the name of the Senator or Representative to whom it was presented, together with the signature of Joe Roth, Secretary of the Denver Theatre Managers' Association.

D. S. Mitchell, district manager for Universal, was a visitor at the last meeting of the Denver Film Board of Trade. Mr. Mitchell is former president of the Los Angeles Board of Trade and made an interesting talk to the members present.

Cyril Wood has purchased the Palace Theatre of Hatch, N.M. The theatre was formerly owned and operated by R. A. Parsons, who has now moved to El Paso, Tex.

Denver will soon have a Vitaphone, according to present plans of Harry Huffman, manager of the Aladdin Theatre. The Aladdin is Denver's newest and best at the present time and it is no surprise to Denver theatre-goers that it would be the theatre to first install this new marvel of the industry. Installation will start about the middle of February.

Public Dictates Course of Presentation

Prologue Type Popular but Success Depends on Artistic Qualities of the Photoplay

THAT advancement in the art as well as the form of motion picture presentation has been largely affected and moulded through public responsiveness and appreciation, is the opinion of Joseph Plunkett, a pioneer among the stagecraft artists who have devoted their talents to the development of motion picture entertainments in which stage effects are used in conjunction with the photoplay.

In his present capacity as managing director of the Mark Strand Theatre, Joseph Plunkett is presenting stage features of sufficient originality and magnitude to feature any Broadway revue. Almost every week Plunkett's efforts are revealed to the public as embracing magnificent color effects, an appropriate musical setting, costly and fitting costumes, surprisingly massive and artistic stage fittings and a well-timed movement that makes his program seem all too short.

Uses Two Types of Presentation

The succession of highly popular "Mark Strand Frolics," which Plunkett created during the past year has easily evidenced the fact that he ranks among the foremost in the presentation of this type of stage effort.

In the prologue type of presentation, Plunkett is equally distinguished.

There could be no greater example of Plunkett's mastery of prologue craft than his stage introduction for Samuel Goldwyn's "The Night of Love," the attraction at the Mark Strand the past two weeks.

This romance, in which Vilma Banky and Ronald Colman are featured, is the story of a beautiful princess and her gypsy lover. Outdoor scenes which reveal picturesque views of gypsy fetes were especially appropriate for prologue settings. In fact, representatives of the producer suggested a prologue that would show gypsies around a camp fire. They spoke of how effective it would be to devise a prologue using Victor Herbert's song, "Gypsy Sweetheart."

Selects Pictorial Subject

Joe Plunkett listened meditatively to all suggestions and said that he would "work out something."

In the first place, he picked out the most beautiful interior scene in "The Night of Love." This scene shows the Duke's banquet room. In the background is a broad and strikingly attractive stairway. In the foreground is the banquet table at which about forty guests are assembled.

It made one almost gasp to see how faithfully Joe Plunkett transferred that banquet scene from celluloid to actuality—even to details in costuming and the nature of food on the table. The Duke was there; guests were there; the Princess was there. And before Plunkett was through, the gypsies invaded the scene with an interpretive dance, and the gypsy lover appeared.

Popular Appeal of Prologue

The marked effectiveness of this prologue was easily observed when that sequence in "The Night of Love" in which the Duke's banquet hall is seen, is first shown on the screen.

"Prologue conception," according to Plunkett, "is largely influenced by the inspirational and artistic qualities of the motion picture. 'The Night of Love,' which I consider one of the most beautiful photoplays I have ever seen, particularly adapted itself to an elaborate presentation with very little effort on my part. Prologues and presentations will become increasingly more significant in accord with the public's growing appreciation of this type of presentation."

Dance Contest Featured at New Theatre, Baltimore

Harry Van Hoven, publicity representative of the Whitehurst interests in Baltimore, arranged a Black Bottom dance contest for the New Theatre in that city in conjunction with the "Baltimore Daily Post." The prizes offered amounted to $120 and each entrant was given a pair of tickets for the New and Garden Theatres.

The contest was conducted at the New Theatre the week during which Roscoe Ails appeared as one of the stage features.

Cedar Falls Theatre Caters Exclusively to Farmers

The Empress Theatre, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, was reopened ebruary 2nd, inaugurating a unique plan for small towns. This theatre is playing only that type of picture of interest to farmers and catering exclusively to farmers' trade. The theatre was redecorated, a small orchestra installed and admission prices dropped.

Music and the Pictures

By P. M. ABBOTT

WE have often speculated about future developments of motion pictures. And there are any number of angles which can be ruminated over. Home movies, for one, has always been a subject which invited discussion, for the possible magnitude of this field is staggering.

As yet, no one really knows just how popular home motion pictures will ever become. Only today an announcement comes to our attention which promises a further test for the development of home movies through an elaboration of plans hitherto untried.

A new company is now at work in Hollywood producing features for exclusive release on 16 mm. film. This, of course, means only for home use. While picture producing for home showings isn't new or revolutionary, the plans for popularizing the pictures produced by this new company are.

Musical motion pictures are the basis for this new venture. The making of phonograph records especially adapted for use with a particular production and playing these records at the time the picture is shown is all there is to these musical pictures—technically, at least.

With the better phonographs made today, the appeal of operating a private show at home, along with special pictures and music, may all combine to make this new plan successful.

Anyway, whether synchronized phonograph music and pictures will eventually add any great stimulus to home movies, it is of interest to note that technical developments are again responsible for this opportunity of increasing the realm of pictures.

The constant bombardment of ideas and inventions, such as talking films, three dimensions pictures, motion pictures by radio, and the like, will eventually broaden this industry beyond the vision of any of us.

Castle Square Now Showing Pictures

Boston Theatre Was One of Oldest Stock Houses in Country

After nearly half a century as a stock theatre, the Castle Square Theatre, Boston, started on Sunday as a motion picture theatre.

The Castle Square Theatre was probably the oldest theatre to play continuous stock programs in America and upon its stage have been trained many of those who have since become famous as stars on the legitimate stage and of later years, in filmdom.

A. Payne, formerly manager at the Keith-Albee St. James Theatre, Boston, will manage the Castle Square Theatre under its new policy and the programs will be changed twice weekly. There is no change in ownership of the theatre.

Of the older downtown Boston theatres, only one is playing stock, the Keith-Albee St. James, which shifted two weeks ago from pictures and vaudeville; five of the legitimate houses are still playing legitimate programs; two of the legitimate houses are playing road shows, "Old Ironsides" and "What Price Glory?" and the remaining four have become regular picture theatres. This list does not include the motion picture houses which have presented nothing but pictures and vaudeville since being erected.

F. & R. to Present Patriotic Numbers on Special Bill

A special morning matinee for children, featuring patriotic numbers, will be given on Lincoln's birthday at the Garrick Theatre, Minneapolis. Patriotic societies, Parent-Teachers' associations, and a number of clubs are co-operating in the arrangement of this program with Miss Blanche MacDonald, newly appointed head of the department of public relations of Finkelstein and Ruben. Hostesses for the affair have been chosen from the local chapters of the Daughters of the Revolution and of the Children of the American Revolution.

This is the first of such programs which Miss MacDonald has arranged but she is already making plans for something of the same kind for Washington's birthday.

Riviera Annex, New Detroit House, Opens

The Riviera Annex, Detroit's newest palatial neighborhood theatre, had its formal opening Friday evening, February 4th. "Tin Hats" was the screen feature of the premiere program.

The Annex, an atmospheric theatre designed by John Eberson and built by the owners and operators of the Riviera, is directly opposite the latter house. The policy of the house will be to change its pictures three to four times weekly.

Free Candy at Children's Show

The management of the Majestic Theatre, Mansfield, O., is presenting each juvenile patron with a bag of candy at the Saturday afternoon matinees.

The MANAGER'S OFFICE

W. D. ASCOUGH, recently associated with the Pennsylvania Theatre Corporation and formerly manager of Poli's and the Palace theatres, in Hartford, Conn., has returned to that city to become manager of the new Allyn Theatre, scheduled to open in April. The Allyn will be operated as a high-class motion picture house.

EDWIN G. HITCHCOCK, well known on the Pacific Coast as motion picture critic, publicity director and theatre manager, has been appointed managing director of the United Artists Theatre in Seattle, Wash. He was critic for the Los Angeles Record, later becoming publicity director for the Forum Theatre there. Following this experience he became manager of the Criterion in Los Angeles. Hitchcock went to Portland, Ore., to become managing director of the Liberty and Rivoli theatres. He is 27 years old.

JACK O'CONNELL has resigned from Warner Bros. to resume management of the Temple Theatre at Toledo, O. The Temple is operated by the Collins Theatre Company. O'Connell has closed the house for the installation of Vitaphone apparatus and will re-open it February 26th with "Don Juan" and Vitaphone presentations as the attraction.

J. LUKE GRING is managing the new Capitol Theatre in Chambersburg, Pa. Gring, a well-known theatre man, is vice-president of the Chambersburg Amusement Company, builder and operator of the new house, which was erected at a cost of $185,000 and had its formal opening February 3.

JAMES QUINN, well-known showman from the East, has taken over the management of the State Theatre. Quinn replaces Jack Eaton, who has managed the theatre for the past year. Eaton will return to the production field. His present plans mean an affiliation with Grantland Rice in the production of a new series of sport reels.

BARRY BURKE is now district manager of all Publix theatres. He succeeded M. Feld and took over his new duties last Monday. Mr. Burke comes from Dallas, Texas.

Ambassador, St. Louis, to Offer Spring Style Show

Clara Bow in Elinor Glyn's "It" and a Spring Style Show have been booked for Skouras Brothers' Ambassador Theatre, St. Louis, the week of February 12th. The style show will be staged in co-operation with a leading St. Louis store. Several high class acts will be imported from New York.

Directs Fire Drills for Gray Circuit

Lalley Organizing System at New England Chain Houses

The William P. Gray Company in New England, operating 116 theatres, has engaged Lieut. F. W. Lalley, of the Boston Fire Department, on detached duty, to conduct fire drills in the theatres of the circuit. The drills started at the Merrimack Square Theatre in Lowell, Mass., of which David F. Perkins is the manager, and were so successful in instructing every employee his exact duty in case of fire, that the fire department official was engaged to direct the work for the circuit.

Each week every employee rehearses the part which he would have to play in the event of a fire. The drills are held either just before doors are open for a performance or just after the audience has vacated the theatres and they are unannounced by the manager who directs the drills when Lieut. Lalley is not present.

One result of the adoption of the drills is that an inspection of all exits and fire equipment is made daily by employees.

New Price Scale In Force at Harrisburg Theatre

On February 1st the State Theatre, Harrisburg, devoted to motion pictures and vaudeville, the largest and newest Wilmer & Vincent theatre in that city, announced a readjustment of prices of admittance which resulted in some increases. The new prices for night performances are 50 cents for the entire house except the boxes and loges, where the price is 65 cents. Heretofore the best seats outside the boxes were 50 cents and the price of the less desirable seats was 35 cents.

A flat rate of 35 cents was established for the afternoon shows except in the loges and boxes, where the price will be 50 cents. This means an increase from 25 to 35 cents for many seats in the rear of the first floor and the balcony. Children are now admitted for 25 cents, day or night.

Vitaphone Installation at Madison in Detroit

Vitaphone is being installed at the Madison Theatre in Detroit, the work being carried on during the showing of "The Fire Brigade" at that house. It is probable that the first Vitaphone attraction to play the Madison will begin its run immediately upon the close of the current presentation.

The Madison will be one of the first houses to offer Vitaphone presentations on a continuous policy at popular prices. "The Better 'Ole" and short features starring Elsie Janis, Eugene and Willie Howard, George Jessel and Reinald Werrenrath will comprise the initial program.

Merchants' Carnival at Troy

Louis Saperstein, manager of the American in Troy, is staging a merchants' midwinter carnival, which is attracting considerable attention. A king and queen will be elected and crowned at the theatre.

Screen Quality Counts

Prints on Eastman Positive from negatives on Eastman Panchromatic make the most of your projection equipment—give maximum photographic quality on the screen.

For only Eastman Positive carries through to the screen with fidelity all the tones of the negative, and Eastman "Pan" alone renders colors in their true black and white relationship.

That's fact—proved by Kodak Research Laboratory experts. And it's fact that counts at the box office—people appreciate screen quality.

Presentations at Seattle Second Run

Hamrick's Egyptian Offers Stage Revues as Weekly Feature

Stage presentations, elaborately produced and offered by well-known entertainers, have been introduced as a regular feature in conjunction with photoplays at John Hamrick's Egyptian Theatre, Seattle suburban house operating as a second run theatre. The presentations rival the stage numbers of a majority of the Pacific Coast's leading first-run houses.

The Egyptian shows, which were inaugurated two weeks ago, are miniature musical revues, arranged by Carl Mahne, house manager. Hamrick has engaged Jack Stern, well-known song writer, whose fame dates back to the composition of "I Wonder What's Become of Sally," as master of ceremonies. He was formerly featured at the Butler Hotel Rose Bowl in Seattle, and later was director of entertainment at the Club Lido, one of Seattle's night clubs. Stern is assisted by Miss Grace Hamilton. Several principals from the Fanchon and Marco Revues that play the Fifth Avenue Theatre in Seattle, later appear at the Egyptian as guest artists.

The musical program is divided equally between Harry Reed at the Wurlitzer and Bill Winders and his orchestra on the stage.

The Egyptian continues to maintain its leading second run policy, playing only the largest pictures immediately following their release from the downtown theatres. Program changes are made twice weekly, with the exception of the larger pictures which play a full week. Performances are given three times daily, with continuous shows on Sunday, and admission prices are 35c. and 50., with 10c. admission for children.

50,000 Orchestrations in Roxy Music Library

A musical library, said to be the largest theatre collection, topping even Eastman's at Rochester, which until now has held the record, is now being installed at the Roxy Theatre. It contains ten thousand numbers and fifty thousand orchestrations, the nucleus being provided by Victor Herbert's library which Roxy recently purchased from the late composer's daughter, Ella.

Seventy-five specially constructed asbestos lined cabinets with automatic locks already line the walls of the library, which is guarded by three librarians with Al Gaber in charge.

PROLOGUE AT THE STRAND

The castle scene from "The Night of Love" (United Artists) as reproduced on the stage of the Strand, New York, as a prologue presentation. The scene reproduced in detail the picturesque features of the motion picture sequence on which it was based

Ballet Heads Surrounding Bill at Capitol

An elaborate ballet titled "Milady's Boudoir" and devised by Chester Hale, is the principal feature offered at the Capitol Theatre, New York, in conjunction with "The General," the current attraction.

The leading role in the ballet is taken by Joyce Coles. She is assisted by the regular Capitol Ballet and the Chester Hale Girls. The conception is divided into five parts: (a) "Milady's Maids"; (b) "Milady's Pillows"; (c) "Milady's Flirtation"; (d) "Milady's Powder Puffs"; and (e) the Finale by Miss Coles and the entire ensemble. The settings were designed by Arthur Knorr, art director, and the costumes created by the theatre's wardrobe department, so that the "tout ensemble" has the benefit of unity of idea and design.

The Capitol Grand Orchestra offers as an overture, Hosmer's "Northern Rhapsody." The soloist for the weeek is Celia Turrill, mezzo soprano, who sings Grieg's "Solvejg's Song."

Prologue Staged at Strand With "McFadden's Flats"

A prologue presentation staged by Joseph Plunkett, managing director of the Mark Strand, New York, is the stage feature of the current program at that house, which has "McFadden's Flats," the Charlie Murray-Chester Conklin comedy, as the screen attraction.

The Strand's doors are opened daily at 10:30, starting with this engagement, with all seats selling at 35 cents for this morning performance.

Anderson Presentation on Paramount Bill With "It"

"Venetian Glass" is the title of the John Murray Anderson stage presentation on the bill with "It" at the Paramount Theatre, New York, this week. The stage divertissement is reminiscent of 17th century art, and features vocal and dancing talent.

Other attractions on the program are Jesse Crawford at the Paramount Wurlitzer playing "What Does It Matter?" and "The Mona Lisa," one of the Educational "Romance Productions." This is an unusual story of Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting and is done entirely in technicolor. In addition, Publix Theatres will present "The Rollickers," five song syncopators of wide radio reputation, and the Paramount News.

Double Features at Albany House

C. H. Buckley is now running double features first-run at the Clinton Square Theatre in Albany, with no change in admission prices.

Fitzpatrick and McElroy Expand Circuit

New Tivoli Theatre is Eighth Indiana House; Purchased First but a Year Ago

FITZPATRICK AND McELROY, of Chicago, last week opened their eighth theatre in the State of Indiana, the handsome new Tivoli at Richmond.

The rapid expansion of this company's holding in the Hoosier State has created considerable interest, as it is only a little over a year ago that they purchased their first theatre in Indiana.

The Tivoli is a fifteen-hundred-seat house of attractive and dignified architecture, designed by Architect Donald Graham. Features of the front of the house are a decorative canopy and a forty-thousand-watt, 42 feet high, electric sign, swung from the corner of the theatre, which can be seen for blocks in four directions. The auditorium is built with a wide, five-hundred-seat balcony, and color is given by the beautifully decorated proscenium arch and panels on the side walls in which pastel shades of blue and lavender are touched with gold. The stage has been constructed on a large scale, so that it will accommodate any vaudeville act or road show, with dressing rooms with every modern convenience occupy the space under the stage. A Wurlitzer Grand, three manual pipe organ will furnish the music, and adequate ventilating, heating and cooling systems give promise of even temperature the year around.

The Tivoli Theatre will be under the management of Howard Waugh, formerly district manager of the Saxe Amusement Company, and at one time manager of the Alhambra Theatre in Milwaukee.

Fitzpatrick & McElroy Company made the opening of the Tivoli Theatre a gala event in Richmond, including a Tivoli queen contest, culminating in the crowning of the queen on the opening night. The prize in this contest was a trip to Hollywood for the winner and her chaperon.

The opening also was made a social event in the town, including luncheons for the club and society women of the city.

Fitzpatrick & McElroy are now completing another theatre in Muncie, Ind., which will be ready for opening in a few months. They also own three other theatres in that city.

Will Open Georgia Theatre About March 15

J. H. Wheeler, of Montgomery, Ala., owner of the Capitol Theatre in that city, and one of the best known exhibitors in this section, is planning to open his new theatre, the Grand, at Cedartown, Ga., about March 15th.

Mr. Wheeler began his career as exhibitor four years ago when he operated the Star at Tarrant City, Ala. Later he disposed of this property and opened the Grand at Wylan, going from there to Montgomery, where he has been exceptionally successful in the operation of the Capitol.

Universal Breaks Ground at Racine, Wis.

The new Universal Theatre at Racine has been started. It will be located on Main Street between 5th and 6th. Buildings now on the site are being razed, digging will follow immediately and construction rushed to completion. The theatre will seat 2,500. The building, which also provides space for commercial enterprises, has an 800 ft. frontage on Main Street, 120 ft. on Lake Avenue, and 145 ft. on 5th Street. $1,000,000 is being used in its construction. It is expected the theatre will open in September. Arthur Friedman, who is now managing the Rialto, will manage the new theatre.

Montana Playhouse Changes Hands

Quarter of Million Involved in Deal; Lessees Will Remodel

From Billings last week came the story of one of the largest theatre deals in the history of the State, having taken place in the selling of the Babcock Theatre building to Hyme Lipsker, Billings merchant. The Babcock, with a few stockholders. However, of L. C. Babcock and his mother, Mrs. A. L. Babcock with a few stockholders. However, the property stood in the Babcock name, and it is through them the sale was made, January 15. The deal involved a consideration of a quarter of a million dollars as well as improvements to the theatre building and the theatre proper, which will involve $90,000 or more.

Co-incident with the announcement of the sale of the theatre comes the news from the lessees, Eugene O'Keefe and Max Fregger, who will refurnish and re-equip the entire theatre. At least $40,000 will be spent on new chairs, drapes, rugs, carpets etc., and the seating capacity will be increased. The old pipe organ will be retained and additional new pipes will be added.

The theatre will be closed from June to September to allow for the remodeling.

Edward Miller, a theatre architect, who planned the decorating and equipping of the Egyptian Theatre in Seattle, Draper's Egyptian in Portland, the Hollywood in Portland and practically all the big theatres built on the Pacific coast in the past three years, has been retained to draw plans for the re-modeling, decorating and furnishing of the Babcock.

F. B. Shearer, Inc. of Seattle, will probably supply all the furnishings, if present plans go through.

A new ventilating and new heating plants will be installed as well as new lighting fixtures and a new lighting system.

A new fire-proof projection booth with the automatic curtain control will feature in the safety-first program.

Two of the most modern Simplex projecting machines, a double dissolving stereopticon and two spot lights are named among other improvements.

Waukegan, Ill., Permit Granted

H. C. Burnett, of the syndicate building the $1,000,000 theatre, office and store structure at Genesee and Clayton streets, Waukegan, Ill., was granted the permit a short time ago. The cost of the superstructure is estimated at $500,000.

Jamaica Lease to F.P.-L. Reported Closed

A MOTION picture theatre to seat 2,200 and an adjoining store building, involving about $500 000, is to be erected at Jamaica Avenue and Rocky Hill Road, Bellerose, L.I., N.Y., by Moss Brothers. The theatre has been leased to a subsidiary of the Famous Players corporation at a rental aggregating $525.000. The operation is being financed through the office of Charles C. Lockwood and Nathaniel Goldstein.

Bratter and Pollak Buy Theatre Site

Plan Erection of 2,000-Seat House in City of Nyack, N.Y.

It is announced through the office of Edgar B. Haines, a theatre specialist of Newark and New York, that Messrs. Bratter & Pollak, owners of several theatres in New Jersey, including the Hawthorne in Newark, the Embassy and Hollywood in Orange, and also connected with the Stanley Company of America, have assembled several plots of property at the corner of Broadway and High Avenue in the city of Nyack, N.Y., for the erection of a theatre that will be the last word in theatrical construction.

It is planned to erect a complete, modern, fireproof building of the latest design. The auditorium will contain over two thousand seats all on one floor. The stage will be over thirty-five feet deep and will be so arranged that it can be used for any kind of professional shows as well as for such local affairs as will require stage presentation.

Messrs. Bratter & Pollak will spare no expense to give the people of Nyack and vicinity, not only the best talent obtainable in the musical field and in motion pictures, but they have employed experts to make the house as comfortable as human skill can make it. The ceiling will be of the dome type and the lighting effects will be indirect.

The latest approved oil burners will be used to heat the theatre in the winter and forced ventilation will be employed throughout the summer.

The same type of organ as that in the Oritani Theatre at Hackensack will be installed in connection with facilities for an orchestra.

The front of the building will contain a beautiful lobby in the center and there will be a store on each side of the entrance. Pressed brick and terra-cotta will be used in connection with steel and concrete throughout the building.

William E. Lehman, of Newark, N.J., an architect of well known ability in the theatre field has been selected to draw plans for the enterprise.

H. J. McGinley, of Nyack, N.Y., represented the sellers of the property and Edgar B. Haines, of Newark, represented the buyers.

Two More New England Firms Organized

Schoenstadt's Piccadilly Opened to Public

Marks Rise of Owner's Career as Great Showman and Builder of De Luxe Theatres

SCHOENSTADT & SONS, Piccadilly, at Hyde Park Boulevard and Blackstone, Chicago, opened its doors Monday and adds one more magnificent neighborhood theatre to the splendid array of these houses now in operation.

This three-thousand-seat theatre in the heart of Hyde Park is a triumph of the builders' arm, a triumph of persistent effort and the realization of a splendid dream of the builder.

The structure, which is a combination of hotel and theatre, shows in its interior architecture the influence of the Byzantine, with touches of Moorish and Spanish building art. The lobbies are spacious and in the decorations of the auditorium itself there is a liberal use of color and marble statuary. The stage is large enough for the presentation of the largest shows and embodies movable orchestra platforms and other latest equipment. The orchestra pit also can be elevated above the level of the stage and the same is true of the console of the great Kilgen organ, which is said to be one of the largest and finest instruments installed in any Chicago theatre.

Children's play rooms, where mothers may leave their youngsters to be cared for during the performance, elaborate lounging rooms and cosmetic rooms with divans and cushions are luxurious features of this new house.

Albert E. Short is director general of music at the Piccadilly, directing the pit orchestra, and will produce the elaborate stage presentations at this house. Dan Russo and Ted Fiorito, with their Edgewater Beach Oriole Orchestra, are features of the stage productions, and Leo Terry, noted organist, presides at the console of the big Kilgen.

The ushers are a handsome uniformed and well set up body of young men, who have been trained by Major Louis Lazar, a winner of the Croix de Guerre.

The opening of the Piccadilly is the culmination of Herman Schoenstadt's career as a showman and marks the rise of his firm from the time twenty years ago when he opened his first theatre at 49th Street and Ashland Avenue, with a $2,000 capital. After many vicissitudes he put his first house on its feet and acquired another theatre, the Ashland. Next he took over the Archer, built the Atlantic, and with the aid of his two sons, Arthur and Henry, has, step by step, built up his theatrical holdings until, as owner of the Piccadilly, he ranks as one of the biggest theatrical powers in Chicago.

The public premier of the Piccadilly on Monday came after a three-day celebration in Hyde Park, the high-class district in which the Piccadilly is located. The first day the American Legion, Business Men's Association and other organizations staged a big parade to the theatre, where they were welcomed by Messrs. Schoenstadt. On Sunday the invitation performance was given before a crowd which packed the big house and on Monday, the official opening day, police were required to handle the crowds which flocked to obtain admission.

Arthur Smith with Roxy

Appointed to Supervise Projection in New York City's Largest Theatre

With a long and splendid record of achievement in the projection field, Arthur J. Smith, for the past seven years chief projectionist at the Capitol Theatre, New York City, has been appointed by S. L. ("Roxy") Rothafel to take charge of all matters pertaining to projection at the new Roxy Theatre, Seventh Avenue and 50th Street, New York, when that huge playhouse opens the early part of March.

It was natural that "Roxy" should turn to "Art" Smith when ready to make this appointment; they were associated for a long time at the Capitol and it was at this theatre that Smith and Roxy put their heads together to unravel many a knotty problem that would arise from time to time. These two, in collaboration, were instrumental for the development of many lighting and projection features now in general use.

Arthur Smith is forty-three years old and entered the motion picture industry at an early age in the capacity of partner in a 121-seat theatre in one of the New England states. Following this venture, which was successful as any at that stage of the business, Smith turned to the projection end, a branch where his foresight told him, good men would be needed.

One of his earlier affiliations, that with D. W. Griffith, perhaps stands out as the most productive of new ideas up until his appointment at the Capitol Theatre. With Griffith, he opened the Liberty Theatre with the first New York City presentation of the "Birth of a Nation." Following this, he opened "Intolerance," and has since, with the exception of th enew Paramount, been in charge of practically every new Broadway motion picture theatre on its opening night; a night that every man in the projection booth is tense and mindful of the fact that the faulty handling of apparatus or some other error may ruin the whole performance.

Smith was also with D. W. Griffith when that famous director and producer went to England to secure shots for "Hearts of the World." This time Smith played the additional role of camera man. This trip was made during the Great War and involved being perched in captive balloons, and rides in airplanes in order to get the pictures Griffith wanted.

It was after the European trip that Smith was appointed to his post at the Capitol Theatre, a position where he demonstrated his fitness for his present appointment.

Some idea of a part of the projection equipment of the Roxy which will be under Smith's supervision is given in the following:

Six Simplex projection machines will be installed along with six high intensity color floods. Also, twenty-four Brenkert spots of 150 amperes each.

The screen of the new Roxy will be 44 feet wide, twice the size of the one in use at the new Paramount—and said to be the largest in the world. It is of ample size for the Spoor invention and will undoubtedly be used for that purpose as the occasion arises.

Harry Hellman Buys New Albany Theatre Site

Harry Hellman, who has owned and operated the Royal Theatre in Albany for a number of years, purchased a site last week for a new house, which he will erect near the corner of Clinton Avenue and Northern Boulevard. The house will have a seating capacity of about 1,000 persons, and will be built during the spring and early summer.

Markowitz Bros. Get Godard Theatre

Former Lessees of Sacramento House Move to State

Markowitz Bros., lessees of the Godard Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., and owners of the Western Amusement Company operating a circuit of motion picture theatres on the Pacific Coast, recently announced that they will remodel the Godard house to the extent of a complete set of new carpets, 100 new loge seats, new drapes, installation of a new organ and the entire redecoration of the interior.

The lease on the Godard held by the T. & D., Jr., circuit expires February 28, and that circuit moves up to the State Theatre, which is also to be remodeled.

Markowitz Bros. are also said to be negotiating for further expansion through Superior California, their liking for this section shown by the long lease (ten years) taken on the Godard.

Universal Opens First of New England Chain

The Capitol Theatre, Lowell, Mass., the first house to be completed for Universal's proposed New England chain of motion picture theatres, was opened Monday night. It has a seating capacity of 1,100 and plays a combination policy of pictures and vaudeville. It is a suburban house.

The next Universal house to be opened in New England will be the Capitol in Somerville, a 2,200-seat house which is heralded as one of the show-places of New England. It will have its premiere performance on Washington's Birthday, February 22nd.

Glendale Theatre Permit Issued

A building permit for the erection of a two-story concrete structure containing a theatre and three ground-floor stores has been issued to Walter and Louise A. Vernon, residents of the Riverside Drive section of Glendale, Cal. They expect to lease the house on its completion. Work will start immediately, it is said.

J. H. Hallberg Busy Compiling Data

Also Investigating and Testing New "Effect" Apparatus

It is reported that the laboratory of J. H. Hallberg is now busy compiling important data concerning the efficiency of all kinds of rectifying and current controlling devices.

These tests not only include the ordinary electrical tests, which discloses the efficiency, but they also go into the matter of power factor so that when ultimate efficiency figures are obtained they will represent a true state of affairs.

Mr. Hallberg also states that he is investigating and testing several important additions to the projection in modern theatres, and that he is developing a line of new "effect" apparatus which it is claimed will produce startling results on the stage and screen. It is possible that one of the large makers of stage lighting appliances may become interested in this branch with Mr. Hallberg, in case he should decide not to distribute the new apparatus himself.

National's San Jose House to Be Overhauled

James Beatty, vice-president and general manager of the National Theatres Syndicate, which owns the American, National and Jose theatres, San Jose, Cal., has announced that his company will spend $50,000 to redecorate and renovate the American Theatre. This will include new seats, new lighting system, new drapes, scenery and stage fittings and an entire renovation of the organ and projection equipment.

A large force of workmen will be employed between the hours of midnight and noon so that operations will not hinder daily performances.

Ironwood Amus. Co. Plans New Mich. House

The Ironwood Amusement Corporation, A. L. Picker, general manager, is planning a new theatre in Ironwood, Mich., and will start construction this coming spring. The theatre will seat approximately 1,200 and will be put up at a cost of $150,000. The theatre will be built to accommodate vaudeville, motion pictures and road shows. The Ironwood Amusement Corporation is now operating the Rex Theatre at Ironwood, Mich., and the Rivoli Theatre at Hurley, Wis.

"Massasoit" Name for New A. S. Friend Theatre

The new theatre to be erected for Arthur S. Friend interests on the site of the Massasoit Hotel at Springfield, Mass., will be named the Massasoit. General contract has been let to the T. D. Harrison Construction Co. of New York by Architect A. W. Johnson of New York. The Ernest F. Carlson Co. of Springfield will do the actual construction work.

Oregon House Buys Wurlitzer

The Beaver Theatre, Goldhill, Ore., has placed an order for a new Wurlitzer organ and expects to make the installation in the near future.

Outlines Projection Rules for Alberta, Can.

G. P. BARBER, Edmonton, chief inspector of theatres for the Province of Alberta, has given a brief outline of the laws governing projection machine operators in Alberta theatres. The projectionists are required to pass their apprenticeship and also three government examinations in electricity, mechanics, care of appliances and public safety. No boys are allowed to work in projection rooms and no apprentice can be under the age of 18 years. Projectionists work in five-hour shifts.

A projectionist's license can be cancelled for failure to produce his license on demand; permitting an unlicensed person in the projection room while an audience is in the theatre; operating a machine while under the influence of liquor; smoking or permitting smoking in the projection room; reading while operating a machine; maintaining a dirty projection room; projecting more than 90 feet of film per minute; failure to report any film fire or defective machine; keeping or storing material of a combustible nature in the room and other reasons.

Plans Filed for $250,000 Bronx, N.Y., Theatre

Plans filed recently with the Bronx Bureau of Buildings, Bronx, New York City, indicate that a $250,000 motion picture theatre is to be erected on the east side of Ogden Avenue, 75 feet north of 166th Street. The Ellgold Realty Corp. is listed as owner of the proposed structure and Cohen and Siegel as architects. The theatre will be one story in height and of brick construction.

Comerford May Build New Carbondale House

It is rumored that the Comerford theatre interests of Pennsylvania may build a new house in Carbondale, Pa., a community adjacent to Scranton, although no official statement has been issued from the Comerford headquarters. The old M. & M. Bank building on North Main Street has been mentioned as the possible site.

Portland Amus. Co. Obtains New Suburban Site

Woodstock, a suburb of Portland, Ore., will soon have a new motion picture theatre, according to a recent promise made the citizens of that community by D. Solis Cohen, representing the Portland Amusement Company. Mr. Cohen said that his company had already obtained a site at Forty-third and Woodstock Avenue for the projected theatre.

Central Michigan Theatre Opened by Gibbs

One of the most up-to-date of the smaller motion picture theatres in central Michigan is the Ideal, at Ithaca, recently opened by Ethel and James P. Gibbs. The house seats close to 400, has a stage 24 feet wide by 16 deep, an attractive marquee adorning the front and everything in the way of modern equipment throughout.

Permits Issued for Two Erie, Pa., Theatres

Permits for two motion picture theatres have recently been issued at Erie, Pa. The most recent one, calling for the construction of an 800-seat house to be erected on Eighteenth and Poplar streets, went to the Phillips Company and named Vincent Manarelli as owner.

About a month ago, Louis Moski, contractor, was granted a permit for a similar venture at Twenty-sixth Street and East Avenue.

Sidestepping Generator Problems

THEATRES today are experiencing a transition stage as regards the use of generating equipment for supplying electric energy to the various projection devices now being used in projection rooms over the country.

In the comparatively short space of four years the reflector arc and high intensity arc have established themselves as the standard types of sources for supplying the increasing illumination levels in theatres, so that the old, heretofore commonly used type of vertical arc is becoming a rarity—indeed, seldom encountered, except, perhaps, in the small country town houses.

Where formerly the vertical arc, as used with condensers, had its own way and was quite the accepted thing, now the general run of theatres are clearly divided into two distinct groups as regards the matter of light sources. And strangely enough, these two groups are at opposite ends of the poles, so to speak, in the matter of current required to operate each source.

On one hand we have a group of theatres, ranging in size from small houses to pritty fair sized ones, which largely depend upon the reflector arc as the source of screen illumination, and on the other hand we have the large de luxe houses of great width and still greater depth where nothing but the high intensity arc, with its high brightness, will meet the conditions.

Now the current requirements of these two sources is such that a large gap exists between them, wherein lies the source of grief of many a theatre manager. To be more explicit, the reflector arc type of source uses anywhere from 15 to 25 amperes whereas the high intensity arc, as commonly used, employs 125 ampheres. It is quite true that 50 and 75 ampere sizes of high intensity arcs are available, but practically none of the first size and comparatively few of the second size are being used.

Upward Trend in Illumination

The reason, undoubtedly, lies in the fact that with these smaller sizes the intensity of screen illumination is not appreciably better than what could be provided by a reflector arc of 25 amperes capacity so that the odds are all in favor of the latter source, due to its low current requirements.

Then, too, if a theatre owner is at all in the frame of mind to consider the high intensity arc, he is more than likely to go immediately to the largest available size instead of attempting to draw the line too fine in the matter of screen illumination. The guiding rule seems to be "Better be safe than sorry."

At any rate, there appears to be but few installations of the lower sizes of high intensity arcs and, indeed, the trend seems to be ever upward since now no small number of theatres are changing to the use of 150 amperes with 16 mm. carbons in an effort to reach for still higher screen intensities.

The Joker in the Deck

The widespread use of the reflector arc has naturally brought along with it a special type of low capacity motor-generator outfit in order to permit obtaining the fullest measure of economy from the operation of these units, so the splitting of theatre sources into two widely separated groups has resulted in the virtual disappearance of those medium sized generators of 50 to 80 amperes capacity.

If the theatres of today used nothing but motion picture projectors, all would be "hunky dory" in a manner of speaking, and all this chatter about generators would be unnecessary.

Now, to get down to the meat of the discussion, these very important auxiliary devices, which are used to provide the frills and finishing touches for adding pep to the program, all require in the neighborhood of 60-80 amperes for satisfactory operation and no small number of theatres are waking up to the fact that under the present conditions of motion picture projection, they are left without visible means of support, so to speak, as regards a source of current supply for these units.

Solution to the Problem

Where reflector arc generators of low capacity are being used, about the only satisfactory solution lies in using another generator for operating the spotlight, slide projectors, and effect machines, which at best appears to be a rather expensive penalty for the privilege of using the reflector arc.

With the high amperage generators no trouble, of course, is encountered where the multiple type is used, although the series type imposes a penalty of its own in the way of wasted power through a special resistance to permit the flow of the full generator current of 125 amperes.

Apparently, no small number of the series type of motor generator set is being used because we have received quite a few requests for information on the best manner of operating relatively low amperage projectors on such generators.

Before making answer to these requests, we decided to refer the entire matter to some person whom, we thought, could give an authoritative expression of opinion and, since we could think of no better qualified man than J. H. Hertner, of the Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio, we accordingly asked him for his views on the matter.

This he has kindly done, and his letter is as follows:

Mr. Hertner's Answer

"Gentlemen:

"The writer has your letter of the 7th, relative to the use of the double dissolver on one of our 125 ampere series type generators.

"Your letter does not make it clear as to how many amperes these people wish to use. However, the general plan for the use of the double dissolver would be as follows:

"Supposing the current consumption was 50 amperes at the arc on the Brenkert, provisions would have to be made to absorb 75 amperes through a shunted resistance, and with 55 volts drop across the arc the resistance would have about 0.7 ohms, and would have to, of course, carry 75 amperes continuously. The two arcs of the Brenkert would then be wired in series with a short circuiting switch and a ballast across each arc.

"To operate one arc the carbons should be brought together, the short circuiting switch opened, and the arc should be drawn in the usual way. To operate both arcs simultaneously, the carbons of the second arc should be brought together and the short circuiting switch opened. The arc could then be drawn as usual.

"In the latter case the 125 amperes from the generator would divide 50 amperes to the arcs in series and 75 amperes through ballast resistance in series. In the case of one arc, divide 50 amperes to the Brenkert, and 75 amperes through the ballast. As far as the generator is concerned, it would then run on the same sort of load that it does when operating projectors at their normal 125 ampere current.

"It might be added, too, that this Brenkert could be put in series with the motion picture projectors in the wiring scheme and used in conjunction with them as long as only two arcs are operated at any one time.

"I am enclosing a sketch to make this clearer to yourself.

"Thanking you for your good wishes, I beg to remain,

"Very truly yours,
"THE HERTNER ELECTRIC CO.
"(Signed) JOHN H. HERTNER."

The diagram Mr. Hertner enclosed showed two motion picture projector arcs and two arcs of the Brenkert double dissolver all connected in series to form the generator load. Across each of the motion picture projector arcs, so as to bridge each, was connected a short-circuiting switch and across each of the arcs of the Brenkert was connected a short-circuit switch, and also a shunt resistance of 0.7 ohms. While these last two arcs are in operation, each shunt resistance would carry 75 amperes, so that the loss of power in each would be 75 x 75 x 0.7=3938 watts, and in the two a total of 7876 watts would be lost.

Newspaper Opinions on New Pictures

"The Scarlet Letter"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Cleveland

Times: "Lillian Gish is inspired in her portrayal. One of the most precious contributions of the screen. . . . The photoplay is beautiful. . . . A highly artistic film, excellent as a medium for emotional upheaval."

Rod La Rocque's latest appearances on the screen is in the Prod. Dist. Corp. feature "The Cruise of the Jasper B"

News: "Excels everything we've seen of recent date. . . . Only a master could have built it. . . . The cast is flawless."

Plain Dealer: "Seastrom's best. . . . The Hawthorne tale is as vivid and sympathetic as one finds it on the printed page. . . . In many respects more moving and dramatic than the original tale. . . . The work of a directorial genius. . . . Lillian Gish has risen to her highest mark. . . . 'The Scarlet Letter' is most highly recommended."

"The Scarlet Letter"—Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Detroit

Free Press: "Lillian Gish is very aptly cast. Is likely to take a new hold on the affections of her followers. . . . A vehicle that suits the delicate beauty and the sweet girlishness of Lillian. . . . A picture that is likely to run along to fortune. . . . A very convincing portrayal of a great story. . . . The supporting cast is capable."

News: "As lovely a group of pictures as the eye could hope to rest upon are revealed in 'The Scarlet Letter.' . . . Combines beauty and authenticity of scene seldom approached in a motion picture. . . . Filmed with a sincerity and courage that should carry it straight to the hearts of all intelligent and discriminating theatregoers. . . . Too much credit cannot be given to Victor Seastrom for his handling of the production."

Times: "Nathaniel Hawthorne's tale has made ideal screen material. . . . Seastrom has fully captured its spirit and as a result has produced one of the best dramas of the year. . . . Lillian Gish's characterization is done in her best manner. . . . Excessively human. . . . 'The Scarlet Letter' is movie fare for the discriminating. . . . Will need no ballyhooing to insure a long and prosperous engagement."

"Lunatic At Large"—First National, Hippodrome, New York City

Times: "Leon Errol, stellar light in this comedy, gives a performance that could hardly be improved upon. There are comic interludes that elicit chuckles and then there are hilarious sequences that evidently appealed to the audience yesterday afternoon. This comedy is so good that it seems short, a true recommendation for any shadow entertainment."

World: "A most delightful exhibition of foolishness carried off by one of the most effective of our screen comics. How long, one wonders aimlessly, will Leon Errol continue to look upon the films as mere avocation."

Herald-Tribune: "A fast moving but always coherent comedy with a most ingenious plot. The scenes in the daffyhouse are extremely amusing—not the conventional thing at all."

Morning Telegraph: "'The Lunatic At Large' as a 'laugh-getter' is all wool. While crowded with humor, much of which is subtle and hilarious, the film does not lack thrills. Errol's antics on top of, in, and under a dirigible are as fraught with excitement as the wildest fan could demand. 'The Lunatic At Large' will leave you weak in the knees from laughter."

Daily News: "A large number of persons will laugh at this picture. I feel sure of that, because Monday's Hippodrome audience kept up a fusilade of giggles, chuckles and guffaws."

Edmund Lowe, whose work in "What Price Glory?" received much praise from the critics

Evening World: "'The Lunatic At Large' with Leon Errol comes to provide light entertainment and hilarity at the Hippodrome."

Evening Journal: "Errol's well-known trick legs and the scenes aboard the dirigible brought much appreciation from the audience."

Graphic: "Errol riotously funny as 'Lunatic At Large.' The Hippodrome this week has outdone all previous efforts in the cinema slice of its entertainment bill. 'The Lunatic At Large' is hilarious, riotous, clever comedy. The inimitable leg antics of the star, Leon Errol, alone would make the picture, but besides that there is a real plot, chock full of humorous incidents and laugh-provoking situations."

"When a Man Loves" and Vitaphone—Warner Bros., Selwyn Theatre, N. Y. City

Times: "Made an emphatic impression upon a brilliant gathering. Good entertainment with Mr. Barrymore in a gallant role. . . . Dolores Costello is extraordinarily beautiful. . . . Vitaphone . . . this orchestra effect was so good that there were many in the audience who forgot until the last minute there were no musicians in the pit."

Herald-Tribune: "John Barrymore . . . if you love his pictures, you'll love 'When a Man Loves.' . . . Dolores Costello is an exquisitely beautiful creature, and she is also a charming actress. Manon is the best thing she ever has done and anyone would be foolish to miss seeing her. . . . The picture is one of the handsomest things ever produced."

News: "There is plenty of action and the film certainly is not dull. . . . Miss Costello is beautiful."

Morning Telegraph: "A production of sheer beauty. . . . Dolores Costello acquits herself nobly. Barrymore is at his best. . . . 'When a Man Loves' will be acclaimed from the housetops. . . . The third Vitaphone show made the audience hold its breath."

Morning World: "Mr. Barrymore probably never worked either so hard or with such apparent sincerity. . . . The beauty of Dolores Costello is given its full play. Vitaphone . . . this device continues to be most amazing."

Evening World: "Excellent audience picture and will please Barrymore admirers. . . . Dolores Costello's Manon is satisfying."

Sun: "Warner Bros. with the same Mr. Barrymore who made a box-office sensation of 'Don Juan' have probably done the same for 'When a Man Loves.' . . . Miss Costello comes off, as usual, with a few more laurels to her credit. . . . Vitaphone is still supreme in its field."

Journal: "Manon, as played by the exquisitely languid Dolores Costello, is made sympathetic and Barrymore is dashingly romantic. . . . There's plenty of action."

Graphic: "It is a remarkable film in many ways. . . . Dolores Costello is the most exquisite actress on the screen. . . . The sets are remarkable, the photography splendid, and the direction fine."

Post: "The Barrymore profile and a happy ending combine to push 'When a Man Loves' into that group of films labeled 'sure at the box office.'"

Antonio Moreno, featured in the recent Paramount release, "It"

Mirror: "An impassioned love story played with palpitating abandon by John Barrymore and Dolores Costello. . . . Miss Costello is an astounding revelation."

American: "Is safely set for an indefinite run at the Selwyn Theatre. . . . Warner Bros. have been casting the foremost actor of the stage . . . in box office bets. . . . Dolores Costello is simply exquisite. . . . Dolores has beauty, ability and a generous supply of what Madame Glyn delicately refers to as 'It.'"

Telegram: "As an artistic achievement, the new 'special' has considerable claim to distinction. . . . Dolores Costello, than whom there is none more lovely in the shadow world, presents the best performance of the evening."

George Fawcett, who was last seen in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Flesh and the Devil"

SUPPOSE you had been in the Motion Picture Business for 287 Years ❧ ❧ ❧ ❧ ❧ ❧

❡ Suppose your family, reaching back generation upon generation, had been operating motion picture theatres for almost three centuries. Wouldn't you feel that your theatre was just a little better equipped to appeal to popular tastes . . . . to please your audiences . . . . than any other theatre possibly could be?

❡ That's just the way that Kilgen feels about pipe organs. It matters not whether an instrument is to serve in theatre, auditorium or church, if it is Kilgen-built it will fit its environment. Since 1640 the Kilgen Family has been building pipe organs. Doing nothing else. During that memorable span its craftsmen have contributed much to the development of the modern instrument.

❡ Kilgen's greatest achievement is the nation-known Kilgen Wonder Organ which in scores of communities provides "The Voice of Silent Drama," to delight millions of theatre-goers. Let us tell you how these Kilgen installations have affected the box-office returns of successful exhibitors.

HIT! Broadway crowds storm Rialto doors to see HAROLD LLOYD in "The Kid Brother".

New York isn't unique. "The Kid Brother" is due for record clean-ups in every town in the United States.

* * *

Because it's HAROLD LLOYD'S funniest and best. It's the perfect box office attraction. Critics and audiences are unanimous on that.

* * *

If you think you know your theatre's money capacity — play HAROLD LLOYD in "The Kid Brother" and learn how far you've underestimated!

Produced by the Harold Lloyd Corporation. A Paramount Release

TOP THIS ONE IF YOU CAN!

BORN TO BATTLE: Tom Tyler—I never did see a title fit like this one did. If he doesn't battle I have failed to ever see a battle, and to carry out the title the kid has a battle that absolutely sets the kids wild. . . . . . Out of the 800 that is made every year I do not believe I could have selected anything that would have filled the bill as good as this one did. I used "Born To Battle" for the kids' Christmas morning, but I had oodles of adults ask me after the show if I wouldn't run it in the afternoon instead of "The Freshman" which I was using. . . . . C. E. Longacre, Dixie Theatre, Dickson, Tenn.

Exhibitor Reports like this are coming in on all the Tom Tylers! This boy is coming through with REAL ACTION WESTERNS every time!

--Team Work

"It's the everlastin' team work of every bloomin' soul" that wins out in any keen competition. It's just as necessary in our business as elsewhere.

You get team work when you contract for Educational Pictures—cooperation for your benefit right from the first writing of a script, through all production efforts, physical distribution service, business building accessories, and national advertising and exploitation—team work right up to your box-office. And here's where you come in, as the most important member of the team.

After all, nobody else can make the final score; no one but you can roll those extra dollars into the till. But by joining in the team work you can, and you will. Consider the team work back of you before contracting for short subjects; and then get in the game by exploiting them properly yourself for added profits.

Educational's program for next season will soon be ready to announce—the program for Educational's biggest year. And supporting it will be the same kind of service and cooperation that have helped Educational to build steadily and surely for seven years.

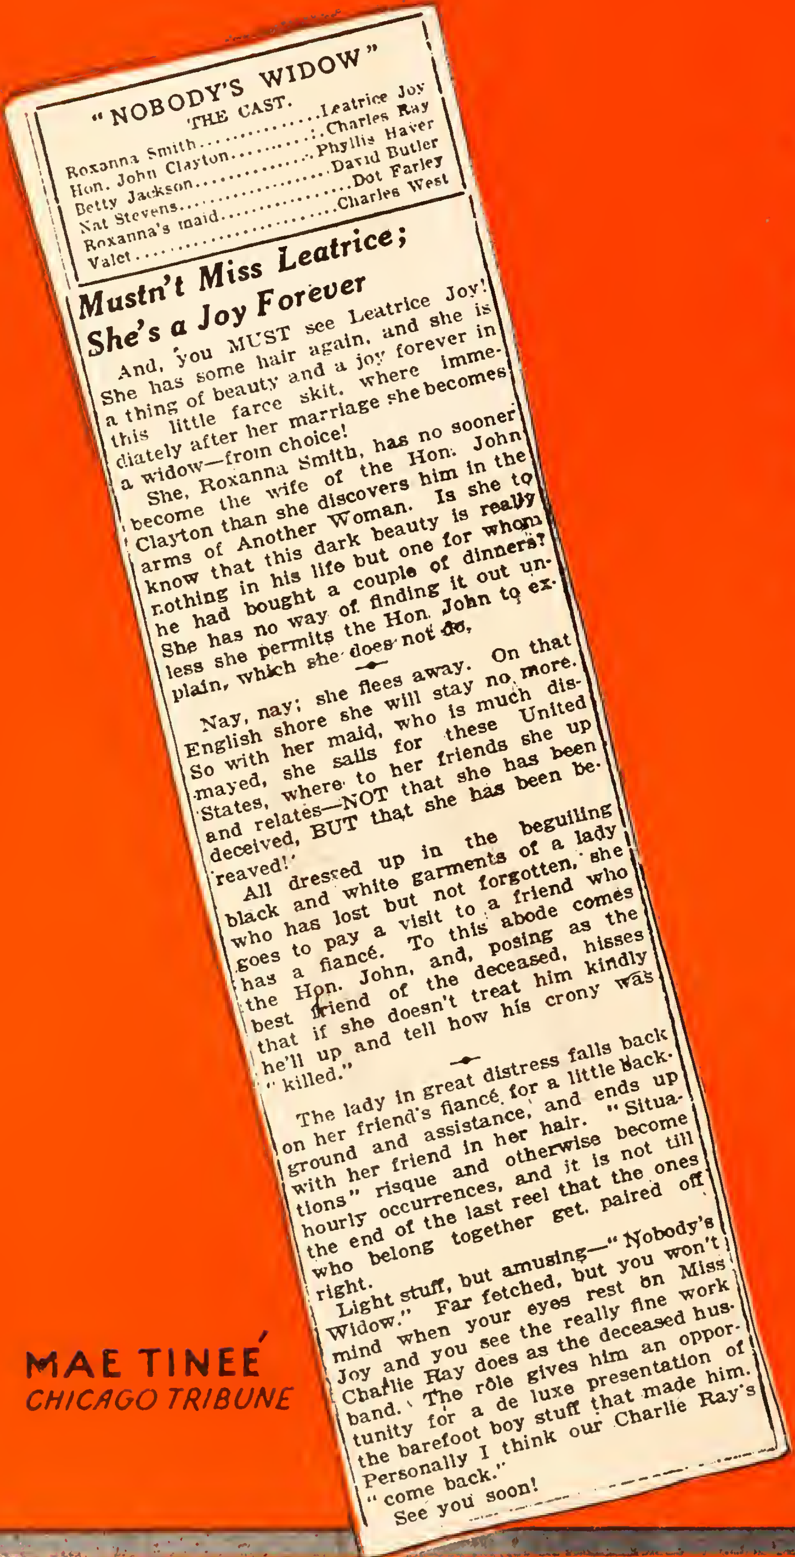
LEATRICE JOY IS "NOBODY'S WIDOW" AND



"NOBODY'S WIDOW"

THE CAST.

Roxanna Smith	Leatrice Joy
Hon. John Clayton	Charles Ray
Betty Jackson	Phyllis Haver
Nat Stevens	David Butler
Roxanna's maid	Dot Farley
Valet	Charles West

Mustn't Miss Leatrice; She's a Joy Forever

And, you MUST see Leatrice Joy! She has some hair again, and she is a thing of beauty and a joy forever in this little farce skit, where immediately after her marriage she becomes a widow—from choice!

She, Roxanna Smith, has no sooner become the wife of the Hon. John Clayton than she discovers him in the arms of Another Woman. Is she to know that this dark beauty is really nothing in his life but one for whom he had bought a couple of dinners? She has no way of finding it out unless she permits the Hon. John to explain, which she does not do,

Nay, nay; she flees away. On that English shore she will stay no more. So with her maid, who is much dismayed, she sails for these United States, where to her friends she up and relates—NOT that she has been deceived, BUT that she has been bereaved!'

All dressed up in the beguiling black and white garments of a lady who has lost but not forgotten, she goes to pay a visit to a friend who has a fiancé. To this abode comes the Hon. John, and, posing as the best friend of the deceased, hisses that if she doesn't treat him kindly he'll up and tell how his crony was "killed."

The lady in great distress falls back on her friend's fiancé for a little background and assistance, and ends up with her friend in her hair. "Situations" risque and otherwise become hourly occurrences, and it is not till the end of the last reel that the ones who belong together get paired off right.

Light stuff, but amusing—"Nobody's Widow." Far fetched, but you won't mind when your eyes rest on Miss Joy and you see the really fine work Charlie Ray does as the deceased husband. The rôle gives him an opportunity for a de luxe presentation of the barefoot boy stuff that made him. Personally I think our Charlie Ray's "come back."

See you soon!

EVENING AMERICAN

A KNOCKOUT, ACCORDING TO ROB REEL

CHARLIE RAY ALSO SCORES HIT IN STATE-LAKE SCREAM

"NOBODY'S WIDOW." Producers' Distributing Corporation photoplay. Offered at the State-Lake. From the stage play by Avery Hopwood. Direction by Donald Crisp. In the cast are Leatrice Joy, Charles Ray, Phyllis Haver and David Butler.

BY ROB REEL.

Exhibitors in town who are seeking a movie that will provoke a mountain of laughs ought not to overlook "Nobody's Widow." This is one of those films which come once in a blue moon—a farce that is not only screamingly funny but delightfully romantic as well. It puts the State-Lake on the map as showing the most enjoyable film among the current week's arrivals.

Ardent fans will want to see it not only because it is amusing but because of the fact that one of the most popular stars of the early days regains a semblance of his former favor in it. The man I refer to is Charles Ray.

For years a delineator of "rube" roles, Ray finally decided to break away from this type of characterization. He tried it in a number of pictures written and directed by himself, but they were mostly flops and the public said "thumbs down." A year or so ago he "came back" in a light comedy role that presaged great things. His work in "Nobody's Widow" proves again that he is one of the greatest masters of the art of pantomime—particularly humorous pantomime—on the screen today. One hopes that we will now see him in a whole series of farcial stories on this order.

RAVE OVER LEATRICE.

Leatrice Joy is vis-a-vis with Ray in this admirable little picture, and does so well that she forces one to absolutely rave over her. It's her picture, of course, for she is the star and the "Nobody's Widow" of the title. If I gushed I would probably say that Miss Joy is "darling" in the role. Not since "Manslaughter" has she been as fascinating, with the possible exception of "Eve's Leaves." She is unquestionably one of the biggest bets in pictures today.

While there is nothing absolutely new in the story of "Nobody's Widow," the direction by Donald Crisp is so excellent and the acting so good, the familiarity of the plot is never even suspected. All the action is novel and the thing has a fast moving quality about it that puts its humor over with a bang. Nothing misses—every little incident, every title "hits" the mark and the audience fairly wriggles with joy.

Leatrice plays the part of a young bride who, after a wild-fire courtship by a chap named John Clayton, finds her husband is really a young English peer. When, five minutes after the wedding, however, she catches him kissing a strange woman, she runs away, and then, because she is too proud to tell her friends of her new spouse's infidelity, pretends that John Clayton is dead and that she is a widow. Of course he turns up as the duke—of course they are both in love with one another, but, of course, they have an awful time getting their difficulties straightened out.

"CRISP" DIRECTION.

Crisp's treatment of "Nobody's Widow" has resulted in a film so crisp and spontaneous that it is utterly delightful (no pun intended). The love scenes between Leatrice and Charlie Ray in particular are the nicest I've seen on the screen in many a day. Where has this director been all our lives? we are apt to wonder. Any one with such an ability to make us laugh ought not be allowed to do roles of the "Battling Burrows' variety in tragedies like "Broken Blossoms."

Phyllis Haver is in the cast also and is better than ever before. Then there's David Butler contributing another of his splendid bits.

It looks as though everybody had an awfully good time making "Nobody's Widow." A good thing, too for every one seeing it is going to have an awfully good time also.

IN NEXT WEEK'S ISSUE

"THE SHOWMAN"

NEXT week's issue of Motion Picture News will contain a feature which will be of great interest and value to all our readers. This feature is "The Showman."

There will be presented, right through, from the first page to the last paragraph of this section, a story that has real ideas—ideas that not only aid in operating a theatre, but also direct intelligent study of such varied problems as theatre planning, decorating and similar subjects. Text matter that interprets literally the name "The Showman."

It is with real pleasure and gratification that Motion Picture News introduces this extension of its service to its readers—a service that we know will help make theatres operated by News readers the leaders in the forward movement of our growing industry.

Reserve now that spare hour you'll need next week in which to read "The Showman."

ONE hundred times funnier than the funniest thing you've ever seen—"The Better 'Ole"! Greater than the original cartoons, greater than the stage play through Syd Chaplin's inimitable characterization of "Old Bill." Quinn Martin of "The New York World" was right when he said, "It is the funniest, most uproarious stuff to be found!"

From coast to coast sides will ache at the antics, escapades and predicaments of this most famous of comedy personalities. You must see "Old Bill" as a horse's neck, as a spy in enemy headquarters—the quaintest, most lovable old fellow that ever wore mufti! A thousand thrills, a thousand laughs.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NEW YORK CITY, FEBRUARY 25, 1927 No. 8

Onward and Upward

AN army of newspaper reporters, besieging Thomas A. Edison on his eightieth birthday, queried him on almost every topic under the sun; and got crisp, characteristic answers.

Edison, "the father of the motion picture," was asked: "What is the future of motion pictures?" He replied: "Onward and upward."

Three words that say more than volumes of editorials. Analyze them: they emphasize present progress, look prophetically toward the future, and are in themselves a rallying cry for all of us.

Those three words ought to become famous in this industry by virtue of translation into deeds.

We are making rapid progress in all directions—in theatres, in production, in technique, in the addition of such marvels as the Vitaphone, in financial stability and in the all-important matter of public esteem.

So much for the present record. The Edison epigram calls for still further progress; and this we shall have, provided man-power measures up to responsibilities.

Only a few days before the Edison interview, S. R. Kent was giving his reply to the same question in an address before the A. M. P. A.

He spoke of the motion picture as a cause, calling for something more than commercial success, and directed his remarks specifically to the international situation.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON, Editor of Motion Picture News, returned this week from a visit to Europe. While abroad he made a study of the present vital international film situation.

Beginning with next week's issue, Mr. Johnston will discuss, editorially, and in special articles, the film relations of Europe and America, from first-hand observation and after mature and careful weighing of the facts.

There are many angles in the European situation which have never been discussed comprehensively in an American trade paper. These Mr. Johnston proposes to handle on the basis of things as they are and to help along a constructive solution of the international situation.

The greatness of the motion picture, he thought, would be determined by the extent of its service to mankind. Its greatness and the measure of its future.

These are not idle words set to the tune of a pretty idealism. They are a grave recognition of the "hymn of hate," which, as Mr. Kent pointed out, is being sung against America in Europe.

Well, the hymn is being sung. Of that there can be no doubt. So far it is heard mostly in the trade, and certain official quarters. The people of the various countries are not yet singing it so far as the motion picture is concerned. Quite the contrary.

Let us recognize the situation as it is. We shall get nowhere by feigning ignorance about it. What we must do, as Mr. Kent so ably said, is to dispel the antagonism by looking at Europe's problems with sympathy and understanding.

The motion picture itself is a great agency for world concord. By its universal language, the screen brings nations face to face with each other, removing misunderstandings, and breaking down national barriers.

The industry is in need of adopting as its own trade code this very quality of the screen itself. The motion picture is truly international; the trade is not yet so.

But it should be, in the name of all that is right and all that is commercially sound.

We shall do well if we make the achievement of true internationalization, through the Kent formula of sympathy and understanding, our immediate concern; and thus respond, on a world scale, to Mr. Edison's challenge, "Onward and upward!"

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

NEW YORK state educators connected with the State department in Albany, N.Y., are much interested these days in the development of the talking picture and its possibilities from the standpoint of instruction. Although the state department has not officially gone on record as being in favor of the talking film, the officers are investigating each machine and it may not be long before several of these are installed in certain schools and proving their actual worth. At a meeting of instructors held in Albany last week, at the University club, A. J. Stoddard, superintendent of public schools in Schenectady, declared that the speaking movie would completely revolutionize education.

Mr. Stoddard said that in teaching foreign languages, the speaking movie would unquestionably bring about greater results than any other method outside of the actual mingling with persons whose language was being studied. He declared that the schools of New York state did not use motion pictures to the extent they should. Mr. Stoddard has carefully investigated the machine which was recently demonstrated in Schenectady, by the General Electric Company.

Elsewhere in this issue will be found the story of some of the most recent developments in the synchronized sound films.

Honest Sincerity

FROM the Dallas Morning News we clip this paragraph of comment, the honesty of which deserves emulation by other critics. It is contained in the review of a picture:

"One nice thing about this, as well as other William Fox pictures, is that it never pretends to be anything but what it is. There is a certain charm about naivety and unpretentiousness that silences the slanderous tongue and stays the malicious typewriting fingers."

Record Gross Expected

CONSTANT capacity is the rule this week at the Paramount Theatre, New York, where Paul Whiteman and his band are featured in connection with "The Third Degree." A fifth de luxe show is being given during the supper hour, which gives a quicker turnover, and it is not altogether impossible that the theatre will reach $90,000 on the week, an absolute record. It is difficult to estimate with accuracy because of the extra show, but it will be very surprising if it does not go over $85,000.

The Mark Strand is doing so well this week with "McFadden's Flats" that it will be held for a third week. Only three other pictures have been held over for a third week at the Strand in its 13 years—"Monsieur Beaucaire," "The Gold Rush" and "Girl Shy."

"The Kid Brother" at the Rialto gained last week, and is now doing around $40,000 weekly. It is figured to be good for a six-weeks' run, at a gross over the $200,000 mark. "Old Ironsides" goes along about the same as before, and there is little change on the roadshow pictures, as a whole.

The Capitol Theatre is playing "The Red Mill," which is doing somewhat better than "The General" did last week. Probably a gross of about $55,000 will be recorded. Next week brings "The Scarlet Letter," which should do materially better and will doubtless go over for a two-week run without difficulty.

The Vitaphone shows are doing well, and the opening of a second John Barrymore-Vitaphone attraction does not seem to have had any material effect on the first one.

Business as a whole may be said to be good, with the holiday last Saturday boosting things generally.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

Kathryn Perry, one of the beautiful and promising young actresses on the Fox Films roster, has been selected to play the feminine lead in "Is Zat So?"

Patsy Ruth Miller, chosen as Monte Blue's leading lady in "Wolf's Clothing" by Warner Bros., dons a blonde wig to play the role of a maid who parades as her mistress

Diana Kane, who is a brilliantly promising screen actress in addition to being Lois Wilson's sister, has gone West to work under Samuel Goldwyn's guidance

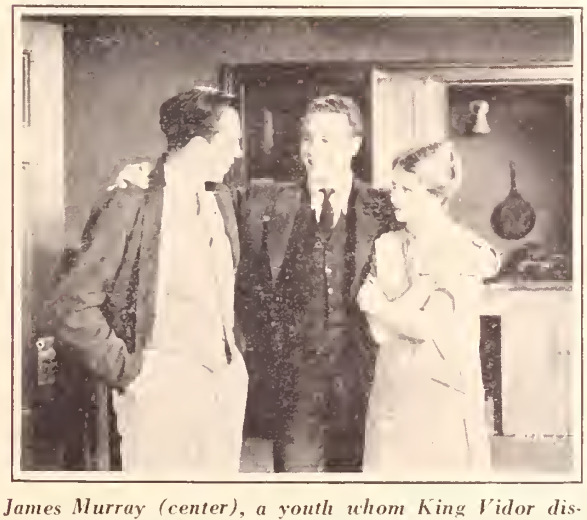
The Smith Family

GOVERNOR AL SMITH, of New York, is not the only member of his family to be a warm friend of motion pictures. Emily Smith Warner, his daughter, is taking an active part, along with other society women in Albany, in handling the boys and girls who troop each Saturday morning to Harmanus Bleecker Hall for the Junior Movies. Last Saturday, all the children attending received a valentine as they entered the theatre.

A Polite Protest

E. A. DUPONT, the director of "Variety," now director-general of British National Pictures, Ltd., in England, writes us this week to take exception to statements made by L. C. Moen in the Holiday issue of THE NEWS, under the title, "In Nine Languages—including the Scandinavian," in which it was intimated that "Variety" was more the result of the happy combination of star, story, director, cast, cameraman, producer, etc., than of sheer directorial ability. This was, of course, put forth as a purely personal opinion, but since Mr. Dupont puts his protest politely and reasonably, and does not even ask us to print his letter, we are only too happy to publish his side of the matter.

He accuses the author of bad logic in praising Jannings for his work in "Variety" and in the same article questioning the value of this star to American pictures. This is perhaps because Mr. Dupont has read only a condensed translation in the German papers. The point was that Jannings was a master in the theatrical, pantomimic type of film, such as "Variety," but that in the more naturalistic American film his essentially Continental acting would be out of key with the rest of the pro-



James Murray (center), a youth whom King Vidor discovered and thought so promising he gave him the central role in his picture temporarily titled "The Mob," photographed with Vidor and Eleanor Boardman, who plays the leading feminine role

Gloria Swanson, whose new picture, "The Love of Sunya" (United Artists), will open the Roxy Theatre in New York, inscribes her autograph aloft on the wall

Vera Steadman, an Educational-Christie comedienne, broadcasts a series of setting up exercises, illustrated, of course, with appropriate gestures

Margaret Morris, F.B.O. star of "The Magic Garden" and "Moulders of Men," is visited by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel V. Morris of Minneapolis duction and therefore seen to less advantage than in a German film.

Mr. Dupont then agrees that Lya de Putti is an excellent artist in the right role, that Karl Freund is a camera genius, that Erich Pommer is a great producer, etc. He points out that the author of the manuscript was himself, which we admit was overlooked. The article, however, discussed him as a director and not as a scenarist—and story was not the strongest point in "Variety's" merits. He then says:

J. Leo Meehan signing his new three-year contract with F. B. O., which took effect on February 1. In the photo are J. I. Schnitzer, senior vice-president; De Witt, attorney; and Meehan

"I cannot understand why, with regard to this film, you are prepared to give everybody the credit due to them and withold it from the director, although I can honestly say that there can be no valid reason for your doing so. You can see all who took part in this film in other films, and you will then be able to form your own judgment as to whether those concerned reached the same high standard in those films as they did under my direction in 'Variety.' "

Summing this up, and without wishing to create controversy, we wish to thank Mr. Dupont for his amiable and sane manner of reproof. If we have withheld credit due him, we are sorry, but must point out again that in The News it was put forth as a personal opinion only, in a signed article, while the German papers made it appear to be an expression from Motion Picture News, which it distinctly was not. In closing, the author's judgment was based on these things:

1. Viewing the film four times and forming a decided opinion as to its strong and weak points. 2. Interviewing Mr. Dupont at his hotel in New York. 3. Seeing other German films made by Mr. Dupont prior to "Variety." 4. Seeing other films photographed by Freund. 5. Seeing Jannings and de Putti in other films. 6. Discussing the matter with various German production men, editors, etc. 7. Direct accounts of the filming of "Love Me and the World is Mine" at Universal City, and 8. Watching Mr. Dupont, Mr. Jannings, Mr. Freund and Miss de Putti at work on "Variety" in the studios in Berlin.

With Vidor in Texas

THE current presentation of "The Big Parade," in Houston, Tex., recalls the first picture made by King Vidor, director of this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production.

Some twelve years ago, a Texas boy not yet twenty years old, was director, photographer, scenario writer and editor of a weekly serial sponsored by the Houston Chronicle and tacked on to the regular news weekly this paper supplied to the theatres of greater Houston. "Who Is Barbara?" was the title of this first film fiction directed and produced by young Vidor. It is an interesting transition from the adventures of Barbara to the medal-winning epic,"The Big Parade," which is now playing a ten-day engagement at the Auditorium Theatre in Houston.

A view of Leo Maloney's Western city at Skyland, in the San Bernardino Mountains, California, where his Westerns for Pathe are made. It comprises some fifty buildings, many of them practical, and several punchers are on hand the year around to look after the livestock and the ranch

Following the news-reel experience, King Vidor made short-reel subjects of industrial life and then a series of two-reel comedies which, however, did not make a noticeable impression. Then came a pioneer trip to Hollywood in 1915 and for three years Vidor worked as cameraman, assistant director and actor. After three years he grasped the opportunity to direct his own pictures and he attracted some attention by producing "The Turn in the Road." A little later came "The Jack-Knife Man." The originality shown in these early efforts attracted the attention of the larger producers and fame and fortune followed.

Welcome Home, Lou!

LOUIS P. KRAMER, who brightened many an editor's dull days as press agent for F. B. O., Universal, and the Thomas H. Ince organization, and who left our midst to return to his first love, Chicago, will once more grace the editorial sanctum sanctorums of Broadway, according to gladsome tidings received this week. From B. & K. in Chicago Lou went to Detroit as publicity representative of the Kunsky interests—and now he returns to New York with a leading distributor. We know of no better press agent than Lou (a dangerous statement, but we stick to it) and it will be good to have him back again.

Fred C. Quimby, newly associated with Hal Roach studios, and W. B. Frank, vice-president and New York representative, arrive in Los Angeles and are met by Roach and Martha Sleeper, who promptly sells them tickets for the Wampas Frolic

Wide-awake Miss Sleeper

MARTHA SLEEPER, 16-year-old comedienne, made her debut in Los Angeles on Thursday night with the Wampas Baby Stars of 1928 at the annual frolic, which is the event of the season in the picture colony. She succeeded to the place vacated by Jean Navelle because of ill health. Miss Sleeper began her career in the East at the age of ten in the ballet of the Metropolitan Opera House. She showed a natural bent for comedy, and was discovered by Hal Roach, who made her an important member of "Our Gang." More recently she has appeared in various Roach comedies for Pathe, and a brilliant future has been predicted for her by several directors. She is a daughter of the late William J. Sleeper, former Montana Congressman.

An Interesting Race

WHICH is the speedier—the stork or the typewriter? In this one case, at least, the typewriter won, for Lenore J. Coffee, prominent scenarist at the DeMille studio, who in private life is Mrs. William Cowen, wife of DeMille's assistant director, has been writing the screen version of Samuel Merwin's novel, "Silk," for the last two months and recently completed the last scene in time to enter the Good Samaritan hospital, where she expects the arrival of the stork at any moment.

Johnny Hines, First National comedian, refuses to take Numa seriously when the leonine performer demands larger type in the billing of "All Aboard," but Charles Hines, at the left, his brother and director, seems somewhat uneasy and sort of wonders if Numa hadn't ought to have its way

And He Was the Sixth That Day!

IF you have ever seen the comedian minus make-up, you can hardly blame the oldest doorman in point of service at the Mark Strand Theatre, New York City, for turning a cold shoulder on Chester Conklin, one of the stars in "McFadden's Flats," now playing at the theatre. The comedian made a "personal appearance" at the entrance door Sunday afternoon, and notwithstanding the crowds, expected to be admitted pronto.

Two of Columbia's feminine stars, who staged surprise weddings last week. Virginia Browne Faire (right) stopped "Pleasure Before Business" long enough to marry Jack Daugherty, and Shirley Mason became the bride of Sidney Landfield immediately after completing "The Wreck"

"I'm Chester Conklin," he told the doorman, rather timidly. "I'd like to go in."

The doorman looked over and called a couple of policemen who were keeping the crowds in line. Conklin repeated his story, but the officers were not only skeptical but decided that the man might be a fit subject for the psychopathic ward at Bellevue Hospital. They were leading the protesting comedian away when Joseph Plunkett, managing director at the Mark Strand, saw the commotion in the lobby and investigated. Conklin's appearance is very different off the screen, but Mr. Plunkett recognized him and saved the genial comedian from a miserable hour or so.

College Photoplay Filmed

EDMUND GOULDING, M-G-M director, showed the students of Mrs. Frances Taylor Patterson's class in photoplay composition, at Columbia University, how pictures are made, on Monday evening. The two-reel production, "Women Love Diamonds," was filmed before the class, and will be shown to it later. "Women Love Diamonds" is also the title of Mr. Goulding's latest M-G-M picture.

Added Attraction

THE next three games of the Motion Picture Basketball League will include a dance, as the result of action taken at a recent meeting. These will be at Stuyvesant High School, New York City, February 18, March 4 and March 25. Pathe is leading in the tournament, with Fox second.

Einfeld-Band Engagement

S. CHARLES EINFELD, assistant director of advertising and publicity of First National, and Miss May Band, of Brooklyn, will be married in June, it was announced this week. Einfeld is Vice-President of the A. M. P. A.

Kofeldt a Daddy Now

WALTER W. KOFELDT, president of Imported Pictures Corporation, became a proud father on January 30 with the arrival of Elsa Jeanne Kofeldt, weighing eight pounds, in San Francisco. Mother and daughter are doing nicely.

Reuben Lucius (Rube) Goldberg, creator of the comic strip, "Mike and Ike, They Look Alike," and the players who will portray his brain-children in the Stern Bros. comedy series for Universal. Center—Charles King and Charles Dorety as Mike and Ike; right—Thelma Daniels, who will furnish the pulchritudinous element, without which no comedy is complete.

Movies by Radio

WHILE inventors struggle with the problem of transmitting motion pictures by radio, Paramount stole a march on them on Tuesday night during the Eveready Hour by broadcasting the filming of "Knockout Reilly" through the 20 stations served by the National Broadcasting Company. The stunt had a real "kick" to it, and we found it almost more interesting than an actual visit to the studio, since the essentially humdrum, monotonous repetition and waiting were blue-pencilled.

Four scenes, lending themselves easily to the ether form of entertainment, were enacted by the principals of the cast and broadcast by Graham McNamee, nationally known announcer. Dix, Mary Brian, Jack Renault and Malcolm St. Clair, director, were the principal studio lights before the "Mike."

Jimmy De Forest, Patsy Haley, Billy McPartland and other well known boxing figures were in the ring during the broadcasting.

The hour of entertainment took the radio and motion picture fans into the studio, and there they heard the voices of the actors, the megaphoned instructions of the director, the shouts of the extras, the crackle of the Klieg lights and the orchestra accompaniment to dramatic scenes. McNamee described the sights of the studio with graphic picturesqueness.

The first scene broadcast was that of a cabaret, with Dix and Miss Brian participating. The jazz music of the cabaret was sent over the air during the performance of this scene. Next followed the prison scene with Dix; then the dressing room of the star as "Knockout Reilly." Climaxing the hour of production was the fight between Dix and Renault.

Patheites Shine

LAST Saturday evening saw the social bow of the six-months-old Pathe Club as host to the industry at large with its first Annual Movie Ball at the Roosevelt Hotel, New York City. The affair was a great success and did great credit to the entire club, from President L. S. Diamond down. Rutgers Neilson, as Master of Ceremonies, assembled and presented a corking show, including a group of Keith-Albee acts, the Carter-Waddell dancers, the Cochran twins, Arthur Bourbon, Jimmy Pendleton and Mary Denise, Bernard Gorcey, Leonard St. Leo, the Theo Creo dancers, Moiret and Fredi, Constantin Kobeloff dancers, Natalia, Belle Brooks and Charles Shepherd, Robey Lyle, Ada Howard, Marie Rialto, Hamid Bey, Mary and Margaret Gibbs, and James C. Morton. The program reflected great credit on Rutgers' ability to pick 'em and to put 'em on. And need we say that "a good time was had," etc.? Of course not.

O'Neill Takes Horace Greeley's Advice

JOSEPH JEFFERSON O'NEILL, one of the best known newspaper men in New York, left on Thursday, February 17, for the Pacific coast. He is to stay there for at least six months writing scenarios for F. B. O. This decision on the part of the company to send him west came as the result of work which Joe had done since he ceased doing publicity for the same organization. Before he joined the Kennedy outfit O'Neill was for several years with the Hays organization.

Prior to his entry into the moving picture game Joe was a star reporter on the New York World. That was the period when Donald Clark, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's publicity staff, was competing on the same paper with this newest scenarist for the honor of writing the best stories and scoring the greatest number of beats. Joe also did publicity for Henry Ford's Peace Ship expedition.

Jefferson's impending departure could have been announced a week ago. At Joe's own suggestion, because he is sufficiently modest to dislike crowds—seeing him off on a trans-continental trip, the news was held over until he was two days on his way.

Schenck Approves Abbey Plan

JOSEPH M. SCHENCK has approved the proposed plan for a memorial abbey to be erected in Hollywood. In this mausoleum will be placed the remains of those individuals who by their various achievements have won niches in the Motion Picture Hall of Fame. There are scores of persons whose lifetime achievements are worthy of such recognition, according to Mr. Schenck, and this memorial would be a fitting and lasting tribute to those who have contributed in a creative way to that great medium of expression—the motion picture screen.

Feist Enthusiastic

FELIX F. FEIST, general manager of sales and distribution for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, returned from a tour of the country this week filled with enthusiasm over picture conditions. Everywhere, he reported, business was remarkable, with long lines at the box-office and exhibitors optimistic. Mr. Feist, of course, attributes much of this to M-G-M product, which he says is stimulating interest in pictures generally.

Departing Executive Feted

JOSEPH FREEDMAN, veteran Universal sales executive, recently general manager of the New York exchange and newly appointed Universal supervisor for Europe, was given a farewell luncheon by his associates at the Hotel Buckingham, New York, on the eve of his departure on the Majestic. Paul Gulick was toastmaster, and the speakers included Earl Kramer, M. Van Praag and Dave Brill.

Polish Film to Be Shown

ON Sunday afternoon at the Hotel Astor, New York, a Polish film, "Destiny of Russia," will be shown to the press. It was produced by K. S. Rymowicz of Poland, and depicts the Russian revolution.

Simon Holds Exhibit

HOWARD SIMON, former art director of Chadwick and assistant art director of Goldwyn, is holding an exhibition of paintings, drawings and wood cuts at the Art Center, 165 East 56th Street, New York, from February 15 to 29.

Kent Discusses Situation Abroad

Urges Sympathy and Understanding as Only Means of Dispelling Anti-American Feeling in Europe

THE future of the motion picture can be determined only by the extent to which the industry serves mankind.

This was the keynote of the address given by Sidney R. Kent, general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, at last week's luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York. Mr. Kent spoke as one of the immortals of the industry selected 18 months ago by the A. M. P. A.

"Dollars and cents," said Mr. Kent, "must not be the only consideration of the people of this industry.

"However," he said, "we are in a fortunate position, for our business is one which is profitable and which at the same time serves humanity. And only to the extent to which it serves can it be profitable, and progress beyond the limits which bound an ordinary commercial undertaking.

"It is you men of the advertising and publicity departments who can carry the message of the motion picture to the world. In your work you must look far beyond the dollar. Your copy must convey to the public here and abroad the true purpose of the screen.

"Not until shortly after the war did I appreciate fully the real mission of the screen. Before that time I had looked upon it as a field for my own advancement. Right after the war, however, I was in the town of Lille, France. There were not more than a half a dozen buildings with roofs. Brick factories had been established, and all day long the women of this town labored and slaved, many of them trudging along in harness beside animals, in rehabilitating their property. At night these women, worn from their work, gathered in a building which had been used as a stable by the Germans, and enjoyed the thrill of a motion picture. I was proud that night for the picture was a Paramount picture, 'The City of Silent Men.' All through the war-stricken country this same service was being rendered by the motion picture industry.

SIDNEY R. KENT

"It was then that I awoke to the realization that the motion picture could not be purely a commercial proposition. I knew then that it could, and must, serve mankind and I knew that only to the extent to which we did serve would we be repaid."

The general manager of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation said that recently he and Will H. Hays were discussing certain current newspapers and theatrical attractions, and they had reached the conclusion that the motion picture was the only white sheep left. Its desire to serve, he said, had placed the motion picture on this high plane. Responsible, also, he said, was the advancement in motion picture advertising.

Touching briefly upon the foreign situation, he said that it was his opinion that if Russia would open its doors to American pictures, conditions in that country would be stabilized.

"We must face the fact," he declared, "that America is the richest country and the most unpopular. A hymn of hate is being sung by European countries. In motion pictures I believe we have the medium through which this feeling of antagonism may be dispelled. But it can be dispelled only if we look at their problems and aims with sympathy and understanding.

"I remember talking with one of the big men of England and he told me at that time, 'We didn't ask you over.' I don't think I ever heard the situation explained more pertinently. Yet, our films are being shown in foreign countries, and if we continue to serve mankind they will continue to be exhibited."

"Better Take the Kent Slant," Says Adler, of Kine

The following communication has been received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS from Bert Adler, American representative of KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY, London:

IT has taken Sidney R. Kent to "speak out." Despite the fact that foreign exhibitors couldn't exist today without American films, they are singing a "Hymn of Hate" for us in the lands across the seas, and the sooner the American industry wakes up to it the better. The same week that Mr. Kent "spoke out" at the A. M. P. A., another American executive relayed a piffle statement to the trade press to the effect that they loved us more than ever abroad and Europe alone would soon contribute fifty per cent. of an American film's total gross! If we want Europe to contribute even twenty-five per cent. of the gross, we had better take the Kent slant, and we had better move to take the hate out of the hymn.

As the representative here for many years of the London trade paper that sponsored the strongest foreign exhibitors' body now in existence—I refer to "Kine" and to the C. E. A. of Great Britain—it has been my happy privilege to know many of the trade leaders on the other side. I know, for instance, that the C. E. A. membership is not only heartily for American films—as a matter of good business—but has been in the forefront of the fight on the proposed British film quota regulations. I am sure that Major Herron, foreign expert of the Hays organization, will confirm this.

Yet here we have this friendly exhibitor body voting its third boycott against American films. And they need the very films they are banning! How comes this strange attitude? I doubt if all the reports Mr. Kent could get from his agents abroad, would give the cue; but I am certain that the reports that exhibitors across the pond get from this side (if Mr. Kent could see them) would thoroughly enlighten him. Reports of sharp practice on the part of large producing-exhibiting interests against small exhibiting interests. Reports of using one's own product as a club to drive the "invaded" exhibitor into an unprofitable or unwelcome partnership (Please remember that the British exhibitor is an individualist, who likes "the game" as much as the money in it, and who doesn't want to be replaced by the janitor or small-boy type of manager just because there may be financial indemnification.)

The incongruous situation of exhibitors making a move that can only injure them

F. P.-L. Profits $7.52 per Share on Common Stock

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in its consolidated statement (which includes the earnings of subsidiary companies) reports net profits of $1,052,829.77 for the three months and $3,640,338.34 for the nine months to October 2, 1926, after deducting all charges and reserves for Federal income and other taxes.

After allowing for payment of dividends on the preferred stock, the above earnings amount to $7.52 per share on the common stock for the nine months' period, based on the average number of shares of common stock outstanding during that period.

Jesse Lasky on Way East to Outline Entire Forthcoming Schedule

HAVING completed plans for production on the West Coast which will keep the Famous studios busy well into the summer, Jesse L. Lasky has started East with Walter Wanger, general manager of production, where he will outline the entire forthcoming schedule of Paramount product. During his stay on the Coast Mr. Lasky authorized the erection of new buildings necessitated by increased production.

Before entraining for the East Mr. Lasky viewed portions of three Paramount road-show pictures slated for early release, "The Rough Riders," "Wings" and "The Wedding March"; he also inspected parts of several special pictures. The Paramount vice-president stated that his company will bend its energies to raising the program feature to a higher standard than it has reached in the past.

Pathe Staff Promotions

McCormick "Review" Editor, Mack Heads Publicity, Exploitation; Aiken Mid-West Sales Mgr.

Pathe executives who have been promoted to higher stations in the organization: left to right: W. A. V. Mack, exploitation and publicity manager; S. Barret McCormick, Editor Pathe Review, and F. C. Aiken, Mid-West division sales manager

SEVERAL Pathe executives were promoted to higher stations in the organization during the past week. J. E. Storey, assistant general manager in charge of short subject production, elevated S. Barret McCormick from his position as director of exploitation and publicity to the post of editor of Pathe Review, and Phil Ryan, who has held various important positions with the company, is to be temporarily in charge of Pathe units on the West Coast.

Harry Scott, general sales manager, appointed W. A. V. (Bill) Mack to the post formerly occupied by Mr. McCormick, and F. C. Aiken, assistant sales manager of the Mid-West division, gets Mack's former job. These changes have already taken effect and the various officials are already busy at their new tasks.

Pathe believes exhibitors can look forward to a greater magazine reel under Mr. McCormick's editorship, as his previous training includes theatre managerment, production, exchange experience and newspaper work. Phil Ryan was feature sales manager for Pathe about a year and for some time was a partner in the Capitol Theatre Enterprises, operating a circuit in the mid-western states.

Mr. Mack's early work, first on the college paper at Syracuse University, from which he graduated as a mechanical engineer, the management of Keith's Crescent Theatre, Syracuse, and as branch manager for the General Film Company has given him a good background for his new duties. He has been with Pathe for the past six years serving as branch manager, short subject sales manager and mid-western division sales manager. It is due to the exploitation and publicity methods he used in promoting Pathe pictures that he won his present position, says Pathe.

Fred C. Aiken, new Mid-West Division Sales Manager, joined Pathe in October, 1923, when he was appointed branch manager in Chicago. He continued in that post until June, 1925, when he became district manager, and in April, 1926, was selected for the position of assistant Mid-West division sales manager.

"Better Take the Kent Slant," Says Adler

financially, such as has just occurred at Birmingham, is due to the fact that there are so few Kents on this side to give us the proper angle. The majority viewpoint in the American industry continues to be, "Oh, it's just noise over there; they've got to have our pictures, anyway!" Of course they do, but their quotas are getting tighter all the time—and our theatre investments in their countries are growing larger! Now that we know that the pocketbook side of the argument isn't all-important, can't we give attention to the human angle?

Meeting these visitors from foreign lands as I must, I know, for instance, that:

With the exception of Mr. Kent's company and one other, a visiting foreign producer cannot receive decent consideration for his product—if screened at all, it isn't to important executives but to joke committees.

Foreign producers with new propositions are not seriously received and their propositions promptly rejected if unacceptable; they are fooled around with for precious months, alibied to and "kidded" by executive after executive, soft-soaped with promises based on our alleged "reciprocity" ideas—and finally sent back singing a hymn of hate.

I know of a visiting editor who found that the most interesting thing in the New York industry "was the way your executives break their appointments." And one of these executives is given a well-attended trade dinner whenever he goes to London, where he breathes good-will to the suckers there assembled.

But even suckers will awake in time!

Recently an American film company sent six men to take European posts. How or why they were picked, is still a mystery. They were all Go-Getters, primed in the sales department motto of "Our Films Are Indispensable!" and I understand that they let foreign exhibitors know it, for they were all back in eight months.

But still the old offensive (to foreign ears) blah-blah goes on. Contrast Kent's plea that we "look at their (the Europeans') problems and aims with sympathy and understanding" with this, delivered by another of our executives the same week: "Despite talk of contingents and restrictive measures, I do not believe that American pictures can be supplanted. (As if anybody else did!) This industry is supplying foreign people with the entertainment they desire. Foreign governments and film interests lose sight of this fact."

Not while we think it sound policy to remind them of it!

F. P.-L. Declares Regular Quarterly Dividend

At a meeting held this week the board of directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2.00 per share on common stock, payable April 1, 1927, to stockholders of record at the close of business on March 15, 1927. The books will not close.

Frank Lloyd, director, has terminated his contract with Famous Players-Lasky according to an announcement made this week by B. P. Schulberg, West Coast executive of Paramount. The director is now putting the finishing touches to "Children of Divorce," which features Esther Ralston, Clara Bow, Gary Cooper and Einar H. Hanson.

Better No Script Than Words

Part Three of a Series Analyzing the Failure of Continuity; D. W. Griffith Endorses Idea

(Editor's Note—This series seeks to explore a largely unconsidered field, and THE NEWS will welcome comment, for or against, from its readers. They do not necessarily represent the views of the Editor.)

By L. C. Moen

THERE are two ways, and two only, in which a motion picture may be made with any assurance of satisfactory visual results. The first is Improvisation, the second Composition. In neither of these methods does the present type of continuity (word-script) play any vital role. We have pointed out that Rhythm and Composition are the basic elements through which Story and Acting are conveyed to the spectator; that without their proper use a strong story and the finest acting go for naught; that you cannot photograph a scene without bringing in movement and light, whether you are conscious of their use or not; that a continuity is a convenient series of memoranda from which plans for a picture may be prepared, but that in itself it does not constitute preparation; and, above all, that you cannot plan or express Composition and Rhythm in words alone.

Take the most interesting scene imaginable, written by a clever scenarist and enacted by gifted players, photograph it so that your composition leads the eye to the wrong place at the wrong time and your tempo opposes the desired dramatic effect, and you will have very little.

Take a commonplace scene, expressing no strong emotion and containing no striking situation or business, photograph it in an unusual and interesting composition and create a pleasing rhythm—and that scene will interest the spectator. (We are not referring to the arty, high-hat spectator, either, but to anyone from an Australian bushman to a university professor. Bear in mind that while there are still savage tribes too low to have even a place of dwelling, no tribe has ever been found which did not have some form of music; pictures, of course, even preceded words. A spectator does not have to be conscious of Rhythm and Composition to be powerfully swayed by them, should not be conscious of them, in fact, and he need not even be aware that such things exist.)

Visualization

The degree of interest which can be given to a scene is limited by its Content, but it is Form which gives it that interest, or at least develops and heightens it. If this were not true, it would be possible to read a scene in a script and say at once: "That will make a good scene," or "That will be uninteresting." As it is, no one can say until it is in the projection room—that is, until it has been shown in visual form. Proper Composition and Rhythm can make a mediocre scene interesting; bad use of them can spoil the best of scenes.

Now in order to bring Rhythm and Composition to bear on our story, someone must visualize it. If that man is the continuity writer, and he converts his visual images into words, someone else must visualize it all over again and much of his work is wasted. The person who does the final visualization creates the motion picture, obviously.

Picture Representatives Approve Vestal Bill

REPRESENTATIVES of the motion picture industry went to Washington on February 10 and expressed their approval of the Vestal bill, under which all holders of interests in copyrights would be permitted to register such interest in the Copyright Office, at a hearing before the House Committee on Patents.

Only the representatives of the Authors' League appeared in opposition to the measure, to which objection was raised on the ground that it did not sufficiently protect the author. This contention was refuted by other witnesses, who declared that the author was fully protected under the bill.

A great deal of additional work would be imposed upon the Copyright Office under the proposed change, it was declared by Registrar Solberg, which would necessitate additional appropriations.

A. W. Weil, representative of the Hays organization, and other motion picture representatives expressed their desire to have the bill enacted, declaring that it would materially simplify matters because holders of copyright interests could protect themselves directly instead of being required, as at present, to secure their protection through the copyright holder.

There are three stages at which the story may be visual before it is completed—in the script, on the set and in the projection room. Only the second and third are used to any extent today. This method of working out effects as you go—in which the present script is of scant assistance—we may call Improvisation. The ultimate method, as yet almost untried, of creating the effects within the script in advance, may be rightly termed Composition. Once more we put Mr. Webster on the stand:

IMPROVISE. (2) To bring about, arrange, or make, of a sudden, or without previous preparation.

COMPOSE. (3) To construct by mental labor; to design and execute, or put together, in a manner involving the adaptations of forms of expression to ideas, or to the laws of harmony or proportion.

This should make the distinction obvious. The man who improvises creates as he goes; the man who composes plans ahead, and "fits forms of expression to ideas."

Throw Away the Script!

The non-visual script is of so little value in actual filming that one of two things should be done: Throw away the script entirely, or make it visual, embracing Rhythm and Composition. That statement may seem arbitrary—but every really prominent production man or director it has been discussed with has agreed with it. The only exceptions have been the studio managers and business executives who want the script for cost estimates (as though they meant anything from the present script!) shooting schedules and purposes of record generally. That is their chief value.

Remember, we are not belittling the value of the story development, incident, business and the like contributed by the scenario writer. They are necessary—but put him on the set as a gag man or an assistant, or a consultant, or what not. So long as scripts remain literary, there is small value in having him write them. They must be visual, and the present form of script makes this impossible.

Two things are almost axiomatic in the picture industry: 1. You must have a script, and the man who works without one is a waster. 2. No director pays any attention to the script. The contradiction is obvious—yet both are largely true. The reason is simple. The director reads the script and from it forms a visual conception of the story; from that point on he really directs from that visual conception in his own mind, and not from the word script. Except for purposes of record and account, the script might as well be discarded on the first day of shooting, in most cases. All production today is largely, or at least partly, Improvisation. Composition is still in the future.

Griffith On Scripts

The greatest exponent of Improvisation, of course, is D. W. Griffith. It is a tradition of the industry that scripts mean nothing to Mr. Griffith—that he throws them away without reading and goes out and shoots five million feet of film to obtain enough material to make a picture. We doubted the literal truth of that, but thought that no one should be so well informed on the matter as D. W. Griffith, so to Mr. Griffith we went.

Briefly we sketched the theory advanced in these articles—that present scripts are almost useless because they are a thing of words and not cinema (hoping for agreement from him on that point); but that a totally new type of script can be evolved which will bring Rhythm and Composition into the creation of continuity (expecting to be told that this was an absurd dream, and that these things must be left to inspiration on the set).

But Mr. Griffith not only agreed with the theory as to the failure of the present script—he warmly advocated the type of script which will be explained in this series, and hoped for its adoption, although it is contrary to everything tradition ascribes to his own methods!

Next week we will give, in Mr. Griffith's own words, his precise attitude toward continuity; the reasons why he does not favor the present form of script; his exact working methods in setting out to make a picture; and the continuity of the future as he would like to see it—although, as he expressed it, "almost any darned fool could direct a picture from such a script!"

M-G-M to Make 165 Prints of Each Production for Home Consumption

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER announces it will have 165 prints made on each completed film on the 1927-28 program to take care of this country's needs. The foreign prints, being made either in New York or Chicago, are not counted in this estimate and, according to M-G-M, will raise the estimated footage almost ten million feet higher.

The announcement also declares that fifty million feet of raw film will go into pictures for domestic distribution, making the company one of the largest buyers of celluloid, as it is calculated that the amount used is a tenth of the total consumed in this country during the year.

New Third Dimension Process Announced

M. H. Hoffman, of Tiffany, Acquires Rights to Invention; No Change Necessary in Theatres

M. H. HOFFMAN, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, announced this week that he had acquired a third dimension process, the invention of Emil and Jacques Burkhardt of Switzerland. Mr. Hoffman made the flat statement that, through this process, reel third dimension pictures or stereoscopic photography showing length, breadth and width on the screen are an accomplished fact.

Photoplays made with this process, he continued, will be available for all theatres regardless of size or equipment, without making any changes in the theatre whatsoever. "The theatre owner will have no more trouble or expense in equipment in showing these pictures than he now has with the ordinary film feature," said the Tiffany executive.

In conjunction with the Burkhardt brothers, the inventors, Mr. Hoffman has sole and exclusive control of the several basic patents which have been amply protected throughout the world, completely covering the various processes. The Burkhardts, Mr. Hoffman said, are now preparing their various paraphernalia and are expected to sail for the United States next month. Immediately upon their arrival it is Mr. Hoffman's intention to start work on a special production as well as on several short reel subjects employing the invention.

In commenting upon his acquisition of the third dimension pictures Mr. Hoffman said:

"The motion picture industry for many years has been talking, dreaming and experimenting with the third dimension on the screen. In other words, life-like photography with the actors appearing on the screen with the perfect illusion of having them before the audience the same as on the speaking stage.

"At various times some announcement would appear that somebody has perfected this third dimension, but in every instance it was found impractical because it required change of equipment, machines, screens, cameras, raw stock, etc.—any one or all of these requirements making the proposition unsuitable and impractical for commercial, profitable use."

About 50,000 Seats in Seattle's 62 Theatres

A RECENT check of the theatre situation in Seattle, Wash., discloses a total of sixty-five theatres in that city of 500,000 population, fifty-nine of which are now operating regularly. The sixty-two houses represent a total seating capacity of between 45,000 and 50,000. The list includes all motion picture houses, vaudeville theatres, stock and legitimate houses, and musical attraction theatres.

In addition to this list, there are three houses now under construction in Seattle, and two more proposed. Those now being built include the 3,000-seat Famous-Players-Publix "Seattle Theatre," the 3,000-seat Keith-Orpheum vaudeville and picture house, and Jensen-Von-Herberg's new 1,000-seat suburban house, the Bagdad Theatre.

The proposed houses include a 2,500-seat house on the site of Seventh Avenue and Olive Street, rumored to be a Fox enterprise, and also reported to be a Sid Grauman location; and the contemplated Universal house to replace the Columbia Theatre as Universal's large first-run theatre in the Washington territory.

Polish Copyright Treaty Goes into Effect

An international copyright treaty between the United States and Poland went into effect on Wednesday of this week, bringing under control an extremely troublesome piracy situation. Presidential proclamations were issued on Monday, effective two days later. This means that a work copyrighted in either country automatically enjoys protection in the other. Pirated prints are understood to have been made in Warsaw and distributed throughout Europe, and owing to the lack of any copyright treaty between Poland and the U. S., little could be done about it until now.

Film Arts Guild Leases the Times Square Theatre

The Film Arts Guild, recently at the Cameo Theatre in New York City, has leased the Times Square Theatre, West 42 Street, for Sunday showings and will present a program there this Sunday, February 20, commencing at 1 P.M., and playing continuously until 11:30 P.M. The double feature bill arranged for this showing will consist of "The Dark Angel," co-featuring Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky and "Salome," starring Nazimova.

The Guild is also negotiating for a Sunday lease of the Guild Theatre, West 52 Street, for a special subscription performance of "The Living Dead Man," and "Emak Bakia." The former film is based on Pirandello's "The Late Matthew Pascal," directed by Marcel L'Herbier. The featured players are Ivan Moskine and Lois Moran, then only sixteen years old. The latter production is by Man Ray, modernist artist and experimenter with cinematography.

Joseph M. Schenck Denies Merger Discussions

Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of directors of United Artists, denied this week on the Coast that a merger with M-G-M or anyone else was under consideration at the present time. He declared that he had not recently discussed this with any company.

Statements last week from Louis B. Mayer were to the effect that the merger was less likely now than at the time it was originally rumored.

H. W. Traver, Detroit M'gr for U. A., Dead

Herbert W. Traver, Detroit manager for United Artists, died last Friday, February 11, at 6 A.M., after a long illness of heart trouble. Services were held on Sunday at the Norton Mortuary and were attended by members of the Detroit Film Board of Trade. The remains were shipped the same evening to Troy, N.Y., for burial.

C. E. A. Votes Boycott of Famous in England

GENERAL boycott of Famous Players pictures was voted this week by the General Council of the Cinematographic Exhibitors' Association in England, as a retaliatory measure for Paramount's acquisition of two key-city theatres in Birmingham, which the C.E.A. considers the forerunner of a campaign of theatre buying.

Opinion in the British trade papers divided on the wisdom of this move and its chances of success. The trade journals express doubt as to exhibitors adhering to it.

While no statement has been issued at the home offices of Paramount in New York, it is understood that reassuring reports have been received regarding the situation.

New Firms File Papers of Incorporation at Albany

Newly incorporated motion picture companies filing papers with the Secretary of State at Albany, N.Y., during the past week, included the following: Plaza Pictures, Inc., $100,000, William E. Shallenberger, Harry G. Kosch, Edmund Souhami, New York City; Endicott Holding Corporation, capitalization not specified, Arthur B. Cohn, Lawrence E. Bobker, Helen Cone, New York City; Kay-Em-Es Amusement Co., Inc., $30,000, Jonas King, Isaac Silverman, New York City; Herman Schoenbach, Brooklyn; K. C. U. Theatre Corporation, capitalization not specified, M. M. Pedlow, T. F. Donohue, H. W. Burmaster, Albany; Synchrophone Corporation of America, capitalization not specified, Harry Lader, Eli Stener, Emil Schlesinger, New York City; Peerless Pictures Corporation, $20,000, R. B. Shoemaker, John S. Lopez, W. A. Clay, New York City; Cole-Redding, Inc., $10,000, Grace Cole-Redding, Brayton Eddy, Philip Hogate, New York City; Kantro Amusement Corporation, capitalization not specified, Louis Levine, Celia Tannenbaum, Brooklyn; Helen Sherry, Bronx.

Bushman to Portray South American Historical Figure

The role of Belgrano, "the George Washington of South America," in a special production that the Ajuria Production Company is filming in Hollywood, will be portrayed by Francis X. Bushman who was given the role after having been chosen by popular vote through a contest held in South America. M. Ajuria, who controls a chain of 300 motion picture theatres in South America, arrived in Hollywood a week ago to start production on the film, which is intended for the Sociedad General Cinematographic of the Latin-American Republics. Bushman is now completing the role of George Washington in a picture now being made with a new technicolor process.

Arbitration Boards Report for 1926

12,566 Claims Amounting to $2,712,495.22 Disposed of During Year; Cite Legal Expense Saving

How the motion picture industry settles its difficulties between buyer and seller out of court with a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars in legal expenses and court costs is shown in the report for 1926 of the Boards of Arbitration of the Motion Picture Industry.

The 33 Boards of Arbitration of the motion picture industry disposed of 12,566 claims, amounting to $2,712,495.22 in the United States in 1926, according to a report issued yesterday by the Film Boards of Trade.

Of these claims, 5,018 were settled before the date of the actual hearing because the filing of claims brought the parties together. Awards made totaled 5,476 for a total of $1,356,233.78. All but 25 of these claims were decided by a unanimous or majority vote of the board of three exhibitors and three exchange managers. A seventh artibrator to break a tie vote was necessary in these 25 cases. 812 claims were withdrawn and 440 dismissed for want of jurisdiction, incomplete filing, etc. On January 1st, there were 1,007 claims pending, totaling $300,959.98. Seventy-one claims were litigated after submission. All but five of these suits were actions to reduce arbitration awards of 1924 and 1925 to judgments.

The Canadian Boards of Arbitration considered 127 claims and made 105 awards totaling $78,875.48. Three cases required a seventh arbitrator. Thirty-eight claims were settled before the date of hearing. These totaled $21,061,48.

In the three years of arbitration in the motion picture industry in the United States, the boards have disposed of 35,650 claims for $7,374,662,18.

The report of the board for 1926 in tabulated form is at the bottom of the page.

Fifty Theatres in Greater New York Now Loew's

On the evening of February 19, when Loew's Grand, at Fordham Road and Jerome Avenue, New York City, opens its doors for the first time with a special performance introducing radio, screen, stage and night club stars, the name of Loew will adorn no less than fifty theatres in the New York City territory. Each of Loew's fifty houses averages a seating capacity of 2,500.

Nicholas M. Schenck, first vice-president of Loew's, Inc., and general manager of all of the Loew theatre properties, together with David Bernstein, comptroller of Loew's, Inc., will be on hand for the Grand's opening. The house will adopt its regular policy of continuous shows from 1 to 11 o'clock the following day.

Universal Gets Rinehart's "Finders Keepers"

A contract was closed early this week between Universal Pictures Corporation and Mary Roberts Rinehart for the screen rights to the author's "Finders Keepers." Universal intends this as a vehicle for Laura La Plante. The story was first published in the Saturday Evening Post. It will appear in book form this season as the leading story in a book of short stories by Miss Rinehart.

Quota Trial for England

Theatres and Distributors Must Have Seven and One-Half Per Cent. British Films in 1928

ALL signs point to a trial of the quota system in England, to encourage British production. The various branches of the industry appear to have reached a practical agreement with the government on a basis which will cause no serious upheaval for the present. It appears likely that the quota will start at 7½ per cent. for distributors and exhibitors alike, effective January 1, 1928. This would mean that a theatre changing its bill twice weekly would be required to show at least eight British features.

Provisions to abolish "blind booking," to compel trade showing of all pictures, and to limit the length of time in advance for which pictures may be contracted, are also discussed.

The present output of British films, which has been considerably stimulated by the prospect of a quota, will be ample to take care of the initial percentage. If the plan works and proves advantageous, it is likely that the percentage will be gradually increased.

The definition of "a British film" has not been announced by the Government, in whose hands the matter now rests. The directors have suggested that it be a feature film of at least 4,000 feet, made by a company more than half owned by British capital, written by a British author or adapted by a British scenarist, filmed in a British studio unless the story demands otherwise, directed by a British subject, with a payroll of which at least 75 per cent. is paid to British Empire subjects. One trade paper maintains that producers should be left free to engage the best talent of any nationality, in order to compete in world markets.

In And Out of Town

NAT NATHANSON, president of Hi-Mark Productions, will leave shortly for the West Coast, where he will enliven production on a new and novel two-reel series.

LEAVING Saturday for Hollywood, Henry Ginsburg, president of Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation, has departed from New York on a general tour of inspection among the Sterling producing forces on the West Coast. He will join Irving L. Walenstein, of Sterling, in Los Angeles. A general conference of Sterling producing units will be held during Mr. Ginsburg's sojourn in Hollywood.

J. R. WILSON, domestic sales manager of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., has departed on an extended trip on which he will visit the principal branch offices of the East and Middle West. He will not return to the home office until the latter part of this month. Max Stahl, special sales representative, has been visiting exchanges in the Far West. At present he is in the Seattle territory.

MORRIS SAFIER, in charge of the Warner Bros.' extended run productions, returned this week from a trip of three weeks throughout the South and Southwest, where he closed a number of key cities and circuits for both the Vitaphone installations and the Barrymore and Chaplin productions.

B. F. ZEIDMAN, manager of the John Barrymore unit producing for United Artists release, returned to Hollywood Saturday, February 12th, leaving behind him in New York a print of "The Beloved Rogue," Barrymore's first United Artists picture, which comes to the Mark Strand on March 5th.

Stanley B. Waite

Stanley Waite Joins Famous Short Subjects Dep't

Stanley Waite, sales executive, has joined the short subjects department of Famous Players-Lasky. The former divisional sales manager for Pathe will be associated with George W. Weeks, who is in charge of the new department. Mr. Waite, in conjunction with Mr. Weeks, will begin immediately to organize the company's sales staff that will handle the new reel, novelties and comedies. Distribution of this product will start this fall.

Tiffany May Produce Films in Great Britain

Tiffany will produce a few pictures in England for world-wide distribution when conditions are favorable, it was announced by M. H. Hoffman, vice-president of Tiffany Productions, Inc., at a luncheon given him in England recently by Fred Bernhard, managing director of Bernhard-Tiffany.

In his talk Mr. Hoffman stated that he believed there was still an excellent market for the independent if he could make good pictures, and said that he had not found that producer ownership of theatres kept strong independent product out.

Mother of Walter Greene Passes Away

Mrs. A. Greene, mother of Walter Greene, former West Coast manager of Film Daily and now associated with Lichteg and Englander, died at her home in Hollywood last week following an illness of many months.

Publix-West Coast Deal Is Denied by Franklin

PUBLIX has not purchased the controlling interest in West Coast Theatres, Inc., nor is any such deal pending, according to Harold B. Franklin, Publix executive, who denied that there was any truth in stories to that effect published this week in New York.

Assembles Cast for "The Mountains of Manhattan"

A new Gotham production entitled "The Mountains of Manhattan," which extols New York's skyscrapers, is about to be placed into production by Sam Sax with a cast made up of Dorothy Devore, Charles Delaney, the featured players, Kate Price, George Chesebro, Clarence H. Wilson, little Bobby Gordon and Robert E. Homans. The story is an original by Herbert Clark who also wrote the continuity. It concerns a young structural iron worker who through nerve and ability finishes up as construction engineer on the very job on which he started as "rigger." James Hogan has been assigned the direction.

Work Started on "U's" "Back to God's Country"

Camera work began this week at Universal City on "Back to God's Country," a James Oliver Curwood story which Lynn Reynolds is directing for Universal's program for next year. Playing the leading roles are Renee Adoree (borrowed from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer) and Robert Frazer. Mitchell Lewis and Walter Long are among the support. The majority of the action will be photographed in and around Bishop, Cal. The adaptation for "Back to God's Country" was made by Edward Meagher and the continuity by Charles Logue.

Arrangement With Poland Aids American Producers

Benefits of the Polish copyright law of March 29, 1926, will be extended to producers of American motion pictures, books and other copyright material, under the terms of a reciprocal copyright arrangement consummated with the Polish government by the State Department, Washington, D.C., to become effective February 16.

There has long been need of protection in Poland for American films, several cases of piracy having occurred in which the Departments of State and Commerce were called upon to assist American producers in conserving their rights.

Mary Brian Cast for Next Fields Starring Picture

Just as soon as she has completed the work attached to the role of feminine lead opposite Richard Dix in "Knockout Reilly," now nearing completion at the Paramount Long Island studio, Mary Brian will play the featured role of daughter to W. C. Fields in the latter's next starring picture, tentatively titled "The Timid Soul." The story is an original by Gregory La Cava, who will launch production on it this week.

All Fox Theatres to Have Vitaphone Equipment at Once; Patent Situation Will Require Clarification

NO more interesting situation looms on the film horizon at the moment than the impending fight among various interests to capitalize on the talking and musical picture. Nearly all of the large companies are interested in some talking film process or another, or contemplate becoming so. The commercial success of Vitaphone has brought on an avalanche of devices and methods, old and new, each of which is being hopefully exploited.

As always happens when a new field is successfully opened up, real and alleged inventors in all parts of the country are pressing their claims as the originator of this and that and seeking to restrain others from using their claimed idea.

Most of the devices fall into two categories—those recording the sound directly on the film photographically, such as De Forest Phonofilm, Fox-Case Movietone, General Electric Photophone, and others, and those using a phonograph record to register the sound separately, such as Vitaphone. Efforts are being made to put out apparatus of the second type very cheaply for use in small theatres which might not be able to afford some of the other and more expensive types.

The biggest news of the week in the talking picture field is the announcement that William Fox has placed an order with Vitaphone and Western Electric for equipment of the playhouses of the Fox Theatres Corporation with Vitaphone apparatus as soon as the manufacturers can turn out the machines. This is an aftermath of the deal between Western Electric and Movietone in which patent rights were exchanged, in effect, making it possible for a theatre to use both with a minimum of equipment. Although Movietone records sound on the film and Vitaphone on a disc record, the same amplifying unit and loud speakers can be used for both. Thus the Fox theatres will not only be able to use the Fox-Case Movietone novelties, but any Vitaphone numbers which their managers may see fit to book, as well.

House Selected

One of the first to be so equipped will be the Fox Theatre in Philadelphia, with the new Academy of Music on 14th Street, New York City, and the Savoy, Fox's newest Brooklyn house, to follow. Others to be equipped will include the Terminal in Newark, the American in Paterson, the Liberty in Elizabeth, the City, Japanese Garden, Nemo, Star, Audubon, Crotona, in New York City, the Ridgewood and Folly in Brooklyn, and the Jamaica in Jamaica, L.I.

The scale on which Vitaphone is "going over" may be gauged by the statement this week that by January 1, 1928, there will be at least 300 Vitaphone outfits in operation, bringing back a weekly rental of $45,000. More than 100 are already contracted for. The installations are made by Western Electric at $12,000, it is understood. The contracts are for a five-year period, which means that the 300 installations, not counting others made during the life of these agreements, will gross the company a sum estimated at $11,700,000.

Financial rumors this week were to the effect that W. C. Durant, automobile magnate, is now interested in Vitaphone. No confirmation was forthcoming, although circumstances gave some support to the claim.

G. E. Device Shown

Last Friday, at the Rivoli Theatre in New York, an invited audience was shown the Photophone, the device developed by General Electric, Westinghouse and the Radio Corporation of America. This records the sound on the film and great simplicity of operation in the theatre is claimed for it. The tests shown were made solely for demonstration purposes and included two reels of a feature shown recently at the Capitol Theatre in New York with the Capitol orchestra's accompaniment recorded on it.

Another claimant to the basic patent rights on photographic recording of sound appeared this week in the person of Captain Lindell T. Bates, a lawyer practicing here and abroad, who asserted that a patent taken out by his father, the late Lindon W. Bates, in 1919, was the basic patent on which the art was based. He announced that he was willing to close with one of the producing electrical or film companies for a monopoly for ten years, or would form a special company to grant licenses on a royalty basis.

It is likely, in the opinion of engineers and patent attorneys, that the courts will have to pass on some of these claims, with possible action by the patent commissioner, before the talking picture field will be definitely clarified.

Universal Schedules Product

Total for 1927-28 Season Greatest Since Company's Inception; 65 Feature Length Pictures Planned

WHAT constitutes the greatest line-up of product ever planned for one season by Universal is scheduled for release during 1927-28. With enlarged producing facilities at Universal City, Carl Laemmle has determined to make a total of 65 feature length pictures, five chapter plays, 52 two-reel thrill dramas, ten episodes of "The Collegians," two reels each; 52 Stern Bros. comedies, two reels; 12 "Newlyweds and Their Baby," two reels; 12 "Gump" comedies, two reels; 26 Animated Cartoons, one-reel length, and 26 Snappy Comedies, also in one reel. In addition, Universal will handle distribution of the regular news reel issues which aggregate 104 during the year.

Included in the feature-length productions will be 10 "Supers," several of which will be of road-show calibre; four will be Reginald Denny productions. The first two super-productions available will be "Love Me and the World Is Mine," starring Mary Philbin, and "Uncle Tom's Cabin," production of which is rapidly nearing completion under direction of Harry Pollard. Following these on the schedule are "Show Boat," "The Big Gun," "The Man Who Laughs," and "Les Miserables." Denny's first will be, "I'll Be There."

A total of 40 stories has been purchased, from which will be selected the material for 33 Jewel productions; of these, 12 have been picked, and are being filmed. Seven star Hoot Gibson, and others in work include "The Cat and the Canary," "Alias the Deacon," "Cheating Cheaters," "The American Eagle," "Thunderhoofs," "Back to God's Country," "The Chinese Parrot," and "The Yukon Trail." "Lea Lyon" will be started next week.

Twenty-two thrill dramas will be made, seven starring Fred Humes, an equal number starring Ted Wells, four with aviation as the theme, starring Al Wilson, and four dog films starring "Dynamite." Universal considers its line-up of writers, stars, directors and featured players as one of the best ever garnered by one company.

The list of authors is headed by Victor Hugo, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Edna Ferber and James Oliver Curwood, and includes such names as Bayard Veiller, William McLeod Raine, William Dudley Pelley, Cynthia Stockley, Max Marcin, P. G. Wodehouse, Gerald Beaumont, John Willard and similar best sellers. Universal executives feel they will have an array of product with exceptional box-office drawing power.

The line-up of directors includes Harry Pollard, Sidney Olcott, William A. Seiter, Edward Sloman, Lynn Reynolds, Melville Brown, Paul Leni, Edward Laemmle, King Baggot, Emory Johnson, Wesely Ruggles, and Henry Macrae and similar makers of box-office successes are slated to turn out the productions which will make up Universal's feature schedule for 1927-1928.

Stars and featured players include Reginald Denny, Laura La Plante, Hoot Gibson, Jean Hersholt, Conrad Veidt, Mary Philbin, Norman Kerry, Betty Compson, Al Wilson, Bryant Washburn, Arthur Edmund Carewe, George Lewis, Fred. Humes and Rex, the wild horse.

Carl Laemmle, who recently purchased the Ince estate in Beverly Hills, is remaining on the Coast, supervising the work at Universal City as the new schedule takes form.

Chicago Theatre For U. A. Circuit

New House on Site of Apollo Represents Total Investment of $12,255,000, Schenck States

THE newest theatre in the United Artists circuit of twenty pre-release houses will be the Chicago United Artists Theatre to be erected on the site at present occupied by the Apollo, Randolph and Dearborn streets, according to telegraphic advices from Joseph M. Schenck who is now in Los Angeles. A total investment of $12,255,000 is represented in the transaction which includes $2,175,000 for erection costs, plus cost of the Apollo and the existing lease on that theatre, and $11,080,000 rentals contracted for between the Leander J. McCormick Building Corporation and the Chicago-United Artists Corporation on a long-term lease. The theatre will be opened to the public in September, 1927.

Lou Anger, operating vice-president of the circuit, now in New York, stated that everything but the four walls of the Apollo will be torn out and a theatre with a seating capacity of 1,800 will be constructed. Included in the equipment of the house will be at least three original lighting systems and, as a result of decisions made by the company, "daring departures in artistic construction of the theatre, concentrating the eye of the audience on the screen in a new and novel manner" will be introduced.

Mr. Anger said that the ground leasehold interest of Lee and J. J. Shubert, who have operated the Apollo Theatre for six years for musical productions, was purchased this week by Chicago-United Artists Theatre Corporation, as was the theatre building itself. The Shubert lease, which would have expired April 30, 1941, is now superseded by the new ground lease.

Frederick T. Hoyt of Chicago (1600 No. LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.), represented both parties to the transaction. Dennis F. O'Brien, of New York, and Sonnenschein, Berkson, Lautmann & Levinson represented the lessees legally, while Wilson, McIlvaine, Hale & Templeton represented the lessors.

A. M. P. A. Dinner April 2

Annual Naked Truth Affair at Hotel Astor, New York; Members Plan Brilliant Event

THE sale of tickets for the seventh annual Naked Truth Dinner of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, which will overshadow all similar functions of the past, started Thursday, February 17, and indications point to a big time at the Hotel Astor on the evening of April 2 next.

Plans for this most brilliant of all yearly film events, as announced by Walter Eberhardt, president of the A.M.P.A., include:

Dinner, with special music; brief speeches, with men of civic, national and international prominence as guests of honor and speakers. "A Night on Broadway," an hour's entertainment of comedy film, sketches, music and personal appearances of celebrities of stage and screen.

Dancing till dawn, including an old-fashioned grand march, led by a prominent, popular official and one of screendom's favorites, with possibly one interruption for a big specialty number never before given to a private party.

About six tables will be reserved for special guests. The remaining tables will be assigned in the order in which eash reservations are made.

The tickets are ten dollars each and may be obtained through any of the officers of the A.M.P.A. or the board of directors. Mr. Eberhardt, who is handling the finances, may be reached at First National Pictures, Inc., 383 Madison Avenue, New York.

T. B. Spry Promoted as F. N. Executive

THOMAS B. SPRY, manager of First National's Boston exchange ever since the company was organized, has been promoted by A. W. Smith, Jr., as Eastern Division Sales Manager, to the position of district manager of the Eastern district, with jurisdiction over Boston New Haven and Albany branch offices.

Mr. Spry will hereafter take a very important part in all sales activity of the three branches and will work in close co-operation with Mr. Smith. In addition to his new duties, Mr. Spry will continue as executive head of the Boston exchange.

"The King of Soho" to Be Jannings' Next Film

Emil Jannings' next effort for Paramount following "The Way of All Flesh," on which production has just been started, will be a story of London's underworld which bears the tentative title of "The King of Soho." It is an original story by Josef von Sternberg, with the screen adaptation by Benjamin Glazer. No director or cast has yet been chosen.

"The King of Soho" tells of the leader of a gang of ruffians who becomes a member of the Salvation Army, but with the end in view of seducing one of the Army lassies. Following a series of dramatic events he is really converted.

Anti-Block Booking Bill in Indiana

A BILL designed to prohibit block booking of pictures has been introduced in the Indiana Legislature by Representative Fabius Gwin. The measure, which has the backing of the M.P.T.O., of Indiana, also would prohibit a distributor from forcing an exhibitor to arbitrate.

Frank J. Rembusch, President of the Indiana exhibitor organization, charged that exhibitors are forced to lease a certain number of films or suffer the loss of their entire supply.

The measure would make it a misdemeanor for exchanges to try to force theatre owners to take any particular pictures by withholding from that theatre any reels because they will not take other pictures. The bill also would forbid distributors to force an exhibitor to submit to arbitration in any case where his right to a court trial may be abridged.

Important Zone Decision Rendered in Jersey

An important decision affecting zoning rules as relating to the proximity of theatres to religious institutions, was recently rendered by the Supreme Court of New Jersey in the action brought against the Songar Realty Company by three churches of Bayonne, N.J.

In reaching its decision, the court held that inasmuch as the defendants had paid in good faith the usual building license, and that the city of Bayonne had accepted same in like manner, it could not see fit to prevent construction of the theatre even though one of the churches was situated directly opposite to the playhouse.

The site of the house figuring in the action is located at 1010 Avenue C and it is reported that building operations will be resumed immediately. On its completion, it will be leased to Stanley Sobelson and associates, operators of a circuit of motion picture theatres in several New Jersey communities.

New Jersey theatre men regard the outcome of this case as a step decidedly in their favor, having in mind the several theatre projects brought to a halt in the past by the zoning rules.

Assign Important Roles for "The Trail of '98"

Important roles in "The Trail of '98," the special production which Clarence Brown is going to direct for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, have been assigned Tully Marshall, Karl Dane, George Cooper and Harry Carey.

Actual filming on the screen play is expected to begin this week, the first sequences to be filmed at Corona, Colo., where Brown will take his production unit on location for approximately two months. As it is next door to impossible to provide adequate housing facilities for the more than 3,000 people in the Yukon, the actual locale of Chilkoot Pass, Brown will film that portion of the film along the Denver and Salt Lake Railroad at the top of the Continental Divide. Scenes requiring a fewer number of people are to be filmed in Alaska, the Yukon and the Klondike.

Nine Specials From First Nat'l

Regular Line-Up Approximates 52 Productions; Convention at Burbank, May 20-23

RETURNING to his New York offices after a four weeks' stay at the Burbank studios of the company, Richard A. Rowland, general and production manager of First National Pictures, announced that his company will make an approximate total of 52 productions and nine special pictures for release during the 1927-28 season. He also emphasizes the fact that the company will not withhold any of its product during the Summer, but instead will release some of its best pictures in that period.

Mr. Rowland stressed particularly those productions scheduled as specials which include one each starring Colleen Moore, Constance Talmadge, Milton Sills, Richard Barthelmess, three George Fitzmaurice productions, one made by Asher, Small and Rogers, from Ralph Spence's stage play, "The Gorilla," and Max Reinhardt's "Miracle," for which First National paid A. H. Woods $150,000. Mr. Rowland and John McCormick, West Coast production manager, are at present considering the casting of the roles of the Madonna and the Nun and when these parts have been filled, adaptation of the play will be started.

Among the pictures scheduled for release during the coming season and which are now in production or in an advanced stage of preparation are "The Poor Nut," Jess Smith's production of the stage play of the same name, featuring Jack Mulhall and Charlie Murray; Sam Rork's production, "His Son," featuring Lewis S. Stone, to be directed by John Francis Dillon; "The Stolen Bride," which will mark the American debut of First National's recent directorial importation, Alexander Korda. This picture will be produced for First National from his own original story by Carey Wilson and will feature Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes.

Other pictures scheduled on which actual production will start during April and May of this year, include: "Lonely Ladies," featuring Lewis Stone and Anna Q. Nilsson, and to be produced by Ray Rockett; "American Beauty," featuring Billie Dove, by Wallace Irwin, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post; "Fares, Please," co-featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney; "The Rose of Monterey," a tale of California's entry into the Union, which will be George Fitzmaurice's second production for First National, and will co-feature Lewis Stone and Mary Astor.

Also "Lady Be Good," the musical comedy success, which will co-feature Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall, and Harry Langdon in "The Yes Man," an original story.

"For the spring and summer," said Mr. Rowland, "we are ready with an unsurpassed line-up of pictures that are truly big. We have sure-fire specials, star pictures that are certain box-office draws and week-by-week productions that are bound to mean cash to the exhibitor.

"First National found its policy of releasing strong pictures for the spring and summer to be so successful last year that it has scheduled an even stronger line-up for the coming months."

Among those available for summer release are two now in work: "Big Bertha," the "different" war comedy, originally called "Bayo-Nuts," and later titled "Who Goes There," produced from his own original story by Frank Griffin and featuring Charlie Murray and George Sidney, with a supporting cast headed by Natalie Kingston, and "Babe Comes Home," with Babe Ruth himself and Anna Q. Nilsson, a human interest tale of the love between a baseball player and a laundress, based on the story, "Said With Soap," by the late Gerald Beaumont. This will be produced by Wid Gunning, and will be directed by Ted Wilde, borrowed from the Harold Lloyd Corporation.

"I want to emphasize in particular Norma Talmadge in 'Camille'; two Colleen Moore productions, 'Orchids and Ermine,' and 'Naughty but Nice'; Constance Talmadge in 'Venus of Venice'; Corinne Griffith in 'Three Hours'; Milton Sills in 'The Sea Tiger'; Billie Dove in 'The Tender Hour'; Harry Langdon in 'Long Pants'; 'McFadden's Flats,' which is now breaking records at the New York Strand and every other first-run theatre where it is being shown; 'Convoy,' Robert Kane's stupendous production based on the work of the American Navy during the war; Johnny Hines in 'All Aboard,' and Ken Maynard in 'Somewhere in Sonora'."

First National's sales convention will be held at the Burbank studios May 20-23, and it is expected about two hundred salesmen and exchange managers from this country and Canada will attend. A special contingent will be the ten newly-elected K.O. Club members. Home office executives who will be present, include Mr. Rowland, Secretary-Treasurer Samuel Spring, W. G. Boothby, Florence Strauss, Ned Marin, A. W. Smith, Jr., Ned E. Depinet, Charles M. Steele, Stanley Hatch and C. F. Chandler.

The meetings will probably be held on one of the permanent stages at the studio. Following the convention the delegates plan to visit San Francisco and then back to their respective territories. Convention headquarters will be at the Ambassador Hotel, Los Angeles; John McCormick and M. C. Levee, general studio executive, will be resident hosts at the meetings.

F.B.O.'s 1927-28 Total 104 Films

Fifty-Six Feature Length Productions Which Includes Thirty Specials; Forty-Eight Short Subjects

FILM BOOKING OFFICES will release 104 pictures during the 1927-28 season, it was announced this week by Joseph P. Kennedy, president. These will be divided into 56 feature productions, which includes 30 specials, and 48 short subjects. It is estimated that two or three of the special productions will be worthy of extended runs.

The company will continue production of its series of dog pictures with Ranger, the canine star, seen in a new group comprising six pictures. Tom Tyler, Western star, will make a series of six, and 14 other Westerns are scheduled for production. A series of two or three will feature young Frankie Darro in boy stories.

At this time, several title announcements are made. "Harvester" and "Freckles," both stories from the pen of the late Gene Stratton-Porter; "Clancy's Kosher Wedding," with the Jewish-Irish strain; "Windjammers of Gloucester," a story of New England fisheries by John L. E. Pell, author of "Down to the Sea in Ships"; "Alex, the Great," a full-length comedy by H. C. Witwer; "The Coward," by Arthur Stringer; "The Gingham Girl," by Daniel Kussell; "Wine, Women and Broadway," from the story by Charles K. Harris; a melodrama based on the thrilling story, "The Gold Train Robbery"; "Little Mickey Grogan," by Arthur Guy Empey; a South Sea love drama made from "A Game in the Bush," by Georges Surdez; "Skinner's Big Idea," a comedy story from the "Skinner" series, by Henry Irvin Dodge, and "Newsboy to Millionaire," by H. L. Gates. The last named will be serialized and syndicated to newspapers throughout the country.

The short subject series will be made up of four groups of twelve two-reelers each. There will be one group of H. C. Witwer stories taken from his beauty parlor series which are running in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. In these will be featured the comedy duets of Al Cooke and Kit Guard, and Lorraine Eason and Thelma Hill. Bowers Novelty Comedies will probably make up a second group with many brand new novelty ideas.

The Standard Comedies will be the third series and the fourth will take in twelve pictures based on the cartoons by Fontaine Fox, called "Mickey McGuire, Himself." These last will not be cartoons, however, but two-reel featurettes, starring a well-known juvenile star, whose name is not disclosed at present.

"All Aboard" Inaugurates Policy of Shorter Films

Following closely upon the recent announcement from Richard A. Rowland, First National general and production manager, that feature productions with faster action and with shorter length are now wanted by both the exhibitors and the public, word has come from the office of C. C. Burr on the West Coast that "All Aboard," the new Burr production featuring Johnny Hines, responds to this demand being only five and one-half reels in length.

Mr. Burr declared that the finished film was about ten reels, but by eliminations during the try-out showings it was possible to cut out sequences here and there without detracting from the comedy episodes.

"U" Selects Players for "The Chinese Parrot"

Principal players for "The Chinese Parrot," the mystery drama which Paul Leni will make for Universal with Conrad Veidt in one of the most important roles, include Marion Nixon, Hobart Bosworth, and Eddie Burns.

This will be Viedt's first work for Universal. Production plans on "The Chinese Parrot" were accelerated upon the arrival of the German star from abroad. Leni has just completed "The Cat and the Canary" for Universal.

Educatio'l Pittsburgh Branch Wins E. W. Hammons Cup

The Pittsburgh branch office of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc., won the E. W. Hammons Cup for February for making the best showing during the past month among the 36 Educational exchanges. Joe Kaliski, manager, gains possession of this handsome cup as a result of the notable work of his office. J. H. Butner, manager of the Atlanta Branch, retained possession of the cup during the month of January.

"U" to Make 5 Air Films for 1927-28 Season

FIVE aeroplane films are planned by Universal for the season of 1927-28. One will be "The American Eagle," a special war picture to be produced by Emory Johnson as a Universal Jewel, and the other four will be "Sky High Saunders," "The Flying Patrol," "Three Miles Up" and "The Air Raiders," starring Al Wilson, stunt aviator and screen star.

"The American Eagle" has already gone into work with Raymond Keane in the male lead and Barbara Kent, Universal junior star, appearing opposite him. The support includes Nigel Barrie, Jack Pennick, Cuyler Supplee, Marcella Daly and Wilson Benge. The story of "The American Eagle" was originally called "Flight." It is an adaptation by John B. Clymer from a story written by Lieutenant Ralph Blanchard, of the U. S. Air Service. A typical French war zone village was constructed recently at "U" City for this production.

Bruce Mitchell is directing "Sky High Saunders" in which are appearing Elsie Tarron, Frank Rice, Bud Osborne and Frank Tomick.

M-G-M to Star Haines in "Spring Fever"

WILLIAM HAINES' first stellar role will be in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's screen version of "Spring Fever," the Vincent Lawrence play of golf and love. Sam Taylor, borrowed from Mary Pickford, will make the picture which is scheduled to start within a few weeks. Haines was recently elevated to the status of a star by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The support has not yet been announced but it is promised that it will include prominent names.

The play, "Spring Fever," made its debut on the Pacific Coast a couple of years back under the name of "Kelly's Vacation," with Robert Ames in the leading role. It was also presented in 1925 by Al H. Woods at the Maxine Elliott Theatre in New York.

M-G-M Commences Work on "The Unknown"

Director Tod Browning put Lon Chaney's new starring vehicle, "The Unknown," into production last week at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio in Culver City.

The new film, an original by Browning, was scenarized by Waldemar Young, and presents Chaney in the disguise of an "armless wonder" in a tale of a Spanish circus formerly called "Alonzo the Armless." To play the role, Chaney has had to practice using his feet as hands for the purpose of throwing knives, shooting, and performing other strange feats of a sideshow freak. Joan Crawford will play the leading feminine role as a circus performer and Norman Kerry will have a featured part.

Harry Sharrock is acting as assistant director, and Erle Taggert as production manager. John Arnold will take charge of the cameras.

P. D. C.'s "Silent Sister" Under Way in Berlin

The working title for the first picture which Producers Distributing Corporation is making at the National Studios in Berlin is to be "The Silent Sister." The scenario is by Margarete Maris Langen and Mario Bonnard. The latter is also directing. He is a well-known Italian director formerly with Uci in Italy and later producing a picture for Ufa in Berlin which has proven successful.

The list of players includes Elizabeth Pinajeff, Hans Mierendorf, Helga Thomas, John Loda, Fr. Geza v. Bolvary, Hans Stuwe, Hermine Sterler and Angelo Ferrari.

H. E. J. Spearman, P.D.C. director general in Berlin, is supervising the production. Releasing arrangements are now under way for its presentation throughout Europe.

F. B. Cole, Superintendent at De Mille Studio

Franklin B. Cole, chief engineer of the Greater Harbor Committee of Los Angeles, has resigned his position with that organization to become associated with Cecil B. De Mille as superintendent of the De Mille studio. His resignation is to take effect immediately, it is said, and he will assume his new duties at the De Mille studio at once.

In his new post of superintendent, Mr. Cole will renew an association of many years' standing with A. George Volck, production manager of the De Mille studio, with whom he worked while associated with the New York Central and as engineer of the Emergency Fleet Commission.

Mr. Cole has had previous motion picture experience as assistant to the vice-president of the Selznick company.

"Burnt Fingers" Set For Release February 20

"Burnt Fingers," a new Maurice Campbell production for Pathe, is scheduled for release on February 20.

The new feature is an adaptation by G. Marion Burton and Maurice Campbell from the story by Elizabeth York Miller. Interpreting the principal roles are Eileen Percy, co-featured with George O'Hara, Edna Murphy, Wilfred Lucas and Ivab Doline. Members of the supporting cast include Henry Mowbray, Jane Jennings, J. Moy Bennett and Jimmie Ward.

Monta Bell Gets New Long Term M-G-M Contract

A new long-term contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has been signed by Monta Bell and he will direct John Gilbert in a story to be selected in the near future.

Bell has done several films for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, among them "The Torrent," "Lights of Old Broadway" and "Upstage."

"U" Directors Get "Big Gun" and "Show Boat"

CARL LAEMMLE'S choice of directors to handle the Universal specials, "Show Boat" and "The Big Gun," has fallen in respective order upon Lynn Reynolds and Irvin Willat. Both of these men are Universal alumni, for they received their first opportunities and did their first motion picture work for Mr. Laemmle.

Reynolds has been directing Hoot Gibson for the last six months and is at present directing the James Oliver Curwood story, "Back to God's Country," with Renee Adoree, Mitchell Lewis, Robert Frazer and Walter Long.

Preparations on "The Big Gun" have extended over a year. Richard Barry, the author, has been in California for the last three months cooperating with studio authorities and completing the novel which Grossett and Dunlap will bring out this year. The story will also appear in serial form in the Argosy—All Story Magazine.

WILL ROGERS

OUR UNOFFICIAL AMBASSADOR ...

ABROAD

A SERIES OF PICTURES BACKED BY $50,000,000 IN PUBLICITY.

A Message to you from Will Rogers

Dear Exhibitors;

Now I haven't bothersd you in a long time.I layed off you and lst you all get rich and prosperous.When I used to play you were all in little hay barns in the winter and out on vacant lots with a fence around it in the summsr.You didn't havs a thing to worry or bother about till svsry once in a while a Will Rogers picture would hit you like a rainy night.Now I got out and let you go ahead and accumulate big houses and Mortgages and worry and high taxss and everything.They told ms it was things like me that was retarding the business.

Now this little mess I got hsre now that thsss fellows are trying to sell you wont hurt you much.They will just about give you time to go out and get a smoke while they are on.As Pictures are all so good nowadays I thought just as a contrast there ought to be some old has been come along and have something pretty ordinary and it would show off ths modern things more.

The Character I am playing here is one I tried out before.I first tried it about forty some odd years ago and it turned out good and bad,but in the long run it kept me out of the casting line looking for an extra day.I dont know what they are,they aint exactly travelogues,Thsy aint comedies cause comedies are Gags the people are ussd to laughing at.

The plots are a little too clean for dramas.

Well to be honest they are just about nins hundred feet of celluloid and take up about the same amount of time that a coupls of close ups in a lovs picture would take up.They aint good and they aint bad,they just take up about fifteen minutes of a class of peoples time that time dont mean a thing in the world too.

The Saturday Evening Post jas already payed for the trip, talking all over the country has made me more than I ever could have made in Pictures even if I had been a real ~~good~~ star.the book of the trip has brought enough to pay for another trip,the Vitaphone staggered me to tell about it before their double barrell contraption,and this is just another By product.I wanted xx the reels to keep myself to show at homs in my old days,and I just had them make another extra print.The radio is another by product I just thought of that has already paid me for them too. I was raised on a ranch but I never knew before there was so many ways of skinning a calf.I like to forgot Bull Durham paying me to tell also about the same trip.

And oh yes my old friend Sam Goldwyn wants the dramatic right to the book.I sold Keystone the still pictures,the syndicated strip cartoon rights are being negotiated for now.

Well so long the Mayor has got to get busy,there is a lot of new divorced people standing here waiting to get married again.Thats a better side line than all of them.

Your old friend.MAYOR Rogers

Important Fox Pictures

Now in Work at West Coast Studios or on Location; "Joy Girl" Unit Filming at Palm Beach

SEVEN feature production units are at work either in the West Coast studios of the Fox Film Company or on location, it was announced this week. While there are not as many companies turning out product at this period as there has been at other times during the year those that are working are engaged on some of the best-known stories and plays purchased by Fox.

Frank Borzage is now busy directing "7th Heaven" after a trip to Paris, studying atmosphere and a special visit to Philadelphia where he witnessed a performance by the original stage company. Janet Gaynor plays Diane and Charles Farrell has the role of Chico.

"Carmen" is in production with Raoul Walsh at the megaphone and Dolores Del Rio playing the name role. Victor McLaglen plays the role of Escamillo, the matador. "Is Zat So!" a stage comedy, is now being picturized under Alfred E. Green's direction with George O'Brien, Edmund Lowe and Kathryn Perry in the leading roles. "The Heart of Salome" has Alma Rubens in the starring role with Victor Schertzinger doing direction of the piece. Walter Pidgeon has the leading male role opposite Miss Rubens.

"The Cradle Snatchers," another film version of a stage comedy, is being directed by Howard Hawks with a cast including Louise Fazenda, Joseph Striker, J. Farrell McDonald, Dorothy Phillips, William Davidson, Dione Ellis and Sammy Cohen. "Outlaws of the River," written by the late Gerald Beaumont, is Tom Mix's latest starring vehicle which he is making under direction of Lew Seiler. Buck Jones is starred in "The Holy Terror," which is being directed by Lambert Hillyer; Georgia Hale plays opposite the star.

Allan Dwan and a large company are on location at Palm Beach filming scenes for "The Joy Girl," a picturization of a story now running serially in the Saturday Evening Post. Olive Borden is the "Joy Girl" and she is supported by a well-known cast of players.

Warner Pictures on Time

Production Head Assures Prompt Delivery; Nine Films in Work, Six More in Preparation

JACK WARNER, production head of Warner Bros., is now on his way back to the company's studios after a visit to the New York offices where he reported concerning production activities. Mr. Warner assured the sales department that production is up-to-date with more than half the total output for the season completed. He stated that nine pictures are now being filmed and six more are in preparation. In addition to these are three extended run productions, "Noah's Ark," "Black Ivory" and a Syd Chaplin vehicle as yet untitled.

Those pictures now being filmed or in preparation for camera work include "The Gay Old Bird," Louise Fazenda's second starring vehicle, directed by Herman Raymaker; "What Every Girl Should Know," Patsy Ruth Miller's initial stellar effort, directed by Charles Reisner; "White Flannels" with Marie Dressler and Jason Robards heading the cast; "Matinee Ladies," May McAvoy's initial starring vehicle under her new Warner contract, and "A Million Bid," starring Dolores Costello, under direction of Alan Crosland.

Monte Blue is starred in "The Brute" with Irving Cummings at the directorial helm; "Tracked by the Police" with Frances Lee playing the leading role; "The First Auto" is another Patsy Ruth Miller stellar vehicle. Irene Rich and May McAvoy will be co-starred in "The Climbers," which will be directed by Paul L. Stein.

Those in preparation include "The Black Diamond Express," a railroad melodrama, starring Monte Blue; "Simple Sis," starring Louise Fazenda; "Irish Hearts," Dolores Costello's next starring production; "Dearie," another picture for Miss Fazenda; "The Heart of Maryland," another for Miss Costello, in addition to "The College Widow," George Ade's play.

H. E. Waldron Addresses Pathe Sales Meet

SPEAKING in connection with a series of one-reel subjects which Pathe is distributing, "Will Rogers, Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad," and discussing the publicity value of their central figure, H. "U" Appointments in N. Y. and Washington, D.C.

MORTON VAN PRAG, Universal's Washington exchange manager during the past two years, has been promoted to head the New York "U" exchange to fill the vacancy caused by Joe Friedman's appointment as European supervisor for the Laemmle organization. Ted Schlanger, veteran Universal employee, who recently has been short subject manager in Universal's Chicago office, has been promoted to the post left vacant by Mr. Van Prag. Ben Eisenburg will assume the position left vacant by Mr. Schlanger.

Columbia Completes Casting for "Paying the Price"

Casting on "Paying the Price," a future Columbia production, has been completed. The picture boasts of the following players: Majorie and Priscilla Bonner, the two young girls around whom the drama revolves, Mary Carr, George Hackathorne, William Eugene, John Miljan, Eddie Phillips and William Welsh. Shooting will be started as soon as Vice-president Harry Cohn, in charge of production, has selected the director.

Meehan to Direct Fourth Dana Vehicle for F. B. O.

After a series of conferences at the F. B. O. lot during which he signed up for three years, Director J. Leo Meehan was assigned to direct Viola Dana's fourth vehicle, the title of which has not been definitely decided upon. Every indication points to the assurance that this will be the best of Miss Dana's series thus far, it is said.

First National Has Four Pre-Spring Releases

COLLEEN MOORE'S "Orchids and Ermine," Constance Talmadge's "The Venus of Venice," Harry Langdon's "Long Pants" and the Robert T. Kane all-star production, "High Hat," comprise First National's pre-spring line-up of releases. In their order named they will be released on March 6, March 27, March 20 and March 13. Production Manager Richard A. Rowland has viewed the pictures and believes that they represent good box office bets for the pre-spring season.

Playing opposite Miss Moore in her release—a comedy of a telephone girl in a metropolitan hotel—is Jack Mulhall. An Eastern pre-view of the picture is being arranged. Alfred A. Santell directed. The Talmadge comedy, which concerns the adventures of a knavish pilferer of pocketbooks and hearts, was directed by Marshall Neilan. The Langdon comedy, which Frank Capra directed, took three months to produce. It is probable that the comedian and his manager, William Jenner, will come East with the first print. Featured in "High Hat" are Ben Lyon, Mary Brian and Sam Hardy. It is a comedy on the movies and credit for its direction goes to James Creelman.

Max Ree to Head F. N. Costume Art Department

General and Production Manager Richard A. Rowland, of First National, has signed Max Ree, Danish scenic and costume artist, on a long-term contract whereby Mr. Ree will assume charge of the First National costume department and will direct the designing of all productions at the company's studio at Burbank.

Mr. Ree, a forceful and original artist, was associated in Europe with Max Reinhardt. He created the sets for the European production of "The Miracle," as well as "Orpheus," soon to be produced in America. He is responsible for the dress creations in "The Scarlet Letter," "The Temptress" and "The Wedding March."

Mr. Ree has already left for Burbank, where he will be assigned to create the costumes for a forthcoming production by John McCormick, general manager of West Coast production.

Monty Banks Renames His New Pathe Feature Film

The title of Monty Banks' new Pathe feature comedy has just been changed from "Clear 'n' Cloudy," to "A Perfect Gentleman." Banks, Charles Horan, head of the Banks scenario staff, Clyde Bruckman, who will direct the picture, and several gagmen are now injecting laughs into the story. Camera work will begin in another week. The story centres around a young man and of his weals and woes in trying to follow in every action of his life the exact path prescribed by conventionality.

Kathryn McGuire Lead in "The Draw-Back"

Kathryn McGuire has been chosen for the principal feminine role in a forthcomign Educational-Tuxedo comedy entitled "The Draw-Back," and featuring Johnny Arthur. Miss McGuire appeared as one of the feminine leads in "Wedding Yells," in which Arthur was also featured. This new comedy, which Norman Taurog directed, is a college football story. Miss McGuire has been appearing as Lupino Lane's leading lady this season.

Irene Rich & May McAvoy to Star in "The Climbers"

Irene Rich and May McAvoy will be co-starred in "The Climbers," which Warner Bros. will put into production shortly. Tom Gibson is adapting the story, which is to be directed by Paul L. Stein, responsible for "Don't Tell the Wife," the last Irene Rich vehicle. The two feminine stars were last seen together in "Lady Windermere's Fan," a Warner Bros. production.

Cameraman Engaged for Swanson's New Film

Camera work will apparently get under way soon on Gloria Swanson's second production for United Artists to follow "The Love of Sunya," as Andre Barlatier has been engaged as chief cameraman. He will arrive in New York from Hollywood as soon as the story for the new picture is completed.

Roxy Picks Warner Film for His Next Attraction

FOLLOWING closely upon the heels of S. L. Rothafel's signing of the Vitaphone as an important presentation feature at his new Roxy Theatre in New York City, Mr. Rothafel this week put his signature to a contract whereby he will book Warner Bros. productions for the Roxy. "Wolf's Clothing," with Monte Blue and Patsy Ruth Miller, will be the second picture that will be shown at the new house.

Manfred B. Lee Joins Sterling Pictures

Manfred B. Lee, connected with F.B.O. for the past several years in the publicity and advertising department, has terminated his relations with that company to join Henry Ginsberg at Sterling Pictures Distributing Corporation.

Mr. Lee is a graduate of New York University and a writer of short stories. He will devote much of his time during his new connection to the formulation and preparation of story material for screening purposes.

"Slums of Berlin" Sold for Philly Territory

"Slums of Berlin," the first release to come from Imported Pictures Corporation, has been sold for the Philadelphia territory to Liberty Films in that city.

Nat'l Mix Month During March, Fox Films' Plan

IN co-operation with the Curtis Publishing Company, publishers of "The Saturday Evening Post," "The Ladies' Home Journal" and "The Country Gentleman," Fox Film Corporation, through its general sales manager, Winfield R. Sheehan, has arranged a national tieup which will directly reach an estimated 40,000,000 people and which involves as mediums practically every conceivable agency of expression. This tieup, featuring Tom Mix, will be called the National Tom Mix Month and will be held during March. Besides "The Ladies' Home Journal," a magazine going into 3,000,000 American homes, there will also be employed 237 newspapers in every State in the Union, and at least 200,000 newsboys.

Exploitation highlights in the national campaign will be the essay contests which newspapers will conduct with local exhibitors giving out special prizes—the boys' club throughout the country which will participate—the special Tom Mix display, which over 50,000 news stores and stands will feature—the star's article, "How I Was Roped for the Movies," which will appear in "The Ladies' Home Journal" during March—the full-page advertisements which the Curtis Company will place in several hundred newspapers and the mobilization of the Curtis and Fox field forces to take active part in co-operating with exhibitors of Tom Mix pictures and local newspapers.

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of "Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

STARTING WEDNESDAY CONRAD NAGEL in "THERE YOU ARE"

Columbia Pictures Corporation's "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" has taken a prominent place among the most widely exploited pictures of recent months, both newspaper and stunt campaigns of the "high powered" variety being executed in behalf of the attraction by first-run houses. Ads in the layout were used by the following theatres: Cameo, Pittsburgh; National, Louisville; Howard, Atlanta; Lafayette, Buffalo; Strand, Des Moines.

Short Subjects and Serials

Artclass Lists 86 Shorts for 1927-28 Season

ARTCLASS PICTURES CORPORATION is now ready to announce its line-up of short subjects for the season of 1927-28. The company declares that it will continue to supply the state right market with an all-year-round supply of shorts. There will be 48 two-reel comedies to be released one a week, consisting of 6 Winnie Winkle, 6 Snub Pollard, 6 Hairbreadth Harry, 6 Izzie and Lizzie, 8 Jimmy Aubrey, 8 Barnyard animals comedies and 8 Lucky Strike comedies featuring all star casts. Also 26 one-reel Crackerjack slapstick comedies to be released one every two weeks.

There will also be a special two-reel series, twelve to be released one a month, of Craig Kenney short stories selected from the Arthur B. Reeve's stories. They will be produced by Dallas M. FitzGerald. Negotiations have been almost concluded for the services of a star to portray the role of the detective.

Roach Signs Russian Actor for Work in Comedies

Jesse Devorska, born in Riga, Russia, has signed a long-term contract as a featured comedian with Hal Roach to appear chiefly in the Hal Roach Star comedies for Pathe. His first work will probably be in the Jewish comedies for which Max Davidson previously was signed two years ago. Devorska had bits in “The Big Parade” and “The Unknown Soldier.” After working in several Roach comedies, he was given a chance in “Why Girls Say No.” Following the completion of “Jewish Prudence” last month, in which he was directed by Leo McCarey, he signed the Roach contract.

Devorska has had many adventures and misadventures. He started as a boy ballet dancer at the age of nine, carried messages at the age of fourteen in the Russian army and was captured by the Germans. After having been moved from one prison camp to another he managed to escape to Sweden and finally came to the United States via Liverpool.

Gus Meins to Direct New Stern Comic Strip Series

Gus Meins, director of Buster Brown comedies and “The Newlyweds and Their Baby” comedy series for Stern Bros., has been selected to wield the megaphone on “Keeping Up With the Joneses,” a new Stern Bros. comedy series to be produced from Pop Momand's comic strip.

Selections have not been announced as to the cast. At present, Meins and Page Wright, comedy story writer, are doing the script. Sigmund Neufeld, production manager of the Stern studio, is sitting in with them in this preparatory work.

Pathe's End of Feb. List

Mabel Normand, Hal Roach Comedy Highlight of Schedule for Week of Twenty-Eighth

A HAL ROACH two-reel comedy production starring Mabel Normand heads the list of Pathe releases for the week of February 28; the schedule also includes Pathe Review No. 9, a chapter of the Patheserial “On Guard,” Topics of the Day, No. 9, “Cracked Ice,” an Aesop's Fable and the two regular issues of Pathe News.

“One Hour Married” is the title of the Roach-Normand film in which the star is supported by Creighton Hale, James Finlayson, Noah Young, Sid Crossley and Charles Geldert. It is a war story with a new angle, that of the girl who is left at the altar because the groom must join his regiment; her pursuit of him furnishes the means for the laughs. Jerome Storm directed under supervision of F. Richard Jones.

Pathe Review No. 9 presents “Woolen Wonders”: The sheepman and flocks of Australia, which furnishes one-sixth of the world's wool supply; “North America's Oldest Capital”: An intimate camera study of Mexico City, Capital of Mexico, and now very much in the limelight; “With the Putnam Expedition to Greenland”: Beginning the series on Greenland, to which George Palmer Putnam went with a party of scientists and explorers on the schooner Morrissey.

“On Guard,” the current Patheserial starring Cullen Landis and supported by Muriel Kingston, Louise Du Pre, Walter P. Lewis, Tom Blake, Edward Burns, Hal Forde, Gus de Wilde and Tom Poland, reaches its fifth chapter this week—entitled “False Orders.”

Topics of the Day, No. 9, presents bits of wit and humor compiled from the international press. “Cracked Ice” is the title of the current release of the Aesop's Film Fables series of animated cartoons. Pathe News, issues Nos. 20 and 21, complete the week's program with last minute pictorial records of world events.

Headway Made on Pathe Comedies at Roach Studio

Agnes Ayres has completed the Hal Roach-Pathe comedy upon which she has been working under the direction of Leo McCarey. No title has been definitely selected. Miss Ayres received support from Stan Laurel and Forrest Stanley.

Charley Chase's newest comedy for Hal Roach has also been completed. It is in the nature of a domestic farce and has as its principals besides Chase, Jean Arthur, May Wallace and Marie Carillo. James Parrott directed.

Oliver Hardy has been added to the cast of the latest Hal Roach Star comedy, an untitled sea story which Fred Guiol is directing. Other members of the cast include Stan Laurel, Viola Richard, Charles Althoff, Polly Moran, Malcolm Waite and others.

Gaiety Pictures Signs T. Holmes to Star in Series

GAIETY PICTURES, INC., of which Amedee J. Van Buren is president, announces a forthcoming series of two-reel comedies which will set forth the difficulties encountered in endeavoring to sail the matrimonial ship. Taylor Holmes, stage and screen star, has been engaged by the producing company to fill the part of the young husband. Members of the supporting cast, the technical and editorial staffs will be announced shortly.

Taylor Holmes

Holmes is now enroute to Hollywood where he will be met by Leander de Cordova, production manager for Gaiety, and by Lawrence Windom, who will direct the series of domestic comedies.

Polly Moran, Old Keystone Funster, Back Again

Another old-time Keystone player has returned to the Sennett comedy lot for work in Pathecomedies. Polly Moran, the two-gun Sheriff Nell of the Keystone days, is playing the role of a temperamental cook in a new Jimmie Smith comedy. Miss Moran will be remembered for her work in the old-time comedies from 1914 to 1917. During that time she was featured comedienne with Willie Collier, Sam Bernard, Weber and Fields, Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin and others.

The latest of the Jimmie Smith series to be completed is "Smith's Candy Shop," featuring Raymond McKee.

Opinions on Current Productions

"One Hour Married"

(Pathe-Hal Roach Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THIS is a diminutive war comedy that is well conceived and carried out. It deserves all sorts of approbation from press and public and doubtless will get it. Creighton Hale has been rejected by the enlistment officers and passed up by the draft. Thinking himself immune from overseas service what more natural than to marry Mabel Normand? But married only one hour he is picked up and catapaulted across the Atlantic into France. His wife's attempt to locate her husband in the front line trenches provides the story. There are many hilarious moments in this tabloid war comedy. Mabel assumes a false moustache that makes her look like "Old Bill." Adventures she and Creighton have in full measure until they capture a German machine gun nest. Whoever wrote it deserves credit as do supervisor F. Richard Jones and director Jerome Storm, once well known for longer and more pretentious pictures.

James Finlayson, Noah Young, Sid Crossley and Charles Geldert are the other featured players. Released February 27th.

Much thought, time, money and effort have gone into the making of "One Hour Married" and I doubt not at all, but that the results will more than justify all this. If they do not, my viewpoint is even more faulty than I sometimes think it may be.

Wool, Mexico and Greenland

(Pathe Review No. 9)

AUSTRALIA as the source of one-sixth of the world's wool supply is selected for the first third of the Pathe Review of February 27th. Excellent shots of sheep herded for shearing and then the seemingly unfair taking from the lambs their covering, even as Wall Street bears and bulls are reported to do. The only difference is that in New York they usually take the hide of the victim also.

Mexico City, America's oldest capital, is the subject in color of interesting pictures. The street scenes, cathedral monuments and parks with historical data selected by the camera man for Pathe bring home the conviction that many Americans would do well to travel south of the Rio Grande River for sight-seeing instead of always boarding a liner for Europe.

The Putnam expedition to Greenland last year carried a Pathe camera operator. The results are now being released. Here again are excellent selection of subject and good photography. Putnam and Robert Bartlett, that veteran of Peary North Pole expeditions, are graphically shown at night poring over maps of the cruise under the light of a ship's lantern. That is the sort of judgment shown in this introduction which characterizes the other shots. The rest of the expedition should prove equally interesting as this introduction is.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Cracked Ice"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

THIS is not during the "Merry Month of June." but rather during any one of those months in which outdoor skating may be enjoyed. "Farmer Al," as usual, is the goat. First he falls into a hole in the ice and is rescued by "Milton." Unfortunately, he is encased in a block of ice. While this is thawing his head projecting beyond the ice is utilized by a friendly polar bear and her cub for a punching bag. Ultimately the ice melts. But that only means more trouble for Al. Hungry he frequents a hot-dog stand. The frankfurter is extracted by the playful mice. A pursuit of the meat of his sandwich follows. All of which proves there is no peace for the leading male character in this series of Fables. But as long as he and the others make happier the lives of the people sitting in front of the screen their sufferings serve a most estimable purpose. More and better troubles for the future.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Samurai, Havana and a Boy Athlete

(Pathe Review No. 8—Released February 20)

"FIGHTING FASHIONS" is the title given to the first third of the Pathe Review and is appropriate because most of the shots are of the Samu ai, the fighting men of Japan. They are shown in their costumes that date back many generations, celebrating one of Japan's innumerable festivals in which they seemingly delight. With their characteristic progressiveness it is hardly necessary to point out that these belong to a bygone age, for today Japan equips her soldiers with the most modern uniforms and devices for fighting. They showed that in the World War.

"The Bulwarks of Havana" show the ancient fortifications which were built to protect the Capital of Spain's most western colony. They have long since outlived their usefulness, but are interesting as relics. Moro Castle. known to everyone since the Spanish-American War. probably strikes a more responsive chord than almost any other Cuban name.

"The Somersault Slicker" is taken with the Alvin V. Knechtel new process camera that shows the same figure in duplicated poses. Robert Coleman, a nine-year-old boy, does some stunts that older athletes might well envy. It is an interesting series photographically and in subject. It rounds out an unusually good Review release.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Slippery Silks"

(Fox-Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN the expedient of having one of the leading male characters dress as a girl with the inevitable result that the males in a seemingly feminine Sahara fall for the female impersonator. Lige Conley, that tried and true farceur, with his friend, Cliff Bowes, strike the western town to sell something or other, it doesn't much matter what. And they are the ones who get into trouble. Lige's troubles are caused by Babe London, fat and boy-hungry, falling for him. Her father has threatened to shoot the next one who discards his plump daughter. Cliff is the woman-man who appeals to Babe's father, a Swede—in the picture —John Kolb in real life, and Frank Coleman, the father of the girl, Caryl Lincoln, who attracts Lige's fickle fancy. The last seen of the latter pair they were driving away in one of father's lumber teams, for morality's sake, I hope, for the nearest minister.

The quintet do rather well with the material and situations provided by Henry Johnson and Phil Whitman, equally guilty of story and scenario.

"Weatherproof"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

GRANTLAND RICE picks on indoor sports, such as basketball, gym stunts, squash and bowling, for what he calls "weatherproof" sports; in other words sports that are played indoors no matter what the outside conditions may be. Star performers in each sport are featured, such as Fillmore Hyde and Thomas Coward in squash, Mort Lindsey in bowling and Dorothy Nicoll, Met Indian club swinging champion. The bowling shots are unusually interesting, showing the unerring marksmanship possessed by men who know how to use the alleys rightly. It is a mighty good release.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Tiffany-Colorart Subjects

(Four One-Reel Scenic Productions in Technicolor)

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

AN especial treat is in store for those of your patrons who see any or all of the four one-reel scenic productions photographed in Technicolor, released through Tiffany exchanges. They are the first of a series being produced by Colorart and if they may be used as a criterion of the worth of those to follow there need be no fear on the producer's part as to the finding of a market

"The Barefoot Boy" a picture version of the John Greenleaf Whittier classic, seems to have the greatest appeal, possibly because of the fact that most people are familiar with the poem and also that the youth who portrays the boy is a fortunate selection. In addition to a number of the most exquisite views of the country ever seen it will bring to the young people an appreciation of the joys of youth and it should help the elders to dwell, in memory, on the happy days of childhood. The sub-titles are taken from the poem.

"On the Trail of the Ranger" has some beautiful views of the snow-capped mountain peaks in the Rocky Mountain section of this country. We follow the ranger on his tour of inspection through the rocky passes and along the shores of lakes; through ravines and the forest-like country. There is a sense of calm and peace that permeates the being of the spectator.

"The Isle of June" incorporates scenes on a tropical island, visions of blue water, which in some spots has a "Parrish" hue, and under-water scenes that make one wish it were possible to visit that part of the world, just to get an "eyefull." Every detail of color is beautifully brought out. In addition to the scenic value of this reel there is an educational angle in that many of the citizens of the water-bed are shown, which is also interesting.

"Fisherman's Luck" takes the spectator up through the New England villages, where this industry claims the attention of most of the inhabitants, especially in the Gloucester, Mass., district. The fishermen are shown starting at daybreak, being compelled to work in a heavy mist, which is always in evidence and which, too, didn't help camera work. There are also a number of interesting shots photographed at night with the lighthouse spotlight playing over the water in an attempt to find a rowboat and its occupants which had become separated from the fishing fleet.

All four productions are worthy of exhibition in any type of theatre.

"Clothes Make the Women"

(Tiffany-Colorart—One Reel)

ANOTHER of the series in Technicolor just as pleasing to the eye but with the added attraction, for the women, of a wonderful fashion display, with a beautiful girl as the model and, for the men, the beautiful girl will more than repay the time spent in viewing the production.

Unlike the others of the Colorart series, this number has a story which, though slight, because the primary motive is the gowns and the color, enhances the value of this attraction. No better selection for the model could have been made than Sigrid Holmquist, for with her beautiful natural coloring and blonde hair she photographs "like a million dollars." A few views of the dressing room in the modiste's shop will add to the picture's entertainment value for the men.

"You can't go wrong with any Tiffany-Colorart number," to paraphrase the slogan of a popular song publishing house, seems to be the tag-line in order for this and four other subjects from the same company reviewed elsewhere on this page.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"The Silent Partner"

(Universal-Mustang—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WHAT is the use of "framing" the hero? The villain should know by this time that he will lose out in the end. But evidently even when they have been in the game for years they never learn their lesson. That is just what happens in "The Silent Partner," and logically, Edmund Cobb proves that the villain engineered the theft of the money from Hazel Keener's movie father of which he is so unjustly and pathetically accused. The suspense comes when Edmund has caught the secondary villain who is given the dirty work to do and from him wrests a confession. The villain is marrying Hazel and it is up to Cobb to establish a cross-country record for that section of the West. He must get to the house in time to halt the wedding and take his rightful place as bridegroom instead of that deep-dyed, dastardly coward who is only marrying the girl for her money anyway.

Edmund Cobb drives a pair behind a buckboard as cleverly as he rides a broncho. Also he makes love convincingly. Hazel Keener justifies any and all skill he displays in this respect. Her father, or any movie father, for that fact, should learn the folly of trying to get a strong-willed daughter to marry the villain. She will marry the misunderstood hero anyway in the end.

William Wyler's voice went through the megaphone. March 19th and the public will be permitted their first view of "The Silent Partner."

"Some More Excuses"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

CONSCIOUSLY or otherwise Director Scott Pembroke has been plagiarizing in this one of the "Excuse Maker" series, featuring Charles King. His sinister stranger insisting upon the automobile ride is taken bodily from a Harry Langdon two-reeler called, I think, "The Marriage Wow." The reckless driving ending in the throwing away of the steering wheel by the obviously demented man, the make-up of the latter, etc., are about as much like the Langdon picture as two things can be. From this start the picture goes through all sorts of weird and mysterious happenings of skeletons, mummies, apes, spirit opening doors and windows, etc. It seems that the villain is a man whom Charley King had sent to an asylum and now he is determined on his revenge. Fortunately for Stern Brothers and followers of the comedian the keepers arrive in time to save Charley and his movie wife.

Certainly there is enough action in the piece to satisfy the most exacting. From start to finish Charles is put through his paces so that you sigh a sigh of relief when it is all over. It provides both thrills and laughs.

Released March 9.

"Everybody's Servant"

(Fox-Variety—900 Feet, Released March 6)

WHILE you may know, yet you do not realize the many uses to which electricity is put in our daily life until you see this reel of the Fox Variety series released March 6. All the household tasks—cooking, washing, sweeping, etc., the player piano (radio should have been included), the bigger things, such as supplying water for fires, transoceanic telephoning, telephoning in the old fashion and through dial systems, etc., etc. Interesting shots of the great power houses at Niagara and the falls themselves add to the effectiveness of the reel. It is well selected and interesting combination of shots.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Birthday Greetings"

(Fox-Imperial Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is quite an hilarious comedy that should and will amuse many. For her father's birthday (Frederick Sullivan), his daughter (Dorothy Kitchen) buys a small decanter and glasses which are contained in a wooden ball. Closed, this gives no inkling of its contents. Two anarchists have threatened to deliver a bomb at three o'clock that afternoon. Detectives (William E. Jamison and George Gray) hired to protect father are mixed up in the comedy melee as is George Harris the boy delivering from his father's (William Engle) store Dorothy's gift to her father. Naturally this is mistaken for the threatened bomb. Add one trained seal—another birthday gift—to balance the ball on his nose in the most approved variety-house manner and you can almost construct your own farce.

Edward P. Moran and J. Walter Rubens are credited with the story and have no cause to hang their heads on that account. Gene Forde and Zion Myers divide the directorial credit. George E. Marshall, as usual, supervised, and Ben Kline ground the camera. Released March 6th.

"The Joys of Camping"

(Educational-Bruce Scenic—One Reel)

CAMPING is like many other things in life, love of olives, for example; you must enjoy it because of some hereditary throwback. You can acquire it though, if your forebears did not instill the liking. This Bruce Scenic may have this effect. Robert C. Bruce stars in this one of his own offerings. His cameraman depicts settings and scenes of rare beauty showing what an observing photographer—and others—may find for camping places if they keep their eyes open—and, quite important, have money for travel.

"The Wide Open Spaces," nominally a separate offering, really supplements the camping sequence for the scenes depicted would inspire almost anyone to go camping. They are taken almost entirely in the West and show some rarely beautiful photography. Two things you can always credit Bruce with and they are rare judgment of subject and technical knowledge in knowing what exposure to give to his subjects.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Heavy Date"

(Educational-Life Cartoon—One Reel)

ROMANCE, justified by the coming of spring, is the dominant note in this tale of the love-making of "Mike" and "Myrtle." Before the fade-out close-up of hero and heroine in each others arms exchanging devastating kisses, much takes place. "Mike" falls from the top of a cliff and is not rescued by "Nibbins" and his friends, even if they, firemen-like, hold a blanket for his fall. They make amends when "Mike" starts his serenade. He cannot reach the balcony where Juliet-Myrtle is listening, enthralled to "Mike's" music. The cats climb on each other's backs. Still the balcony is beyond reach. But, ah, the resourceful lover! "Myrtle's" pet dog is lowered from the balcony. The cats' backs go up in the time-honored manner and the requisite additional height is attained. Thus are love and romance most happily served by cartoonist and his puppets.

Life is commencing to put some life into its cartoon series.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Mail Pilot"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

IT was about time the clever artists who make Aesop's Fables, the animated cartoon that deals mostly with affairs in the lives of Farmer Al, Thomas Kat and Milton Mouse, should take cognizance of the air mail. They have now done justice to it. Not only is an attempt made to rob the air mail thwarted, of course, but the brave pilot goes on a honeymoon in his plane. Milton is the daredevil. Farmer Al figures in the picture only as being the recipient of an anvil sent by air mail. How it was delivered I leave to you to find out. The daughter of the postmaster, with a weakness for Milton, not only saves her lover when a friendly pelican carries her aloft, but joins the aviator for an aerial honeymoon.

A most successful release in the series.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Listen, Lena"

(Educational-Mermaid—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AL ST. JOHN, the star of this Mermaid comedy, lives across the street from his sweetheart, Lucille Hutton, which makes it plot-convenient and pleasant for all concerned. When he gets a hurry-call from the girl he dashes over in pyjamas, not realizing his condition of undress. It seems that Clem Beauchamps is the favored suitor, possibly because he is a better dresser or more careful one, or because he is a rotten revolver shot or for some other equally logical reason. But Al gets the girl and her father, Jack Lloyd, in a car and they start for a minister. The latter, for plot purposes, lives in the country. This justifies—or does it?—a cross-country ride in which the passengers and driver are shaken up. Arriving at the minister's they find they have taken on a cow and her offspring. Anyway they get married (Al and Lucille) and all's well with the world.

There are enough absurd situations to justify the two-reeler. It should score. Pay tribute to Stephen Roberts, director, and Jack White, supervisor.

"Buster's Dark Secret"

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

FIRST AID to the injured is the role played by "Buster" (Arthur Trimble), "Mary Jane" (Doreen Tuner) and "Tige" in this two-reeler. The trio go in search of a painting made by Buster's uncle which has been stolen. "Tige" posed in the frame at an exhibition when the realism of the "picture" results in its sale. Consequently it must be replaced. They set out on the quest of the purloined masterpiece. In the home of the crooks they locate and recover the picture, but not before the trio and a little pickaninny picked up en route go through all sorts of harrowing experiences.

It is an amusing and ingenious picture and cannot fail to score with old and new friends of the series. It is not only the legitimate laughs provided but the novelty of the situations when the home of the thieves is reached by the daring youngsters and their ever-present dog companion.

Gus Meins directed the piece which is scheduled for release March 7.

"Felix, The Cat, Is Pedigreedy"

(Educational-Pat Sullivan Cartoon—One Reel)

FELIX wishes to go to an extremely swanky night club. Pedigree rather than the size of the bankroll seems to be what counts. (Needless to state, the locale of the animated cartoon is not in New York). Thrown out once because lacking a pedigree, he returns to tell the awe-inspired club members and the employees a tale of his ancestry. Associated with Noah as navigators and life-savers, with Rameses, the king, not the cigarette of Egypt's royal family, as the originator of the Charleston and finally with Columbus as a demonstrator of the round-earth theory his predecessors on the family tree are all that the most exacting can ask. Does he get the job, pardon me, membership? He sure does.

Some highly entertaining and amusing ideas are thus incorporated in this Pat Sullivan conceit. It will keep up the deservedly high reputation the series enjoys.—PAUL THOMPSON.

Cavender a Constable in "Drama De Luxe"

Glen Cavender, who has appeared as a policeman, detective or sheriff in a number of pictures produced recently at the Educational studio calling for an officer role, is to be seen as a constable in "Drama De Luxe," the current Lupino Lane starring comedy.

The Galloping Gobs

Buffalo Bill, Jr., Leaves the Navy for a Horse

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN an unpretentious yet amusing and entertaining vehicle for Buffalo Bill, Jr. Westerns usually damn themselves because of the lack of originality which characterizes them; consequently, anything that shows the slightest endeavor to get out of the beaten path deserves applause. The wearer of the famous patronymic is introduced leaving a battleship with his buddy, Morgan Brown, on shore leave. Mixing up in a brawl they find themselves seated at a table playing poker with a stranger. By out-cheating the latter they get his claim on a ranch in the West. Then, hopping freight, or riding blind-baggage, they reach the Western destination. It seems that their deserted shack is the hangout for a bunch of robbers whose capture they are instrumental in effecting. Incidentally, "the girl" in the picture, Betty Baker, has been kidnaped and must be rescued. This is attended to also after a number of typical bloodless battles in which hero Bob shows that he should have gone into the Tunney-Dempsey line for real financial returns. But what care movie heroes for pelf when a girl is to be saved and wrongs righted?

With the expenditure of little money, obviously, in the making, "The Galloping Gobs" (neat alliteration that), is entertaining and will score in the less pretentious off-the-main-highway houses.

THEME: Two sailors inherit a ranch and round up a gang of desperadoes.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Sailor sequence at start. Star's performance.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Simple, intelligible-to-anyone story, plausible and exciting.

DRAWING POWER: Good in outlying houses.

Length, 4,524 feet. Released February 27.
Produced by Action Pictures (Lester F. Scott, Jr.). Distributed by Pathe.

The Final Extra

A Cub Reporter, Chorus Girl and Bootlegger

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WHILE this picture makes no claim to be a silent-screen replica of the two Broadway legitimate hits, "Broadway" and "Chicago," yet it invariably makes a reviewer think of them because you have an interesting blend of newspapers, the theatre, bootlegging and other metropolitan ingredients. It is an interesting and well done story which Herbert Clark has written and which James P. Hogan directed.

The story concerns itself with the murder of Frank Beal, a veteran reporter, by a rum running gang headed by John J. Miljan, nominally a theatrical producer, whose connection with the gang is suspected but not proved. Grant Withers, a cub reporter, establishes Miljan's guilt, saves the girl from him and scores the beat for his paper. In the telling of the tale many interesting phases of big city life are shown. These include the city room and pressroom of a big daily, back stage and the front of the theatre on the occasion of a musical comedy premiere, the East Side quarters of the rum gang, the suburban home of the villain, etc.

It is convincingly acted for the most part by a capable company, headed by the star. Direction of the whole picture by Hogan, under Glenn Belt's supervision, and of the dance numbers alone by Larry Ceballos, is worthy of commendation. Not a big nor an important picture, yet there is little doubt of its appeal.

The cast: Marguerite De LaMotte, Grant Withers, John Miljan, Joseph W. Girard, Frank Beal, Billy Jones, Leon Holmes. Author, Herbert C. Clark. Film Editor, Edith Wakeling. Director, James P. Hogan. Supervisor, Glenn Belt. Photographer, Ray June.

THEME: Newspaper solving bootlegging scandal. Cub reporter doing this wins daughter of murdered star newspaperman, herself a stage star.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Successful creation of newspaper atmosphere. Interesting sidelights on a big city's activities. Well directed and acted.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: "How the other half" (New York) lives.

DRAWING POWER: Good, especially one-day houses.

Length, 6,000 feet. Released February 14.

Marriage

Some H. G. Wells Ideas on the Institution

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

TO the casual observer Wells would seem no more adapted to screening than Bennett, Galsworthy, Walpole, and some of the other contemporary English writers, who depend more on characterization for their success and appeal than on narrative. Yet, that is the surprising thing about Gertrude Orr's scenario, based on Wells' widely read and discussed ''Marriage.'' Due to her and, to a large extent, the direction of R. William Neill, this has resulted in a uniformly interesting picture, not a great picture, nor one which will satisfy the majority of critical readers of the English writer, but, possibly more important, the greater number of movie fans totally unfamiliar with Wells' position in the writing world.

For the sake of the latter it may be proper to explain that the story deals with the marriage of the heroine (Virginia Valli), to an inventor (Allan Durant), whom she meets when an aeroplane he is piloting crashes in the yard of her parents' rural home. She thus sidesteps an unwelcome marriage to an impossible wealthy suitor (Frank Dunn).

Its appeal, unquestionably, will be greater to non-readers of the novel, which is the presumable intent.

The Cast: Virginia Valli, Allan Durant, Edwards Davis, Billie Bennett, Gladys McConnell, Frank Dunn, Lawford Davidson, Donald Stuart, James Marcus. Director, R. William Neill. Author, H. G. Wells. Scenarist, Gertrude Orr. Cameraman, R. J. Berquist.

THEME: Marriage conflict between an idealist and a luxury-loving wife.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Expensive, but good taste settings; effective African sequence. Good direction and acting.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up Wells for his readers who are fans and the fact that for those who are not, it is a good picture, anyway.

DRAWING POWER: Should be good.

Length, 5,440 feet. Released February 13.
Produced and distributed by Fox.

The Magic Garden

Slender But Charming Stratton-Porter Picture

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

HERE is a picture made from a Gene Stratton-Porter story that has all the fragrance and charm of an old-fashioned garden and consistently bears the title which it does. There are no social problems, no villains, or any of the many things which seem to be omnipresent in the themes of most of latter-day pictures. Instead, the story of a little rich girl who wandered into a garden and found there a little poor boy, poor in money because his father was an artist, but rich in love for his dead mother, his father and for the affection-hungry little stranger. Reclaimed by her father—who had been divorced by her mother—now for the first time conscious of his responsibilities toward his daughter and his latent love for her, she is brought up always with an increasing love for the artist's boy in her heart.

Credit must go many ways. Joseph P. Kennedy, for producing so exquisite a thing; J. Leo Meehan, for excellent direction; Cameraman Allan Siegler, for splendid photographic shots, and the entire cast of players, especially the three children, Joyce Coad, Phillipe Delacy and Walter Wilkinson.

The Cast: Joyce Coad, Margaret Morrison, Phillipe Delacy, Raymond Keane, Charles Clary, William V. Mong, Cesare Gravina, Paulette Duval, Walter Wilkinson, Earle McCarthy, Alfred Allen, Katherine Ward, Ruth Cherrington, Hedda Hopper. Author, Gene Stratton-Porter. Adaptor and director, J. Leo Meehan. Continuity, Charles Kerr. Cameraman, Allan Siegler.

THEME: Poor-little-rich girl in love with rich-little-poor boy whose romance blossoms when they grow up.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Direction, acting, camera work, all-pervading charm of the picture.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Gene Stratton-Porter's fame. Story for young and old.

DRAWING POWER: Excellent in best houses and elsewhere.

Length, 6,807 feet. Released February 27.
Produced and distributed by F.B.O.

The Denver Dude

Hoot Gibson Affects a White Collar

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

BECAUSE a fellow traveler in the mail wagon said Blanche Mehaffey was much more apt to be won by one of the white collar brotherhood Hoot doffed the cowboy clothes in which he had just won all the rodeo honors within sight and donned the habiliments of so-but-miscalled civilization. Thus do women affect our slightest actions in Westerns or real life. He was all wrong in his premise, however, for he came into his own only when he had displayed his horsemanship and courage in corraling the villains and restoring her father's fifty thousand to her. In so doing he cleared up the suspicion that he himself was the safe robber. (You see he was one of several who knew the combination and being the hero, naturally would be the one to be suspected.)

I bow to the combination which made this Universal picture possible; author, Earle Snell; adaptors, Carl Krusada and William Lester, and director, Reeves Eason. Hoot Gibson, of course, did his part, as would be expected in portraying one of those virile he-men of the West. For a matter of fact, he contributes a varied assortment of rodeo accomplishments that cannot fail to thrill even on the screen, this as a sort of prelude to the picture itself.

It is filled with an interesting story, good acting, excellent photographic shots and a rather decent allotment of humor.

The Cast: Hoot Gibson, Blanche Mehaffey, Robert McKim, George Summerville, Glenn Tryon, Howard Truesdell, Mathilde Brundage, Rolfe Sedan, Grace Cunard, Buck Carey, Pee Wee Holmes. Director, Reeves Eason. Author, Earle Snell. Adaptors, Carl Krusada and William Lester.

THEME: Western. Rodeo champion who apes an effete tenderfoot to win girl. But has to do his Western stuff to win out.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: "Different" twist to story. Good acting, direction and photography.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Above.

DRAWING POWER: Good for almost any type house.

Length, 5,292 feet. Released February 13.
Produced and distributed by Universal.

The General

It Could Be Funnier

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NOT so many moons ago, Buster Keaton offered a comedy in which he played around with an antiquated train. It furnished so much laughter that the stone-face comedian cannot be censured for doubling in his tracks. "The General," his first opus under the United Artists banner, places him in the cab of an old-style-big-smoke-stacked engine—from which the film gets its title—and he proceeds to measure out a fair amount of fun. Where it falters is in its repetitious incident, there being nothing of spontaneous humor in its treatment.

Buster visualizes an actual detail of the Civil War—the Andrews railroad raid at Big Shanty, Ga., in 1862. Unable to get into the Confederate army, he uses his engine to pilot the boys in gray. Naturally it becomes more melodramatic than humorous, though the piece is lightened with timely gags here and there.

Keaton has put himself to considerable expense and trouble in making the picture. There is an authentic character about it which shows that it wasn't thought out over night. The premise upon which it builds is an old one. It offers the w. k. chase—with Buster triumphing after various misfortunes. "The General" is good, but not so amusing.

THEME: Comedy-melodrama of an episode of the Civil War with young engineer routing Union forces with his talented engine.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The effort to get into army. The chase. The scene when Union train plunges into river.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Play up as screen version of actual incident of Civil War. Bill as quaint comedy off the beaten path. Play up star.

DRAWING POWER: Keaton's name should draw them. Suitable for all types of houses. Should be a riot south of Washington.

Produced by Joseph M. Schenck.
Distributed by United Artists.
Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.

The Red Mill

Scenically Fine, But Lacks Interest

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

NOT a very good job has been done by the screen version of "The Red Mill," which upon the stage was something to make a fuss over. The passing years haven't dealt so kindly with Victor Herbert's operetta—the plot of which was weak, but which was strengthened by the composer's score. Upon the screen it looks trite even though it has been treated to a coat of slapstick. Apparently the director, William Goodrich ("Fatty" Arbuckle) realized it would never get anywhere under the straight conventional handling, so he's gone more or less burlesque with it.

Marion Davies is a first-rate comedienne who has been developing a deal of individuality since her "Little Old New York" days. She succeeds in investing her role of a Dutch servant with quaintness and charm—and at times extracts humor from the piece. But most of the time it is colorless and dull.

Most of the action takes place in and about a Holland inn—and the sets are atmospheric and appealing. It is the star's job to fall in love with a visiting youth and masquerade as a burgomaster's daughter to save the latter from a forced marriage. And that's all there is to it. The captions are pretty bad.

The Cast: Marion Davies, Owen Moore, Louise Fazenda, George Siegmann, Karl Dane, J. Russell Powell, Snitz Edwards, William Orlamond. Director, William Goodrich.

THEME: Comedy-drama of servant girl in Holland inn who wins the heart of a guest and saves a burgomaster's daughter from a forced marriage.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The atmosphere of a typical Holland town. The canals, dikes, and costumes. The comedy of star. The flirtation and romance between hero and heroine. The climax.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Feature it as adaptation of highly successful operetta. Play up star in her quaint costume. Use original score for musical accompaniment. Put on prologue suggestive of atmosphere.

DRAWING POWER: Should attract in every type of house.

Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.
Produced by Cosmopolitan. Distributed by Metro-Goldwyn.

McFadden's Flats

It's Hokum, But They Should Like It

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

BY all the laws of what constitute up-to-the-minute comedy, this release should be dismissed as a relic of yesteryear—what with its old-time burlesque gags. Yet it is done in such a spontaneous fashion that the incident looks genuinely novel. It amuses through most of its footage, its triteness disappearing under the volume of high jinks executed by the irrepressible Charlie Murray and the inimitable Chester Conklin. What these two comedians don't put over isn't worth mentioning!

At the New York Strand their antics had the house in an uproar most of the time—especially when Charlie as the erstwhile hod-carrier couldn't make his feet and face behave in his ritzy apartment. And again when Chester gags up the barber shop episodes. Playing one of those resourceful Scots for a change, he extracts real humor and pathos over his financing of the Irishman's party. The picture gets sentimental when McFadden's daughter high hats the old man.

The Cast: Charlie Murray, Chester Conklin, Edna Murphy, Larry Kent, Aggie Herring, DeWitt Jennings, Dorothy Dwan, Cissy Fitzgerald, Freeman Wood, Dot Farley, Leo White. Director, Richard Wallace.

THEME: Comedy-drama of poor family that becomes suddenly rich—with head of house unable to adapt himself to luxuries.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The antics of Charlie Murray in trying to accustom himself to luxuries of home. The talented feet of Murray. The party sequence. The Labor Day parade. The scene with the valet. The antics of Conklin as a barber.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Bill as screen version of highly successful play—with a cast of real comedians putting it over. Bill as affording Murray and Conklin all kinds of opportunities to be amusing. Use Irish tunes for musical score.

DRAWING POWER: Title and cast should pull 'em in. Suitable for average houses in neighborhoods or business districts.

Length, six reels. Released February, 1927.
Produced and distributed by First National.

Regional News from Correspondents

New York & New Jersey

NOW that a certain number of reports are in concerning the recent Pathe Ball at the Hotel Roosevelt, it would appear that everyone had a good time; yes, everyone, including Charles Stombaugh. Considerably more about this brilliant affair appears in another section of this publication.

The last meeting of the M.P.T.O. of New Jersey was held at the Stacy-Trenton, where a number of important matters were discussed. The meeting was well attended.

Harry Lewis, for the past seven years at the Olympic Theatre, Brooklyn, has joined the A. H. Schwartz circuit and will manage the new Mayfair Theatre, Avenue U and Coney Island Avenue, Brooklyn. The Mayfair is said to be one of the few houses in the fast growing Schwartz circuit that includes vaudeville in its program. Harry will undoubtedly be missed in the Olympic's neighborhood, where he has been ever since shedding his sergeant's uniform on his return from the war.

The old Olympic Theatre presents an appearance today, it is said, that is only equaled by the most modern theatres, having been entirely rebuilt from stem to stern.

Another newcomer to the Schwartz theatre chain is O. R. Gottfried, formerly with First National Pictures (Cuba), Inc., Mr. Gottfried will manage the Albemarle on Flatbush Avenue, Brooklyn.

The Burnryer Amusement Company, a subsidiary of one of the larger local theatre circuits, recently leased a theatre to be built on the north side of Burnside Avenue, between Anthony and Ryer avenues, the Bronx, from the H. B. & S. Building Corporation. The house will seat 2,500 on two floors, and construction will get under way immediately. Berk & Moross were the brokers in the transaction.

The 1892 Third Avenue Corporation recently sold to Rosenfeld and Brody and B. & S. Amusement Corporation the lease of the two-story theatre structure at 1892-1894 Third Avenue. The lease is for a term of forty-two years at an approximate total rental of $500,000 and the house will continue to serve as a motion picture theatre.

M. Cashin is reported as having purchased an interest in the Willoughby and Ideal theatres, Brooklyn. Mr. Cashin has also recently opened an office at 1600 Broadway in the interest of an advertising device for theatres.

Leon Britton, who specializes in fight pictures, returned recently from a business trip to Chicago.

It is reported that Jos. Steinkritz will take over the Regent Theatre, uptown, New York.

M. Gerber, formerly with Fox Films, is now associated with the Amusement Supply Company. The latter is conducted by Pear Brothers, former Brooklyn exhibitors.

Nelson & Renner's new Stilwell Theatre at 86th Street and 24th Avenue, Bensonhurst, Brooklyn, is generally spoken of as one of the most attractive of the recently opened houses in this locality. Novelty Scenic Studios, it is said, contributed greatly to the decorative scheme. L. Simon is the manager of the Stilwell.

Seider and Moley's new tab show, in production for the past several weeks, will open at the Hill Theatre, Newark, this Thursday for an indefinite run.

When the new Universal Theatre at New Utrecht Avenue, Borough Park section of Brooklyn, is completed, that neighborhood will boast of approximately 9,000 seats. The Universal house will give to Brooklyn its first "atmospheric" type motion picture theatre. John Eberson, famous Chicago architect, drew the plans.

More theatre openings have occurred and several more will take place within the next few weeks, according to recent reports.

Many complimentary remarks were passed in reference to the first performance given at Joelson's Parkway Theatre, the Bronx. Practically every local exchange man was there and over fifty handsome baskets of flowers decorated the lobby and foyer as evidence of well wishes to the operators. Louis Ganz, one of the most popular managers in the Bronx, will have charge of the Parkway.

Small & Strausberg's Granada Theatre, Polk Avenue and 44th Street, Corona another new theatre to open, got under way Friday, February 11th.

Other February openings include Louis Nelson's Caroll Theatre, set for February 5th; William Salkin's Eagle, 103rd Street and Third Avenue, and Morris Needle's Parkwest, the latter scheduled for a grand opening on the 28th of February. This house has been redecorated throughout and the seating capacity increased by 200. Charles O'Reilly's new house will also get under way soon.

Keith-Albee's new theatre at Columbus Avenue and 99th Street will open sometime during March.

Loew's Fordham Grand, Fordham Road and Jerome Avenue will hold its first show Thursday of this week. D. Schiller, formerly with the Circle Theatre, will be in charge.

Three more theatres that will reopen this week include the Metropolis, 142nd and Third Avenue, Al Harsten officiating; the South Ozone, Ozone Park, Brooklyn, and the Armory Theatre, Seventh Avenue and Fourteenth Street, Brooklyn. The latter house was at one time known as the Palace.

Joe Hornstein, Eastern zone manager of the National Supply Company and H. A. R. Dutton, head of the firm with headquarters in Chicago, left for that city last Sunday afternoon. Joe will be away about a week.

In the meantime let us see what Joe's good man Friday, the versatile Dave Solomon, reports in the way of recent equipment installations: Two Simplex projectors, two Hertner transverters, a Brenkert spot and a Dalite screen went to Small & Strausberg's Granada; practically the same bill was ordered by Joelson's Parkway, with the exception of two curtain control motors; the Carroll Theatre bought two Simplex machines, a Hertner transverter and a Dalite screen. Practically all projectors were equipped with Peerless arcs.

The addition to the National Supply Company's offices at 1560 will be ready by March 1st. These quarters will be occupied by the auditing and organ departments.

George Dunbar has been appointed General Manager of Chrisedge Theatres, Inc., with headquarters at the Wakefield Theatre, White Plains Road, Bronx.

Baltimore

S. J. GATES has resigned as manager of Loew's State Theatre, Norfolk, Va.

A 2,000 pound safe in the office of the American Theatre, Phoebus, Va., was rolled from the theatre office to the orchestre pit by burglars recently. The combination dial and handle were destroyed but the safe withstood further attempts to open it.

The Arcadia Company has just been formed in Hagerstown, Md., with A. Julian Brylawski, Alan J. Bachrach and C. Walter Baker as the incorporators. The capital is $5,000 and the purpose of the company is to open a restaurant and a cafeteria in the building now housing Nixon's Academy. Mr. Bachrach is manager of the theatre and Mr. Brylawski is a Washington, D. C., film man

The Associated Theatre Corporation, Baltimore, Louis Garman, president, plans to build a moving picture theatre 90 by 180 feet at Park Heights and Spalding avenues. The seating capacity will be 1,500 persons and the design is being drawn by E. G. Blanke, architect. Mr. Garman is proprietor of the Pimlico Theatre, a short distance from the proposed new house.

The Cumberland branch of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators held their eleventh annual banquet at the Maryland Theatre, Cumberland, January 9th. On the committee of arrangements were C. E. Sanders, chairman, W. C. Bucy and Edgar Growden.

Norman Ayres, formerly representing Baltimore for Warner Brothers, is traveling in the Virginia territory for that company.

The Virginia territory is being covered for Columbia Pictures now by E. J. Martin.

Tracy Cunningham has joined the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer forces in Washington, D.C., as a salesman.

T. E. Dewing, proprietor of the Opera House, Centerville, Md., has brought a DeVrey motion picture camera and will take pictures of news events in the neighborhood of his playhouse with the assistance of a photographer. They will be shown weekly at his theatre.

Seventy-five deputy sheriffs of Baltimore have dropped out of the 450 formerly in the association in which almost every motion picture exhibitor and theatre owner in Baltimore is a member.

Frank Hamerman, president of the American Theatres Corporation, operating the Embassy Theatre, Baltimore, was called to Philadelphia suddenly on Friday, February 4th, due to his wife having become seriously ill. She was taken to a hospital and operated on at once, with three doctors in attendance.

Mrs. James Calahan, wife of the treasurer of the Rialto Theatre, Washington, D.C., presented her husband with a bouncing boy recently.

The mother of Miss Frances Klimkewicz died recently in Washington, D.C. Miss Klimkewicz is employed at the Washington, D. C., office of Famous Players-Lasky.

Ashley Abendschein has been transferred from the Savoy Theatre, Washington, D.C., to the management of the Tivoli Theatre, Frederick, Md., by the Stanley-Crandell Company. Joseph Flynn will succeed Mr. Abendschein at the Savoy. He comes from the York. Charles Clark will go to the York and Walter Corsley will succeed Clark at the Home.

The spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be held at the Hotel Monticello, Norfolk, Va., from April 25th to 28th.

New England

FOR the third time in as many weeks, a Massachusetts audience refused to leave a theatre because of fire. This time the audience numbered about a thousand people and was attending the show at the Mark-Strand Theatre, Worcester, Mass.

Fire in the Wit Building next door swept through that structure, doing damage of between $35,000 and $40,000. When the smell of smoke became noticeable in the theatre, Assistant Manager George Gibson announced that the fire was in progress next door and informed the audience that it could leave or remain. No one left. Meanwhile, as the film unfolded on the screen, the smoke grew thicker, until at times the view of the screen was obscured. Still the audience remained.

When the smoke became so dense as to interfere with the operator in the projection room, Manager Clarence C. Robbins went to the stage and ordered the audience out. Even then he had to urge some of the people to leave. Tickets were given out at the box office for a future performance and the theatre was then closed for the night by Mr. Robbins.

At the annual meeting of the New England Film Board of Trade at Boston, an almost complete new list of officers and committees were elected, as follows: President, Joseph A. McConville, Independent Films, Inc.; first vice-president, R. C. Cropper, Pathe; second vice-president Joseph L. Roth, Consolidated Films; secretary, Moe Grassgreen, Fox Film Corp. corresponding secretary, Miss Martha W. Ferris, reelected.

The new president was promoted from secretary and succeeds Henry T. Scully of United Artists as head of the board. The addition of a second vice-president to the list of officers is made for the first time this year.

Committees appointed by President McConville are as follows:

Arbitration—Maurice N. Wolfe of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, chairman; Herbert Elder, Vitagraph; Moe Grassgreen, Fox; William H. Erbb, Famous Players-Lasky, C. McGerigle, Film Booking Office.

Legislative—Harry Campbell, Fox, chairman; W. H. Bradley, Pictures in Motion, and Ed Golden, Golden Distributing Co.

Transportation — William H. Erbb, Famous Players, chairman; John J. Scully, Educational, and C. McGerigle.

Executive — Retiring President Henry T. Scully, United Artists, and Thomas Spry, First National.

Credit—Henry T. Scully, chairman; M. E. Morey of American Feature Films, and Myer Greuber, Tiffany Productions.

Boston Film district will tender a testimonial dinner to Thomas B. Spry, manager of First National Pictures, who has been promoted to district manager of the same company, in honor of his promotion, at the Swiss Room in the Copley Plaza Hotel on Wednesday evening, Feb. 23rd. Dinner is scheduled for seven, to be followed by speaking and an entertainment. It is expected that many of the exhibitors about Boston will attend in addition to the executives and sales forces of all of the exchanges.

Maurice N. Wolfe of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is general chairman of the committee in charge, with Jacob Lourie of the New England Theatres Distributing Co., as treasurer; Kenneth Robinson of Famous Players-Lasky, as assistant treasurer; J. Frank Shea of Famous Players-Lasky, as secretary; and Del. Bibber as assistant secretary. Judge A. L. Brackett, general counsel for the exhibitors, is guest chairman.

The committee on arrangements consists of William Erbb of Famous Players-Lasky, as chairman; Charles Hodgdon of the Daniels and Hodgdon circuit; Harry Campbell of Fox; Louis M. Boas; Jack Magann, and President Joseph A. McConville of the Film Board. Art Spaulding will be master of ceremonies and the entertainment committee consists of Vic Morris as chairman, Al Somerby, Joseph Brennan, Moe Silver, Charles Frazier and Earl Crabb, which assures the affair of one of the best programs possible.

Safety—Moe Grassgreen, chairman; Joseph L. Roth and H. Kirschgessner, Producers Distributing Corp.

The first demonstration of "talking movies" in Worcester is being arranged by the various civic organizations and the New England Telephone and Telegraph Co. for the Hotel Bancroft ball room for March 21st. The Worcester Traffic Club will have charge. A demonstration of transmitting pictures by telephone will also be given.

Demolition of the Massasoit Building at Springfield is in full swing preparing the site for the new Massasoit Theatre to be erected by Arthur S. Friend interests. It has been found possible to use a small part of the old structure in the construction of the new theatre but the greater part will be torn down. A large office building will be built in conjunction with the theatre.

The Olympia Theatre at Bristol, R.I., which has been operated by Mrs. McClure for several years, has been purchased by Max Davidson of the Broadway Theatre, Norwich, Conn.

Morris Pouzzner and the Regional Theatres Corp. have taken over the Putnam Theatres at Danielson, Conn., and will operate them in conjunction with the chain of houses at Southbridge, Mass., and Olneyville, R.I., which they recently acquired.

Henry T. Scully, retiring president of the New England Film Board and manager of United Artists exchange at Boston, is passing out fragrant Havanas, the occasion being the arrival of a son at the Scully household. Friends declare there is grave danger of having a spoiled child in the household as the new arrival is the first boy, its arrival having been preceded by four beautiful daughters.

Miss Edna Crovo, assistant booker at American Feature Film exchange, Boston, who recently injured her spine in a fall and was confined to the hospital for some time, is back again at her desk, much improved in health.

Henry J. Steinberg is soon to open his new theatre in Worcester, to be known as the Steinberg Theatre, with a seating capacity of 1,000. The theatre is located on Elm Street and the finishing touches are now being given it. The marquise and illuminated sign were put in place this week.

Mrs. Manley, wife of Arthur Manley, treasurer of the Wilbur Theatre, Boston, presented her husband with a son and heir during the week.

Manager R. C. Cropper of the Pathe exchange and Gerald Swaebe, Educational department salesman, have returned from a trip to Portland, Me. and other Maine cities in the interests of their company.

Ralph Quive, feature film salesman for Pathe, was called to Indiana during the week by the serious illness of his sister.

Sam Lubelle has returned to the Boston sales force of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer after an absence of two years in which he has been associated with the company's Pittsburgh office. He was warmly greeted by friends on his return to his old territory.

The recently opened Capitol Theatre in Lowell has been purchased by Sam Torgan of that city, who also operates the Strand, and added to the Strand Theatre Corp. circuit.

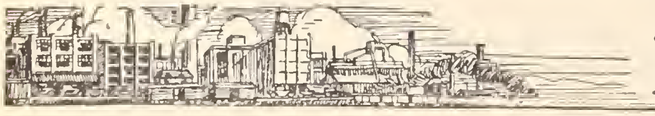
Manager Joseph Brennan of Loew's State Theatre, Boston, recently elected head of the Massachusetts Avenue Association of that city, was tendered a dinner at the Hotel Colonial Oak Room on Wednesday by members of that organization.

Harry Wasserman of the Dudley and Rivoli theatres, Boston, has been elected president of the Roxbury Improvement Association.

Fred Hardwick of the Strand, Taunton, is the envy of all Film Row with his beautiful new Cadillac sport roadster, which he drove to the Row during the week.

William Preston, former salesman in the New England territory, has joined the ranks of exhibitors and is managing the Star Theatre at Taunton for T. B. Gaffney.

A midnight benefit show will be held at the Strand, Quincy, for William DeWolf, manager of the Murphy houses in Quincy for a number of years, Washington's Birthday eve.



Detroit

AL MORITZ, branch manager for Tiffany, is back again at his desk after being away on the road for one week.

Port Huron will soon open two new theatres. One is the New Griswold, operated by William Ort, and will have a seating capacity of 400 seats. The other house is being built by William Jahr, who now has a theatre in Sebwaing. It will seat around 450 and is scheduled to open by February 12th.

Harvey Day, sales manager for Kinograms, was in Detroit last week having a conference with branch manager Harlan Starr of Educational. The theatre which is being erected on Bagley Avenue, next to the Tuller Hotel, is being leased to United Artists for a period of 30 years at an annual rental of $170,000. This new house, it is said, will be amongst Detroit's finest and will seat 2,000 people when completed.

Leon Krim, who operates the Lyric Theatre in Mt. Clemens, has taken over the lease of the Macomb Theatre. Mr. Krim closed the house for one day and during that time repainted and redecorated the lobby and foyer. A gala opening was made Saturday which was attended by the majority of the film people from Detroit. Immediately after the show the entire party went to the New York Hotel, where Mr. Krim had covers laid out for around sixty guests. Entertainment was furnished by Jean Goldkett's Kentucky Colonels and by the various artists who were appearing at the Macomb that week. It is Mr. Krim's intention to spend from $20.000 to $25,000 in improvements in the Macomb.

George W. Trendle of the Kunsky Theatres has left for Florida, where he will spend a month or more.

The American Booking Corporation, distributors of Gotham Productions in Detroit and the surrounding Michigan territory, announces that Marion C. Howard has been appointed managing director of the Detroit office.

Mr. Howard has long been a familiar figure in the industry, both nationally and regionally, and his appointment will doubtless be welcomed by the exhibitors in Michigan as "M. C." has won a reputation for fair dealing and "square shooting" that is an enviable one.

Seattle

RECENT reports to the effect that the Pacific Northwest's Majestic Theatre in Portland would soon became a United Artists' theatre were declared last week to be without foundation, and the previous plan to close the house next month for remodeling has been abandoned. Renovations will possibly be made next spring, it was reported by J. J. Parker, director.

At a dinner given last week for the employees of the local Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer exchange by Branch Manager Ben Fish, the first M-G-M Club of the Northwest was formed. Officers elected were Cecil Gruwell, president; Florence Tonkin, vice-president; Mrs. Margaret Koch, secretary; Miss Dunton, treasurer; and A. J. Sullivan, publicity director. The object of the organization is to form closer harmony between all departments of the branch, in order to afford M-G-M customers the finest service possible.

Fred Mercy and Fred Mercy, Jr., theatre magnates of the Eastern Washington territory, spent a few days in town last week booking pictures for exhibition in Walla Walla during the next few weeks. A recent touch of severe weather in that territory has slowed up business, they report.

Lou Amacher, head of the Portland branch of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was a visitor in this city last week, spending just one day here on a business venture for his firm. Mr. Amacher was formerly connected with the local Film Row, and took this occasion to renew many friendships.

R. E. Connell, builder of the Connell Theatre in Aberdeen a few seasons ago, last week had the ill fortune of having his Liberty Theatre in Everett closed by the Everett fire chief, who revoked the license of the house. It has not been decided yet, according to Mr. Connell, whether or not the house will be remodeled to conform with the new fire law requirements.

John McGill, theatre operator of Port Orchard, last week visited this city and reported that his Community Theatre hereafter would be operated only three nights a week. This move was necessitated by the shutdown of the U. S. Navy Yard, from which he drew most of his patronage. It is expected that week runs will be resumed in May or June.

John Hamrick, owner and general manager of the John Hamrick Theatre in Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, left this week for Los Angeles with Mrs. Hamrick, where he was scheduled to attend a "family reunion." Mr. Hamrick's parents and brothers were to gather in California from several parts of the nation for this affair, the first in many years.

B. F. Shearer, head of the B. F. Shearer Interior Decorating Studios associated with the National Theatre Supply Company, returned last week from Chicago. Accompanied by Frank L. Harris, Portland manager, and Charles Feldman, Denver manager, he visited the home office for several days, and then returned by way of the South.

Several of the film and theatre men of this city departed for Tacoma on Thursday night or Friday morning to attend the opening of the Pacific Northwest Theatres' new Broadway Theatre in that city. The Broadway, which was the old Tacoma Theatre entirely remodeled and renovated, opened under a first-run policy with Fanchon and Marco's stage revues in addition, and operates on a 50-cent admission policy. The house will use the same shows that appear at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in Seattle.

Joe St. Peter, Everett theatre operator, has been absent from his home town for the last few weeks as a result of the convening of the Legislature of the State of Washington. As a senator from the Everett district, Mr. St. Peter now spends his time in the capitol at Olympia, where he is head of the Public Morals Committee of the Senate.

Ray Grombacher, one of Spokane's leading exhibitors and a former president of the M. P. T. O. W., passed through Seattle last week en route to California on a brief business trip. He expected to return to Spokane in time to attend the district meeting of the M. P. T. O. W. called by Secretary James M. Hone for February 14 at the Davenport Hotel.

Leroy V. Johnson, former manager of the Liberty Theatre, and now managing director of the new Jensen-Von Herberg circuit of suburban houses, last week announced that his company has just purchased the new Venetian Theatre in this city from Joe Gargano, for a consideration in excess of $50,000. The Venetian, located at Fifteenth Avenue and Pine Street, is Seattle's newest and most modern suburban playhouse, with a seating capacity of approximately 750 and ample stage facilities for any type of performance. It has been in operation only a few weeks.

L. O. Lukan, western division manager for First National, has been spending a few days in this territory during the last week, visiting Branch Manager Jack Bower.

Marco Wolf, male member of the Fanchon and Marco producing organization of California and a former stage star in his own right, was a visitor here last week. He spent most of his time with Manager James Q. Clemmer of the Fifth Avenue Theatre, where his revues are a weekly feature on the West Coast—Pacific Northwest Theatres chain.

Reports received last week indicate that Paul Hadzer of Ennis, Mont., has reopened the theatre that he formerly operated in that city, and now pursues a first-run policy with three changes weekly.

Oklahoma

AS a result of the meeting held last Monday by the board of directors of the M.P.T.O. of Oklahoma, Eph Johnson of Tulsa will take the place of L. W. Brophy on the Joint Board of Arbitration and John Brown of Tulsa and Fred Pickrel of Ponca City were appointed as alternate members for the exhibitors. The Arbitration Board held a meeting Monday morning, February 14, at 10.30 in the office of the Film Board of Trade at Oklahoma City. This was the first meeting of this board since January 10th, when it met only to adjourn a short time later because of a deadlock over the question as to whether L. W. Brophy was eligible to sit on the board. The exchange members held that he was ineligible, as he was no longer actively engaged in the theatre business.

The Art Theatre at Tulsa, Okla., has been taken over by the Jackson Bros., who have the Cozy at Tulsa. Art Phillips, the former manager of the Art Theatre, is going to become exploitation man for the Majestic at Tulsa, we understand.

Kenneth Dark, for several years assisting R. D. Hutchinson at the Liberty Theatre at Oklahoma City, is the new manager of the Rialto Theatre here. Dark takes the place of Claude Leachman, who has been transferred by Griffith Amusement Co. to Dallas to take charge of the Lyric there.

Phil Isley and his associates announced this week that with the leasing of the Mecca Theatre at Enid, Okla. they would start twelve new theatres in the State within the year.

Work was begun this week on the new building to be occupied by the Home State Film Company at Oklahoma City. This new building will be just west of the present new film building at 700 West Grand, which was finished six weeks ago, and will join on to it, being built in the same style.

The Wewoka Amusement Company is building a new theatre in the same block south of the Wewoka Theatre at Wewoka, Okla. This will be one of the best equipped and smartly furnished theatres in the State when completed, it is said. The new theatre will seat 1,300.

W. D. Burgess, traveling auditor for P.D.C., stopped off at Oklahoma City last Monday for a visit with the local exchange.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jackson have a four-weeks-old baby girl named Betty Ruth. Mr. Jackson, who is now selling for Fox, is well known throughout the territory as an exhibitor. He was formerly connected with his father in the Jackson Theatre at Pawhuska, Okla., and was one of the directors of the M.P. T.O. during that time.

This theatre is owned by the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina recently formed through the affiliation of Publix-Saenger with Piedmont Theatres, Inc.

The Alhambra Theatre, Charlotte, is offering its patrons this week an added attraction, one of the greatest musical sensations to date, this being Victor's latest orthophonic auditorium model. The volume of this machine is said to be very great. It can also be toned down so as to be heard in almost a whisper.

Buffalo

IT is expected that the new theatre in North Main Street, which will be named the Granada and which will be operated by the Schine Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., will be open to the public on Tuesday, February 22. The Granada will seat about 1,500. A Wurlitzer organ is being installed. The large upright electric sign has been placed over the marquee and the seats now are being placed in the auditorium. The interior decoration is in the form of a Spanish Garden. Stars show in the blue sky of the ceiling, which is relieved by heavy oak beams.

The members of the Buffalo Film Board of Trade, which includes managers of all the local exchanges, held a dance in the Hotel Statler, Friday evening, February 11. It was one of the most enjoyable events ever held by this organization.

Herman Lorence, former manager of the Bellevue Theatre in Niagara Falls, has been appointed manager of the Lafayette Square Theatre in Buffalo, succeeding William A. Haynes, who has gone to New Orleans. Mr. Lorence formerly managed theatres in Buffalo, so he is right at home again in his new post.

The Vitaphone at the Lafayette Square in Buffalo will be inaugurated the week of February 27 with the theatre's fifth anniversary program.

Albany

Bobby Vernon, Educational Comedy star, holds up Exhibitor John W. Schatt, Hollywood Theatre, Gowanda, N.Y. At the right, Louis F. Kline

THERE have been several changes along Albany's Film Row during the past week. Robert Grossman has been transferred from Peoria, Ill., to Albany, to handle the advertising and publicity at the Famous Players exchange. He succeeds Mickey Uris, who has been transferred to the New Jersey exchange. Ralph Pielow, who was in Albany several years ago with both Pathe and Goldwyn, has returned to town, and is now a salesman at the Metro-Goldwyn exchange. Stanley Gerschel has also been transferred from Cincinnati to the local exchange.

Thomas B. Spry, formerly manager of the First National in Boston, but who has just been made district manager, with jurisdiction over Albany, Boston and New Haven exchanges, made his first trip to Albany last week. A. W. Smith, of New York, eastern district general sales manager, was also in town. These two men, together with John Bulwinkle, local manager, spent a portion of the day with the Farley interests in Schenectady.

Chris Buckley, owner of the Leland and Clinton Square theatres in Albany, took a night off during the past week, attending a local prize fight and occupying a ringside seat. Later on Mr. Buckley admitted that he would have had more entertainment at his own theatre, the principal contest only going one round.

Clark Sanford, owner of the Galli Curci Theatre in Tannersville, and well known in Albany, is now in Texas, enjoying a vacation, and, incidentally, looking after some investments.

Frank J. McCarthy, Buffalo manager for First National, and John Bulwinkle are laying their plans to be in Boston on the night of February 23, when they will attend a banquet given by New England exhibitors to Thomas B. Spry.

Harry Hellman has chosen to call his new theatre in Albany The Paramount. Ground will be broken for the new house about March 15th.

Abe Dwore, of Schenectady, will erect a 900-seat theatre in that city this spring, locating it on State Street. It will contain four stores, together with the theatre. The location predicts a stiff fight with the Star and Lincoln theatres.

Although Julius Singer admits that he rather misses the bright lights of Broadway, he nevertheless declares that he is happy in Albany, although he does not explain why he journeys down to New York for each week-end. Under Mr. Singer's able management, the Universal exchange is a decidely busy place these days.

There was a time when Matt Moran, who runs the motion picture theatre in Coxsackie, was the village blacksmith. Mr. Moran doesn't depend entirely on his theatre for his livelihood, however, as he is now operating an automobile truck line between Albany and his home town.

Judging from the postcards being received along Albany's Film Row, Charles Walder, who was recently transferred to the Metro-Goldwyn exchange in Atlanta, is much delighted not only with the territory over which he is travelling, but also the balmy breezes that have replaced the snow and ice of northern New York. Mr. Walder's family is also in Florida, and the tranfer enables him to spend a week-end once in a while with them.

C. H. Wade, of North Creek, in letters to film exchanges, has announced that he has closed his theatre for the winter, but will reopen it with the advent of spring. William Mace, of Prattsville, has gone to Florida for the winter.

There's scarcely a bride in all Albany who can measure up along culinary lines with Mrs. Edward Hochstim, wife of the well-known First National salesman. Mr. and Mrs. Hochstim are now occupying an apartment in the capital city.

Jerome B. Harrison, of the Empire Theatre in Syracuse, stopped over in Albany last week on his way back from New York City. He spent considerable of his time in Albany with Amos Leonard, of the Pathe forces, who left on Friday for New York City.

Nate Robbins, of Utica, was in Albany for a couple of days last week, visiting practically all of the exchanges in straightening out various matters incidental with bookings at the theatres in Utica, Syracuse and Watertown, which Mr. Robbins recently disposed of to the Schine Brothers.

The Happy Hour in Schenectady, which has been owned and operated for the past ten years by Morris Silverman, has been bought by Frank X. Shay, who has been a business associate of Mr. Silverman for the past several months. Mr. Shay is no longer connected with the Silverman interests, devoting his entire time to his theatre.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hayes, of Albany, were in New York City, attending the first annual ball of the Pathe Club at the Hotel Roosevelt. Amos Leonard and Eddie Urschel, of the Pathe forces, were also in New York for the occasion.

Tom Clark, manager of the Mark Strand in Albany, has acquired at least fifty pairs of rubbers thus far this winter, gathered up by his ushers from beneath the seats where they had been left by patrons who have never taken the trouble to telephone or call at the theatre for their property. A trip around to other theatres revealed that at the Leland, mufflers predominated.

Walter Hays, of New York, an official in the Stanley chain, was in Albany during the week in connection with the coming installation of the Vitaphone at both the Troy Theatre and the Mark Strand.

The room occupied by the Albany bureau of the New York State Motion Picture Commission at the State Capitol will shortly house one of the bureaus in the Department of State, the employees and records being transferred to the Educational Department.

No date has yet been fixed for any public hearings on any of the motion picture bills thus far introduced in the New York State Legislature.

Canada

THE members of the Advertising Club of Montreal recently made a tour of inspection through the new studio and laboratory building of the Associated Screen News of Canada, Ltd., Montreal, of which B. E. Norrish is the managing director. Following the inspection, the advertising men enjoyed a luncheon in the plant at which Mr. Norrish explained various details of operation. The Associated Screen News of Canada is turning out a considerable number of prints of current releases of photoplays for the Canadian market, as well as topical and industrial subjects.

Raymond S. Peck, director of the Canadian Government's motion picture studio at Ottawa, left February 10th for Los Angeles, Cal., where he will remain for four weeks to study film developments. It is understood that the Government plant at Ottawa will undergo considerable change in the near future.

Sam Bloom and Sam Fine, two veteran Toronto exhibitors who have organized the B. & F. Circuit, have acquired the Bathurst Theatre, Bathurst Street near St. Clair Avenue. This house has been closed for some months and was used for a time as a Salvation Army citadel.

Other local theatres controlled by the B. & F. Circuit include the Danforth, Plaza, Mavety and the Christie. It is intimated that a number of neighborhood houses operated by Famous Players will be secured by the new circuit, these including the Teck, York, Beaver and Classic.

Messrs. Bloom and Fine are also interested in the new Bedford Theatre in Mount Pleasant Road in the Northeastern section of Toronto.

H. M. Thomas, Western division manager of Famous Players Canadian Corp., with headquarters in Vancouver, B.C., has been spending the past two weeks in Winnipeg, Manitoba, where he was formerly located and where he had direct charge of the Capitol Theatre. Leila Auger, who is Mrs. Thomas, has been visiting in Toronto.

The discovery has been made at Montreal, Quebec, that, of the 60 local theatres, no less than eight have been operating without a civic license pending a long-prolonged decision of the administration regarding their structural conditions. Of the eight houses, no less than five have been operated by the Lawand Bros., one of which was the Laurier Palace. The other four Lawand houses include the Napoleon, Maisonneuve, King Edward and the Dominion.

Ben Geldzaeler, supervisor of suburban theatres in Toronto for Famous Players Canadian Corp., is celebrating the arrival of a daughter in his household. For years Mr. Geldzaeler was manager of the Parkdale Theatre, Toronto, until his recent appointment.

The hockey team of Famous Players Canadian Corp., Toronto, finished in first place in the standing of the Toronto Senior Industrial Hockey League, securing four wins and no losses, with two games tied. The film team now goes into the playoffs.

S. H. Abrams, F.B.O. branch manager, returned from a trip through the territory, stopping at Oshkosh and Manitowoc on his way down. He reports exhibitors here in a most cheerful frame of mind as to the outlook for spring and summer business.

No one seems as yet to have been able to learn what the erstwhile exhibitors, E. W. Van Norman and Fred Seegert, are planning to do. Odds are being laid that they will have an Opera House some place soon.

Charles E. Burden, Jr., of the Universal Chain Theater Enterprises, spent a few hours in the Milwaukee circuit offices on his way to New York.

Herman Schwartz, formerly on the sales staff of M-G-M, succeeds George Kohn as sales representative for the F.B.O. interests. Mr. Schwartz has been assigned to the Fox River valley territory. Mr. Kohn has taken up residence in Chicago.

G. S. Grauman, accompanied by his family, left on Monday for Denver, where he will spend a few months. Mr. Grauman is president of the Celebrated exchange.

The Alhambra Theatre on Monday introduced a new policy under which the several vaudeville acts which heretofore comprised part of the program, have been discontinued. The program now consists of photoplays and presentation acts.

Frank Borchert, manager of the Door Theatre at Sturgeon Bay, came down for a short visit at the exchanges.

Miss Martha Karolik has joined the M-G-M office force in the capacity of stenographer and inventory clerk. She succeeds Miss Lucille Sprang.

William Wiske, Red Granite exhibitor, manager of the Community Theatre, visited Film Row during the week.

A few of those who are on the inside were delighted to learn that L. L. Ballard, after some prowling among the old Schlitz buildings, negotiated a deal for a piece of pre-Volstead period furniture which he plans to install in one of his rooms out home. No information could as yet be obtained as to the date of the Grand Opening.

A. C. Accola, manager of the Bonham Theatre at Prairie du Sac, stopped in at local exchanges long enough for a friendly visit and to arrange bookings.

"Boots" Scharun is back on the job as bookkeeper at the Celebrated offices after being laid up following an operation for appendicitis.

The Film Men's Bowling League is still being led by Charles Trampe's invincible team.

M-G-M Efficiency Club's Valentine party on the 14th was an enjoyable affair. Miss Viola Rasch was in charge of entertainment and the games she planned kept the crowd uproarious.

George Herzog of Manitowoc was in the city during the week, arranging his bookings for the Strand and Rialto theatres.

Lyman L. Ballard, United Artists' representative, has returned from a week's trip over the State.

A. L. Merritt of the Gem Theatre at Oconto was among out-of-town exhibitors to visit Film Row this week, as were also Neil Duffy, manager of the Elite at Appleton, and William Loibel of the Chimes Theatre, Cedarburg.

San Francisco

CHARLES L. THEUERKAUF, who has been manager of the local Universal Cameo Theatre, has resigned, effective Feb. 6th. Mr. Theuerkauf has been identified with the Cameo on two different occasions during the past three years and with Universal for 12 years. He has not definitely arranged for future connections which will likely locate him in Los Angeles. All regret parting company with him.

M. C. MacInnes is the new local manager of Universal's Cameo Theatre on Market Street. Mr. MacInnes comes from Detroit, where he has been connected with Kunsky theatrical circuit. MacInnes enjoys a wide experience in the motion picture theatre field.

The Jubilee Room of the Senator Hotel was the setting for a meeting of the Woman's Council of Sacramento, January 19th. In honor of Thos. D. Van Osten, secretary-manager of the Allied Amusement Industries, Mrs. Omar Blank, president of the Woman's Council, turned the meeting over to Mrs. Charles Gilmore, president of the Central and Northern California Federation of Better Film Boards. Representatives of 36 organizations attended this meeting. Within a month 11,000 women will be given a detailed account of the constructive message of Mr. Van Osten.

An eighth Samuel H. Levin theatre will be in operation by September, it was announced from the Levin offices. The new theatre, costing $225,000 and seating 1,400 people, will be on the corner of Taraval and 29th avenues. Ground was broken for the construction of the new house on February 1st. The structure will be of Class "A" and ultra-modern in every respect.

Ward Morris, manager of the Union Square Theatre, has returned from a trip to Fresno where he went with Mrs. Morris to visit his folks.

Filmland is the name of the new theatre scheduled for opening at Santa Rosa on February 12th, Lincoln's Birthday. It is listed to be one of the few independent theatres in the immediate neighborhood and it is promoted by Mrs. N. T. Felt, wife of the County Clerk of Sonoma County.

The National Theatre Supply Co., at 127 Golden Gate Avenue, recently acquired the Western Theatre Supply and Theatre Equipment Supply Comnanies, local enterprises, and R. C. Barthel is the new manager in charge, who has very recently come from the Northwest.

More than 100 Sacramentans gathered in the Hotel Senator recently to hear Irving Pichel, actor, playwright and director, who appeared on this coast a year ago in the leading role of Eugene O'Neill's play, "All God's Chillun Got Wings," give an interpretative reading of "The Dybbuk," by S. Ansky. Pichel, since retiring from the stage, is manager of the Lobera Theatre at Santa Barbara.

Central Penn

A FORMAL reception was given on the evening of February 7, in the Poli Theatre, Wilkes-Barre, in honor of the return of John J. Galvin as manager of this vaudeville and picture house. Mr. Galvin, who formerly managed the theatre in Wilkes-Barre, has been transferred back to that post from the Poli Theatre at Meriden, Conn., where he held the managerial position.

A special home-coming program was arranged in which there were felicitous speeches by Mayor Daniel L. Hart, Mr. Galvin and others. Members of the Wilkes-Barre Kiwanis Club cooperated in making the reception a big success.

Issac Marcus, owner of the Royal and National picture theatres, Harrisburg, and who last summer purchased the Handshaw Building, Third and Harris streets, containing the New Rialto Theatre, has just announced that next September he will take over the management of the latter photoplay house which is now operated by Timothy B. Heckford under a lease which expires at that time. It is likely that Mr. Marcus will make some improvements to the theatre. Saenger Theatre, Mobile, Is De Luxe House

Finely Equipped, Seats 2,500 and Will Present Attractions of Highest Type

TAKING its place as one of the largest and finest theatres in the entire South, the Saenger Theatre of Mobile, Ala., opened recently with a royal welcome extended it from an admiring city's population.

The Saenger Theatre, becoming one of the leading houses in the extensive and powerful chain of Saenger Theatres located principally in the Central Gulf Coast States and the Southwest, was built at a cost of $750,000. A. D. Saenger, first vice-president of Saenger Theatres, Inc., with headquarters in New Orleans, and William H. Guaringer, assistant general manager and mentor in theatre construction for the big operating company, are given a notable share of praise in the achievement of the beautiful new theatre.

John D. Howard, manager of the Mobile Saenger Theatre, is an experienced showman and is well known throughout the Middle West. He comes to Mobile directly from Davenport, Ia., where he had charge of the Capitol Theatre, one of the largest properties in the A. H. Blank circuit. Mr. Howard, previous to that time, also managed theatres in Seattle, Wash., principally of the Jensen and Von Herberg chain, and at one time in his motion picture career, was field publicity representative for Mary Pickford. He also has served in the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as exploitation representative and assistant to Harold B. Franklin, now vice-president of the Publix Theatres Corporation.

Luxurious and Restful

The Saenger Theatre of Mobile has a seating capacity of 2,500. It is a de luxe motion picture theatre of the highest order, presenting high-type features upon its screen, with elaborate stage attractions as a regular part of the program. The theatre opens at noon daily, showing six performances, excepting Sunday; three performances of the de luxe program on week-days, four on Saturdays and three on Sundays. The Saenger concert orchestra, led by Don Philippini and augmented by the 778-pipe concert Robert Morton Organ, is one of the features of the Saenger's de luxe program.

The interior of the new Saenger Theatre is an achievement in restful, luxurious, decorative art. Adapted to the style of French Renaissance architecture with handsome plastic ornamentation, the auditorium holds a variety of colorful and harmonious lighting effects.

The entrance to the theatre forms from a spacious and elaborately decorated arcade, seventy-five feet long and running off Joachim Street. The floors of the lobby and arcade are of high-quality marble and multi-colored tile. The walls and ceilings have been treated with ornamental plastering, harmonizing with the interior of the house.

Designed to Provide Comfort

The main auditorium has been built to insure the acme of comfort for every seat, both orchestra and balcony. The proscenium openings are two tiers of three boxes each, making a total of twelve ornamental settings as the decorative base for the interior. Deep carpeting, harmonious hangings and luxurious furnishings feature the mezzanine promenade, foyer and lounges.

The stage is of ample proportions and is capable of handling the largest road shows. It is complete in every detail, with full facilities for actors and musicians. A large switchboard is controlled from both the stage and the operating room, providing brilliant lighting effects for the stage and auditorium.

Latest Technical Equipment

The projection room is absolutely fireproof and thoroughly equipped with modern machines and accessories. The National Theatre Supply Company handled this department of the theatre's equipment, providing Powers projectors, Peerless arcs and other important technical accessories.

One other physical feature of the Mobile Saenger Theatre has special importance. This is the ingenious ventilating and refrigerating system, the Carrier system, manufactured by the Carrier Engineering Corporation of New York City. It combines some of the most expert features so far developed in this line. Approximately 25 tons of cool, clean, washed air are poured into the theatre by this Carrier system per hour, independent of the average heat temperature maintained.

"Musical Journey" Staged at Indianapolis Circle

"Salt and Pepper," harmony singers, appeared this week at the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis, as an additional attraction to "It." Three young girls gave interpretive dance steps representing foreign countries in a "Musical Journey" as overture of the orchestra.

THE SHOWMAN

By P. M. ABBOTT

FOR months our staff has been studying the needs which existed for an extension of our showmanship service. We carried on investigations among our readers. We consulted recognized authorities on various theatre problems. We left no stones unturned in our determination to construct a special service for theatre owners and the whole motion picture industry, even including theatre architects.

The results of our efforts will appear in next week's issue of Motion Picture News. For in this issue will appear the first number of our new section, "The Showman." We vouch the opinion that our readers will find "The Showman" of exceptional interest and merit. It will be of direct value in planning and operating theatres; in keeping exhibitors posted on all new and improved equipment. Also in giving data on approved methods of selling the picture and the theatre to the public.

The text contents of "The Showman" will live up to its name in the broadest interpretation of the word. After perusing the first issue of "The Showman," we know that our readers will fully appreciate the opportunity it affords exhibitors to maintain contact with the advancement of showmanship. A contact which must be maintained if exhibitors are to keep abreast of our fast moving industry.

With the introduction of "The Showman," the Theatre Management Department will be discontinued. It has served a very useful purpose. Its success paved the way for the expanded service of "The Showman."

Whiteman Heads Program at Paramount

Films Overshadowed by Presentation on Broadway This Week

WITH Paul Whiteman and his orchestra attracting capacity audiences to all of the de luxe performances at the Paramount Theatre, picture attractions took second place to "presentation" at the Broadway cinemas this week. Whiteman heads a bill on which "The Third Degree" is the feature picture. Another special offering which the Paramount patrons received with audible approval is also a stage number, a tribute to Abraham Lincoln featuring Frank McGlynn, who created the title role in this country of John Drinkwater's drama "Abraham Lincoln." The Paramount program includes, in addition to these features, a news reel, Jesse Crawford's organ novelty, one of the Music Master Series of single reel pictures, and the Paramount orchestra.

The Capitol program for the week is headed by "The Red Mill," with an elaborate ballet and a group of music features to supplement the Marion Davies starring vehicle. The ballet is called "Holland Capers." Joyce Coles and John Tricsault are the principals. Pietro Capodiferro, first trumpet of the Capitol orchestra, and Celia Turrill, mezzo soprano, share solo honors on the musical program.

Varsity Theatre Opening a Social Event

SOCIETY turned out in full force to witness the premiere of the Varsity Theatre, Clyde Elliott's handsome new playhouse at Sherman Avenue and Church Street, Evanston, Ill., during the early part of January. Before the doors were thrown open vast crowds lined the streets in front of the theatre and the 2,500 seats were filled to capacity during both performances. Mayor Bartlett, in a few well-chosen words, congratulated Mr. Elliott and his associates on the attractive new house and felicitated Evanston on its acquisition.

Several Seattle Theatres Reduce Admissions

Important changes in admission prices in first-run houses of Seattle, Wash., became effective the first week in February, with the result that one theatre followed another in reductions and picture patrons benefitted materially.

The United Artists Theatre, operated by Pacific Northwest, has reduced matinee prices from 45c to 35c and its evening prices to 50c from 65c. The house opened less than three weeks ago at the new high scale, but poor business necessitated an immediate cut.

The Fifth Avenue, also a Pacific Northwest house, has instituted "Bargain Matinees" from 12 noon until 1:30 P.M., for 25c. After that time the matinee price is 45s and the evening price 65c.

The Columbia, Universal house, followed the lead of the Fifth Avenue and instituted matinees for 25c until 1:30 P.M., from 10:45 A.M. in the morning. Matinees at 35s and evenings at 50c remain the same.

The Embassy, Joe Danz's independent house, that has been running on a straight 25c policy, has reduced prices to 15c from 10 A.M. until 2 P.M.

The Coliseum Theatre, operated by Pacific Northwest Theatres, began 25c matinees until 6 P.M., several weeks ago, and at 6 P.M. raised its prices to 50c. Matinees previously were 35c until 6 P.M.

Albany Strand to Drop Acts For Vitaphone Features

The Mark Strand Theatre in Albany, which recently introduced presentation acts on de luxe bills featuring stage numbers and pictures, will discontinue the presentations in favor of Vitaphone, which is to be installed and ready for its Albany premiere about April 1st, it was announced last week by Uly S. Hill, managing director of the Stanley houses in Albany and Troy.

While the presentation acts are doing a capacity business, the booking of Vitaphone attractions has made necessary the discontinuance of these numbers, which are to be offered weekly until the Vitaphone is introduced.

Fokine Ballet with "Faust" at Stanley Theatre

"Faust" held the place of honor at the Stanley Theatre, Philadelphia, last week As an overture, the Stanley Symphony Orchestra played Gounod's "Faust" under the direction of Graham Harris, who also arranged a special score to accompany the picture. A well-staged ballet arranged by Michael Fokine and presented by Vera Fokina and the fifteen Fokine girls, was in keeping with the feature and gave the entire program an impression of unity.

An entertaining Dance Box Fantasy was presented at the Fox Theatre by the Siddell Sisters and Sonny Hines. In addition, Borrah Minnevitch's Boys Harmonica Band played a number of stirring tunes.

Lions' Club Quartet Stage Feature at Fifth Avenue

The Seattle Lions' Club Quartet, known throughout the entire Northwest as one of the leading vocal groups of the territory, last week appeared at manager James Q. Clemmer's Fifth Avenue Theatre in Seattle, Washington, as a featured stage attraction. Clyde Lehman, well-known Seattle pianist with George Lipschultz's orchestra, was also featured in a solo number.

Roosevelt Changes to Week Runs

The Roosevelt Theatre, Balaban and Katz Chicago house, has returned to a weekly run policy. Recently the Roosevelt has been playing split-week bills. No other change in policy or admission is contemplated at the present time.

Screen Quality Counts

Prints on Eastman Positive from negatives on Eastman Panchromatic make the most of your projection equipment—give maximum photographic quality on the screen.

For only Eastman Positive carries through to the screen with fidelity all the tones of the negative, and Eastman "Pan" alone renders colors in their true black and white relationship.

That's fact—proved by Kodak Research Laboratory experts. And it's fact that counts at the box office—people appreciate screen quality.

Exterior view of the Calvin Theatre, Dearborn, Mich., a new link in the Woodward Theatre Circuit, which now totals thirty Michigan houses

Koppin Adds Dearborn House to Circuit

Premiere of Calvin Theatre Makes Total of Thirty in Michigan Chain

HENRY S. KOPPIN added the thirtieth theatre to his Michigan chain on January 17th, when he threw open the doors of the Calvin Theatre, Dearborn, Mich., to the public. The opening was most auspicious, the new house being the talk of the entire Dearborn population.

The theatre, which is built in conjunction with one of the finest office and store buildings in Dearborn, is located on Michigan Avenue, in the very heart of Dearborn's business activity. It is a one floor house with a seating capacity of 1,800 seats and a standing room capacity of 200. The seats were installed by the Heywood-Wakefield Co., of Chicago. A beautiful upright sign sixty feet high adorns the front of the theatre which was manufactured and installed by the Walker Sign Co., of Detroit. The spacious lobby is of unusual beauty, twenty-four big crystal chandeliers lending splendor to the artistic decorations. The lobby display frames are recessed in the side walls and draped with maroon colored damask. A foyer comparable with the finest theatre foyers in the country greets the eye as one passes through the massive lobby doors, which is illuminated by massive crystal chandeliers and inverted stand lamps. The entire design of the theatre auditorium and foyer is carried out in Louis the Fourteenth design. Large recessed cone-shaped panels beautifully draped in silk velour on either side of the auditorium lend to the homelike and cozy atmosphere of the theatre.

The house is equipped with a stage sufficiently large to present the biggest of attractions with a proscenium opening of forty feet and forty sets of counterweight lines.

Ventilation is provided through the latest style mushroom system and forty-eight-inch exhaust fans. The booth, which compares with the best in Michigan, is equipped with three Powers projection machines and a complete set of Brenkert lighting effects. Adjoining the projection room is a shower bath, toilet and dressing-room for the convenience of the operator. Spacious retiring and smoking-rooms for both ladies and gentlemen are located on the mezzanine floor.

The opening bill, which consisted of photoplays and an elaborate stage presentation of twenty-four people presented by Richards & La Valle, was enthusiastically received by the first night's audience. An orchestra of fourteen men under the leadership of Charles Eggers, and a Marr-Colton organ played by William Perrin supplies the musical accompaniment.

The house is under the personal supervision of Managing Director Fred M. Shafer with Wm. Sterrett, long associated with Buffalo theatre management, as resident manager.

Theatre Replaces Rum Plant

Turns to Pictures After Trying Spring Water and Garage

Prohibition has not been in effect long enough to wholly efface remembrance of world-famous Medford Rum. Medford Rum was manufactured in a brick building on Riverside Avenue in Medford, Mass. A short time before Mr. Volstead came on the scene, the famous rum distillery was closed and the spring water which made Medford Rum famous was used for washing automobiles and the distillery became a garage.

Now, however, Samuel J. Woolfson, real estate operator, has purchased the old distillery and is to erect a 2,000-seat theatre on the site. Mr. Woolfson owns the Coolidge Building adjoining, and will start at once on the demolition of the distillery and a wooden building on the property. The theatre will be located on the distillery site, but the lobby and main entrance will be located in the Coolidge Building, giving entrance to the theatre from Salem Street, Riverside Avenue and Medford Square. The lot contains 8,660 square feet exclusive of the amount to be taken for the lobby and main entrance in the Coolidge Building. Construction work will commence before the end of February.

Mr. Woolfson says that two large circuits have already approached him for a lease of the new theatre, but declines to name them.

Erection of this theatre will give Medford two new theatres in 1927, as James R. Grainger is to build a Memorial theatre there in the early spring.

Theatre and Apt. Building for Effingham, Ill.

Plans are under way for a theatre and apartment building on 5th Street, Effingham, Ill. The theatre will seat approximately 1,000 and the estimated cost is $100,000. A syndicate consisting of W. Kneedler, J. B. Freen and J. E. Spaulding of Mattoon and Taylorville are reported to be the purchasers of the site for the proposed structure.

Supreme Court Rules Against Theatre Builder of Somerville, Mass.

BY action of Judge Carroll of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, former Mayor Zebedee E. Cliff, of Somerville, Mass., is permanently enjoined from constructing a theatre on Grove Street in that city. Work on the foundation for the proposed theatre had already commenced.

Permission to erect a theatre was refused by Building Commissioner George L. Dudley, of Somerville, under the zoning law, but Mr. Cliff appealed to the Somerville Board of Appeals, which set aside the action of the Commissioner and granted the permit.

Anthony Vianno, owner of property adjoining the proposed theatre, carried the fight to the Supreme Court, which has ruled against Mr. Cliff and the decision of the Board of Appeals.

Some of the foremost legal talent of the State was engaged by each side. The Supreme Court finds that Roscoe E. Estes, member of the Board of Appeals, is also a member of the firm of architects which drew the plans for Mr. Cliff.

Hallberg Lectures Publix Managers

Gives Interesting Address on Standardized Projection

On February 1st, 1927, J. F. Barry, director of Publix Theatres Manager's School, arranged for a lecture on Scientific Motion Picture Projection by J. H. Hallberg. In consequences thereof, Elmer Levine, assistant to Mr. Berry, escorted 25 Public managers to the office and Laboratory of Mr. Hallberg in Chickering Hall, 29 West 57th Street, New York.

Mr. Hallberg spoke on several interesting phases of the projection end of the motion picture industry, recalling the fact that less than fifteen years ago projection was considered an art, but that with the advent of standardized film and apparatus it was truly on a scientific basis at the present time.

Hallberg then went into details concerning efficient and restful projection, stating that with the facilities permitted in the large and modern theatres, there were many opportunities for the management to combine or modify this type of presentation. He stated further that restful projection can only be obtained when the resultant reflected image as impressed upon the retina of the eye is in direct relation or comparison to the normal light values to which the eye is normally accustomed; that it is not the brilliant picture which produces the best projection but that the relation of the projection surface must be considered with the interior decorations; that there has been a tendency of certain projectionists to outdo each other in the matter of brilliancy at the sacrifice of eye fatigue.

Continuing, Mr. Hallberg clearly demonstrated that it is the difference between the shadows and highlights which makes the picture just like reading a black and white sign.

A new reflector arc, which was recently introduced to the trade by J. H. Hallberg and Co., was used by Mr. Hallberg in several convincing demonstrations. He also gave a demonstration of his new lighting effects produced by a special projector.

The entire class extended their thanks to Mr. Hallberg at the conclusion of his address.

The following names are taken from Mr. Hallberg's register as being among those present:

Messrs. N. Prager, C. MacPike, C. B. Jeffrey, E. Adler, J. McKenna, G. W. Baker, G. M. Watsun, G. M. Broemler, F. Aldrich, L. Finske, E. S. C. Coppack, H. Howard, A. Chatkins, R. McHale, L. Goldberg, O. F. Knight, J. C. Wright, R. Helms, R. Wertman, R. Weigand, and L. Cowen.

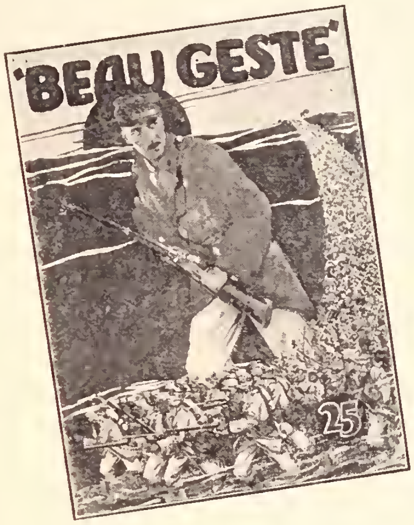
New Castle Amus. Corp. Granted Charter

A CHARTER was granted at the capitol in Harrisburg, Pa., to the M. & M. Amusement Company, of New Castle, Pa., organized "to own, operate, build, lease and manage theatres." The corporation is capitalized at $10,000, of which $1,000 had been paid in. The par value of the shares is $100. The incorporators are: J. F. Sonnanstine, treasurer, 375 Highland Avenue, Wadsworth, Ohio, owner of 25 shares; Paul Marakes, 928 Morton Street, New Castle, 50 shares, and Mark L. Rabinovitz, 202 East Moody Avenue, New Castle, one share.

Two Theatres Announced for Decatur, Ga.

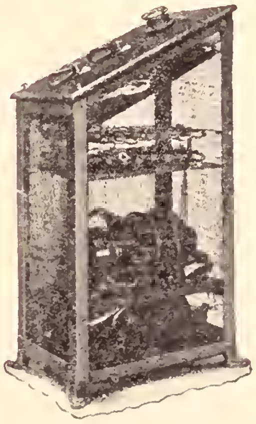
Two moving picture houses instead of the one previously announced will be erected in Decatur, Ga. Decatur is only six miles away from Atlanta, but a separate township. The second theatre will be built by O. R. Ledford, a Decatur business man, on the lot now occupied by Mr. Ledford's home on Atlanta Avenue, west of the old Masonic Temple Building, according to plans made public.

Previously Walter T. Candler had announced that he had awarded a contract to erect a theatre and a block of stores on the ground just west of the new proposed hotel location, on the north side of East Ponce de Leon Avenue.



11 "BEAU GESTE" ROAD SHOWS USE THE LIBERTY SYNCROVERTOR

THERE is a striking significance in the fact that the projection equipment of all 11 road shows of "Beau Geste" as promoted by Paramount-Famous Players are augmented by individual installations of the Liberty Syncrovertor.



Under every legitimate test in the conversion of A. C. to D. C. the Liberty Syncrovertor has proved itself more efficient and economical than motor generator service. With the Syncrovertor, the actual rectification is done at the commutator—NOT within the motor. The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit.

Cleveland Neighborhood House Follows Vogue

New Universal-Brody's Imperial an Elaborate Theatre; Sixth Link in Circuit

THE vogue for large and elaborate neighborhood motion picture theatres was followed in detail in the construction of the Imperial, a new 1,500-seat house located at Kinsman Road and East 143rd Street, Cleveland, O., completed early in December. This is the sixth link in what is locally known at the U-B chain, meaning the Universal-Brody circuit. Last summer a deal was effected between Dr. B. I. Brody and Universal whereby a combination of interests created the U-B chain. The Imperial was the first house built under this arrangement. Its approximate cost is $150,000, a sum which indicates the type of construction and the equipment furnished.

It is a brick structure, with a dignified and simple exterior. All elaborateness is preserved for the interior, which is ornate with walnut frescoes and red damask panels. Red and gold are the ground colors of the decorations. A gold frieze attractively tops the panels. The entire seating capacity is on one floor, with a clear unbroken vista from the back of the house to the stage. The stage is full size and completely equipped for acts. An allegorical painting over the proscenium arch is one of the attractive decorative features. The house is provided with everything to insure comfort. Steam heat keeps the patrons warm. Two exhaust fans are constantly in operation to keep the patrons cool. The newest type of indirect wall lighting is used to shed light without producing eye strain. No center lights are used at all. Motiograph projection machines were supplied by the Theatre Supply Company, and are admirably adjusted to the 150-ft. throw.

Every possible precaution has been taken against fire hazards and the building is as nearly fireproof as possible. Metal doors, concrete floor, a fire curtain for the stage, offer practically 100% insurance against accident.

Of special interest is the organ. It is a Kimball, and said to be the first unit Kimball installed in Cleveland. Edwin Paddock is the organist and has made the organ numbers among the big features of the program with his original novelties.

The Imperial has adopted a 3-change-a-week policy. One change for Sunday, another for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, and a third for the last three days of the week. Matinees are run on Sundays and holidays only, with admission prices fixed at 35c. House manager J. Price offers a mixed program of pictures, big specialty acts and vaudeville. Usually there are three specialty numbers in addition to the photoplay program.

Nicola Petti, who has planned many of the local theatres within the past few years, was the architect.

Other houses in the U-B chain are the Cedar-Lee, Detroit, Homstead, Kinsman and New Broadway. The East Ninth Street Theatre, a first-run downtown house, is now under construction and will be finished early in February.

New Safety Device Demonstrated

No More Projector Fires is Claim of Philadelphia Firm

Representatives of Philadelphia newspapers and of the motion picture trade journals recently attended a demonstration of the Sentry safety device at the Stanley Company's Colony Theatre. The device, which makes it utterly impossible for a fire to start in the projector, was invented by James Feeney and Humbert Godoy, operators at the Colony Theatre. The scheme was then turned over to Joseph C. Fewkes, an electrical engineer, who has brought it to perfection. The Sentry Safety Device Corporation was formed and upwards of $75,000 was spent in its perfection before the machine was able to function with precision and efficiency. Its principle is based on mechanical and electrical coordination. It has nine control stations at the various sprocket wheels, belts and an electrical system whereby a break in the film, buckling, blowing of a fuse, etc., will instantly throw a lamp-house dowser. In the event of the electric current failing to work the mechanical features of the invention function and the failure of the film to properly pursue its course instantly shuts off the power and throws the dowser.

The Director of Public Safety of Philadelphia has been so impressed with the invention that he will require every theatre in Philadelphia to be equipped with one. The Stanley Company has ordered the contrivance for every theatre on its circuit and they have also been installed in the Freihofer chain and the theatres of the Norris Amusement Company. Representatives of the Publix Theatres who have seen the demonstration of the machine have reported in favor of its installation in all Publix theatres. It will be sold on a royalty basis. Fire underwriters have agreed to give a substantial reduction in insurance rates to houses installing the device. It is considered the outstanding invention for the industry since the inception of the projector itself.

Booklet Now Ready on Brenkert F-3

Contains Full Instructions on Popular "Effect" Lighting

In response to many requests from the three thousand or so users of the Brenkert F-3 effect projector, the Brenkert Light Projection Company has published a new instruction booklet for the setting up and operation of this apparatus.

Coming to the trade at a time when a majority of exhibitors are conducting experiments with new lighting effects, the booklet should prove of more than ordinary interest. The Brenkert Company predicts that this is only a fore-runner of a much more elaborate "effect" lighting for motion picture theatres.

The booklet goes into detail on several subjects, such as projecting blending color effect on motion picture titles; projecting blending colors around border of motion pictures; waving flag on top of moving cloud effect; falling flowers effect over entire stage opening; rainbow prism effect across entire stage; snow effect; projecting special cut-out effects on titles; dissolving feature picture slide effects and sea scene of moving clouds and moving waves.

Brooklyn Project Under Way

A syndicate headed by I. Miller, builder, has assembled property on the north side of Empire Boulevard, between Brooklyn and Kingston avenues, Brooklyn, N.Y., on which will be erected a 2,500-seat theatre. The concern has already built several houses in the immediate neighborhood.

Start Within 30 Days at Lima, O.

Work is expected to start within thirty days on the $500,000 motion picture theatre to be built at Lima, Ohio, according to F. C. Hocht, who was largely instrumental in getting plans under way. Focht was formerly interested in the Sigma and Faurot Theatres, Lima. The new house will seat 2,800 and will, in all probability, be leased to one of the larger theatre circuits.

Large Theatre Planned for Baldwin, L. I.

WEATHER permitting, Louis Frankel will break ground for a theatre and six-story apartment building on Grand Avenue, Baldwin, L.I., N.Y. The theatre will seat, according to report, 3,500, with full stage equipment, orchestra pit and organ. It will be so constructed that an additional balcony can be installed later to accommodate 1,250 seats. Land is being reserved in the rear of the house to take care of at least 500 automobiles. It is estimated that the entire operation will involve about $900,000. The architect is Herbert J. Krapp.

Arctic Nu-Air System for 2 Brooklyn Theatres

Arctic Nu-Air Cooling and Ventilating System is also being installed in the new beautiful Roma Theatre, located at 70th Street and 13th Avenue, Brooklyn, N.Y. and the architect, W. M. DelGuido, of 160 W. 45th Street, has drawn the plans for same.

New Half-Million Theatre for Toledo, Ohio

After several weeks of negotiations, a deal was recently concluded that will give Toledo, Ohio, a new theatre with a seating capacity of 2,800 to 3,000 persons.

The lease, taken in the name of Albert J. Corey, includes 111½ feet of frontage on Summit Street, from Lynn toward Cherry, taking in what is known as the Messenger Building.

The theatre will occupy a space 100x200 with stage 90 x 50 feet with every convenience for motion pictures and the staging of vaudeville and legitimate attractions.

Estimated cost of the project is in the neighborhood of a half-million dollars. Work will probably start early in the spring of 1927. Plans are now being prepared by Stophlet and Stophlet, of Toledo.

Inquiries and Comments

H. O. WODLINGER, writing from the Famous-Lasky Film Exchange at Winnipeg, Man., has the following to say:

"Dear Sir:

"In one of your recent issues you had a question which was something of a brain-twister. The question was: A projectionist, using Mazda projection equipment, was experiencing trouble with his screen light; that is, one side of the picture was out of focus, while the other side was apparently in sharp focus.

"The writer, who is a projectionist in this city—and, might say, the only one in Western Canada handling a Mazda outfit—has made a careful study of the problem and has found out that the reason for this is due to the fact that the projectionist having the trouble, (R. G. Block of Philadelphia.—Ed.) has at some time removed the lens element and lens retainer ring, and in replacing these he has allowed the retainer ring to get started on the wrong thread and has continued to tighten this up. Therefore, instead of the light passing directly to the center of the screen, it is going on a slight angle, so that when he rotates the entire lens assembly it automatically transfers the light to the other side of the screen.

"I may be wrong and am willing to be corrected, but from the way I understand your question and from the description of the trouble, it is clear to me that this is actually what has happened.

"May I have the pleasure of hearing from you whether or not my diagnosis is correct.

"Yours very truly,
(Signed) "H. O. WODLINGER"

Misunderstood the Question

The only recent mention we can find in the projection department of any such trouble that Wodlinger refers to is the letter sent in by Robert G. Block, who wanted to know what was causing one of his lenses to project a round rim of light to the proscenium arch in his theatre.

Upon looking up the projection department article discussing Block's trouble and reading it through, we find no reference at all to his using the Mazda Lamp projector and, what is more to the point, his trouble, as described, had nothing to do with a poorly focussed picture. Instead, the particular thorn in his side was the projecting of stray light to the front of the house, other than that light which served a useful purpose in illuminating the picture.

So we sadly fear, Friend Wodlinger, that you read this article wrong and so started off reasoning at an angle to the true conditions instead of following a straight line direct to the screen.

Block's trouble, as we see it, was clearly due to stray light and if such were really the case, the remedy was quite simple. All this argument is really unnecessary, in a way, for if that reprobate named Block had shown the least sign of gratitude for the pains we had taken in trying to solve his trouble, by simply dropping us a line and saying we were either a "fibber" or had told the truth, then we would be in a position to settle this thing pretty definitely.

A Thankless Lot

Projectionists, as a whole, are a rather thankless lot, for of the many letters already answered in this department, probably not more than a dozen men have even taken the trouble to say, "Ai," "Aye," "Yes," or "No," in token of their appreciation. Instead, they usually wait until they get into another jam, and then wonder why they do not get an answer to their new grief by air-mail.

Here we are, Friend Wodlinger, both arguing about another person's trouble and the third party so far has not even said "Peep"—or "Pooh." And if I had two dollars, I would be willing to bet them that you, yourself, now that you have gotten this heavy correspondence off your chest, will not again emerge from your shell for the next five years. Where have you been all these years, anyway?

We may be doing you a gross injustice by speaking of you in this manner, and if we are then you have only the shades of past correspondents to thank.

Now, let's get back to the original subject. What were we talking about, anyway? Oh! Yes! Lenses.

Effect of Skewing Lens Element

If one of the elements of a projection lens, after removal from the barrel, is accidentally replaced so that it becomes skewed in the barrel and does not seat properly, it is quite likely that the one-sided out-of-focus effect you describe will result. If the lens is then rotated, the out-of-focus effect would naturally be shifted in the direction of rotation.

We do not know just what degree of skew is required to make the effect noticeable on the picture, and we are not prepared to say off-hand whether or not it is possible to reassemble the lens elements in such a manner that the improper seating of the elements would go entirely unnoticed, were the effects so bad as to be visible on the screen.

We do not have a projection lens readily at hand at this moment of writing, and so must do more or less guessing on this point.

Furthermore, if the threads of the lens retainer ring are not properly engaged with those on the inside of the lens barrel, isn't it possible to screw down the retainer ring completely, so as to lock the lens element in place?

If we recall correctly, these threads are fine and nicely matched so that if properly engaged there will be no trouble in screwing down the retainer ring, but if they are not properly engaged the ring will jam on a half turn or so, which should serve as a warning that the threads are not properly seated and they will certainly be stripped if force is used to screw down on the ring.

Now, mind you, this has nothing to do with whether you are right or wrong, as we believe that if the lens elements are skewed around, the picture definition will surely be affected. The thing we are trying to reason, in an abstract fashion, is whether or not it is at all possible to make such a mistake under the normal procedure of reassembling such a lens.

Try It Yourself

You say you have made a study of this problem and have arrived at certain conclusions based on this study. We assume, therefore, that you have already tried out this assembly business and have found that it is possible to make such a mistake. If you have done this, then there is nothing more to argue about, because the screen result would be as you claim.

If, however, you have not performed this simple test, we suggest that you do so in order to determine, for your own satisfaction, whether such a thing is possible. The next time we get a projection lens in our clutches, we shall do likewise.

There is one point we would like to bring out, however, in this connection. If a lens is rotated about any axis passing through the center of the lens, the beam of light formed by that lens will not be diverted off to one side or the other, but will continue to travel straight to the center of the screen, as you phrase it.

The principal results of such skewing of the lens are poor definition, and if bad enough, a distortion of the shape of the picture.

In order to shift the projected beam of light off to one side of the center line of the screen, it is necessary to move the lens bodily over to one side or the other. The same effect, of course, is also obtained by shifting the aperture off to one side or the other.

Dorothy Hall, now playing the feminine lead opposite George Walsh in the latter's excellent picture, "The Broadway Drifter," is also starring in a stage production running at the Princess Theatre in New York City. Last year she was seen in "The Complex," "The Bridegroom" and "White Collars."

Paramount has chosen John Waters to direct "Arizona Bound," the first of a series of Gary Cooper starring vehicles, which mark the inauguration of a new type of photoplay to be released under the Paramount banner. Waters is familiar with Western productions, having to his credit the production of the Zane Grey stories, "Born to the West," "Forlorn River," "Man of the Forest" and "The Mysterious Rider."

The Duncan Sisters, Vivian and Rosetta, are eager to get started on "Topsy and Eva," their stage success which is destined to be screened as a United Artists special. Camera work will start within the next three weeks. Lois Weber, who will direct the sisters, has completed the adaptation.

Veora Daniels, whom Gotham Productions recently signed to a long term contract, will interpret one of the principal roles in "Quarantined Rivals," the forthcoming farce comedy which Sam Sax has now in work. Under the new contract Gotham has exclusive and first call on the screen services of the young lady who is not an amateur at screen work by any means. Her previous experience includes three years with Paramount and a year with Christie in featured roles.

Following "McFadden's Flats" on the Asher, Small and Rogers production schedule Ralph Spence's mystery drama, "The Gorilla," is destined to go into production sometime in March. Though the cast has not yet been announced the direction has been placed in the hands of Alfred Santell. While E. M. Asher is in New York to see that "McFadden's Flats" get off to a good start at the Strand, Edward Small is in Hollywood looking after the script and lining up the players for "The Gorilla."

Because Douglas MacLean is well pleased with Eddie Cline's directorial ability as exemplified in the Paramount comedian's new Paramount vehicle, "Let It Rain," now nearing completion, Cline has again been signed to direct MacLean's new picture tentatively titled "See You Later," on which production work will be started in March.

Because Ralph Forbes has been switched from "The Branding Iron" to "The Trail of '98" production unit, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has decided to fill his place in the latter production left vacant by substituting Conrad Nagel who will consequently appear as the Alpine hero of the novel by Katherine Newlin Burt. Nagel has been on a vacation since his work in "Tin Hats," M-G-M's war time story.

Ken Maynard's leading lady in "The Country Beyond Law," which is to be the next Charles T. Rogers production for First National, will be Dorothy Dwan, who will be the first new leading lady Maynard has had in four pictures. Kathleen Collins appeared opposite him in his last three. "The Country Beyond Law" is an original by Marion Jackson, author of "The Overland Stage."

The first player selected to play with Jackie Coogan in "The Bugle Call" is Claire Windsor, whose most recent appearances for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer were in "Tin Hats" and "A Little Journey." Edward Sedgwick will start work soon on this picture.

Norman Kerry will play his third Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer role in "The Unknown," a new starring vehicle for Lon Chaney. Kerry recently completed the masculine lead in "Annie Laurie," the new film starring Lillian Gish.

Jack Warner has signed Bryan Foy, son of Eddie Foy and a well-known scenarist and "gag man," to a long term contract. His assignment will be with Charles F. Reisner, who will direct Syd Chaplin's "The New Boy." Two other assignments in the Warner Bros.' scenario ranks were Anthony Coldeway to do "Noah's Ark" and "The Black Diamond Express," to be adapted by Harvey Gates.

Following the completion of "Who Goes Where?" which he is producing for First National, Frank Griffith will turn his attention to a new picture entitled "Maid to Order," a light comedy written by himself as was "Who Goes Where?" This latter picture was originally known as "Bayo-Nuts," and has Charlie Murray and George Sidney in the featured roles. "Maid to Order" will have a cast of noted players.

Casting about for new talent for next season's line-up of Warner Bros. productions, Jack L. Warner has signed Leila Hyams, daughter of John and Leila Hyams, vaudeville and musical comedy team, known as Hyams and McIntyre. She will play opposite Monte Blue in "The Brute." Warners have secured an option on a long-term contract with Miss Hyams following this picture. Her last work was in "Summer Bachelors."

On May 1st, George Jessel will start work for Warner Bros. on his second starring vehicle to follow "The Jazz Singer." Following the completion of "The Jazz Singer," work will be started on still another Jessel vehicle. The Warners are searching for suitable material so that actual production may be started some time around June 15th. "The Jazz Singer" will have the Vitaphone in several sequences, especially at the musical rendition of Jessel in the synagogue, in which a choir from one of the leading synagogues in Los Angeles will be heard.

—the second mile

SOME concerns take pride in assuring customers of 100% value for their money. Business operated on this limitation would be to us as monotonous as that of a Post Office. We do not believe 100% value is enough. We want to give a plus value and to receive a good-will value in all our transactions.

We know that the good-will enjoyed by Simplex is as great as any other asset we possess. We know, too, that our policy of going the second mile when the first represents full value is accountable for no small share of that good-will. And our services will always be extended voluntarily to every reasonable limit.

Yet in our zeal to win good-will to ourselves we cannot lose sight of our responsibility to protect and to contribute to the advancement of popular good-will toward motion picture theatres as national institutions. For the good-will enjoyed by motion picture theatres today will not live and grow unless the art of projection keeps pace with the demand for better and better entertainment.

Motion picture theatres have gained their status through the doing of a multitude of things in the realms of research, engineering and business administration by manufacturers and other interests. Their advancement demands the working out of many new problems.

So the services of this organization are the utmost that can be given conscientiously in the interest of theatres today as well as tomorrow. And the second mile, after all, is always the more important one.

“THANK YOU FOR A MARVELOUS PICTURE!”

—Read what this lady told the Manager about “The Fire Brigade.”

SHOWMEN! THIS IS A GREAT TIP!

A WOMAN emerged from the showing of “The Fire Brigade” at the Central Theatre, N. Y., this week and approached the Manager. “Thank you,” she said, “for one of the most enjoyable pictures I have ever seen.”

“THIS picture has everything,” she said. “I am going out voluntarily to tell the world about ‘The Fire Brigade’. Such fine, clean love stories are few and far between. I want my daughter and her friends to see this great romance.”

THIS is just one of many word-of-mouth tributes that have come back to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, the producers of “The Fire Brigade.”

SELDOM do showmen get a photoplay that offers a wider advertising appeal to the public. Truly the picture has everything. Tell your public about its great, touching love story. Tell them it has a theme of mother devotion to touch the heart. What a wealth of box-office values! Use them!

SHORT TALKS

ON

SHORT FEATURES

--"Empties"

The most expensive thing about running your theatre is the empty seats in the last few rows. And, when you fill them, they are the most profitable. After you have cleared all expenses every one of those "empties" in the rear that you fill is just so much velvet.

Filling these seats would seem to be one of your most important tasks. And it is. What are you doing about it?

It goes without saying that you are playing the best features you can get, and advertising them to the best of your ability. But you still have an added appeal that you can make to your patrons in your short features—provided, of course, that you are playing short features with a real box-office pull, with such popular stars as Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Bobby Vernon, "Big Boy" and other "big names" for which Educational Pictures are famous.

The box-office appeal is the ruling factor in the production of Educational Pictures just as it is in your best long feature. It has been the guide through the seven years of Educational's remarkable progress, and it is the guide for Educational's biggest program, the program for 1927-1928 which will soon be announced.

(M.P. WORLD)

"The Long Loop"

Exciting Western Starring Leo Maloney Has Good Story and Exceptionally Fine Suspense

FROM THE OPENING SCENE right to the finish there is exceptionally well-sustained dramatic tension in Leo Maloney's newest western of his series for Pathe "The Long Loop" and it offers virile and stirring entertainment for western fans and all who like the kind of melodramatic action and suspense that keeps them on the edge of their seats.

Maloney has the role of a two-gun man, ...e that made William S. Hart fa-...ere everything depended on his ...cker on the draw" than anybody else, and very effective and exciting use bas been made of this, in fact it furnishes the keynote of the action and keeps the story pepped up at all times. There is a corking situation where the hero turns the tables on his enemies when they have set a trap to get him in the range of cross-fire, and an exceptionally exciting climax in which by sheer bluff after being shot through both arms, he uses his reputation to force the armed villains to "hands up" by giving them until the count of three.

The plot holds the interest and moves at a good pace and there is enough mystery in the real identity of the rustlers and casting of suspicion on first one side and the other to keep up the excitement at high pitch. Woven through the story is a romance in

VERY GOOD WESTERN. AN OLD PLOT BUT WITH SOME NEW VARIATIONS AND THE ACTION WELL PEPPED UP WITH FIRST RATE SUSPENSE.

Cast ...Maloney in one of the old Bill Hart two-gun man type of roles. Tom London the mysterious leader of the Long Loop killers. Eugenia Gilbert the essential girl in the case and others Frederick Dana, Albert Hart, Bud Osborne, Dick La Reno, Chet Ryan.

Story and Production....Western Leo Maloney is offering a consistently good line of western entertainments that show a better average for variation than is usual the rule where a star works steadily in the same type of picture. Maloney's latest, while based on one of the several conventional western patterns, brings a generous amount of action and some first rate suspense. The plot, toward the close, is typically reminiscent of the old Hart pictures when Bill would face his enemies squarely and offer to "shoot it out" with them. Maloney is more than usually successful in the matter of directing and acting his own pictures.

Direction ....Leo Maloney; good

Author ....W. D. Hoffman

Scenario ....Ford I. Beebe

Photography. Vernon Walker; good

Again Maloney "gets the drop."

For wallop, sustained interest and cleverness "The Man From Hardpan" is all to the plus.

Picture for picture this series is averaging higher than any "westerns" made.

See them, and be convinced.

Motion Picture News

Volume XXXV NW YORK CITY, MARCH 4, 1927 No. 9

A Statement

AFTER a brief trip abroad, I return to find the same old film business going on in New York. As heretofore, ninety-nine per cent. of the New York trade is spending most of its time talking about what the other one per cent. is doing.

* * *

The rumors that touch upon my private affairs I am not concerned over except to say that like all idle gossip they are silly fabrications. But those that concern MOTION PICTURE NEWS I am privileged and forced to speak about.

* * *

It is stated that an attempt has been made to effect a trade paper merger. That is true. It is stated that I was a prime mover in the negotiation. That is not true. After being approached I did all I could to bring about what I regarded as a sound and beneficial step. That is all.

* * *

This paper began preaching concentration in advertising ten years ago. We believed then, as now, that two weekly papers will effectively and economically cover the field. I believe that this feeling is pretty general today.

* * *

Early last fall I had one conference with another paper with this end in view. The matter seemed hopeless and I went no further.

THIS issue contains an important innovation in trade paper journalism, a complete section devoted to the picture theatre in all its many phases.

Each month hereafter, this section entitled will appear in Motion Picture News. We include it within the covers of The News because we want it to be of the greatest permanent value. New ideas—practical ideas—anything that will help along the cause of good showmanship, that's the mission of "The Showman."

Later I was approached with a similar proposition, instigated, I was informed, by still another paper. I helped in the matter all I could, furnishing statistics and assisting in the formation of a plan. The negotiations were on when I left. In Europe I was advised that the whole matter was held up till my return.

* * *

Now, upon returning, I find little except confusion and mis-statements and self-seeking exploitation.

* * *

As a consequence of this situation, MOTION PICTURE NEWS herewith withdraws from all negotiations whatsoever. We have behind us fourteen years of hard work, success, and constructive faith in the practical ideals of this industry. We have before us many plans, the execution of which we can best achieve by sticking strictly to our own business. That we propose, enthusiastically, to do.

* * *

If at any time in the future a sound merger plan is evolved, in the interest of the reader and the trade at large, we are for that plan and will play our full part in it, if necessary, at a sacrifice.

The Week in Review

Comment on Passing Affairs

SOME of our Broadway box-office predictions for last week proved a little high, owing to stormy weather at the end of the week which cut into receipts everywhere. The Paramount, for instance, failed by a small sum to reach $80,000. The two dollar attractions were hit particularly, all of them taking a drop on the week.

Australian Comment

AN interesting group of opinions from men prominent in Australian public and political life has come to hand, and a number of them will bear quoting as evidence of the interest of high figures in the life of that commonwealth in the screen. Here are brief quotations from a few:

E. J. Carroll, E.N.: "Of one thing I am sure, and that is the people in the United States are putting forth an honest endeavor to make better and more decent pictures. . . . In Australia, sane legislation may be needed, but any extreme measures along the lines of embargoes or confiscation will ruin the industry, as it did in Germany. After all, the amusement going public cannot be brought to theatres by Acts of Parliament or the production of inferior pictures."

Rt. Hon. W. M. Hughes, P.C., K.C., M.H.R., ex-prime minister: "The cinema is the greatest educational and entertainment factor. It gets hold of people while they are plastic and forms their character."

Mr. A. Green, M.P. for Kalgoorlie (W.A.): "To a great extent, the sentiment of the people of the United States is the sentiment of the people of Australia. There films appeal to our sense of right and our manliness quite as much as those produced in Great Britain."

Rev. Watts Grimmett, before the Council of Churches at Melbourne: "Since I have been a member of the Council of Churches, I have attended more picture shows than before. I advise my brother ministers to break away occasionally from their pastoral duties and attend a picture show. Very many persons who criticized picture shows did not know what they were talking about."

Archbishop Lees of Melbourne: "The critic who discovered objectionable features in a film often left himself open to the charge that what was objectionable was that which was in his own mind and not that which was in the picture."

Hon. T. J. Ley, M. H. R., former N. S. W. minister for justice: "An attempt to exclude foreign pictures in order to force upon picture patrons films that they did not wish to see, would not bring about a development of the industry in Australia, and would be an act of tyranny."

Senator Green (N.S.W.), former minister for customs: "American companies specialize in picture production and so far have led the world in that respect. For some extraordinary reason they have been able to produce better pictures than have producers in other parts of the world. That is the whole secret of the matter. After all is said and done, if the American picture people are making what the public wants the showman must buy from them, because he must give the public what it wants."

Well Insured

OF the 15 most heavily insured individuals in the world, one-third are motion picture executives, figures published in The National Underwriter show. The five are William Fox, Jesse L. Lasky, Marcus Loew, Joseph M. Schenck and Adolph Zukor, and the policies range from $4,250,000 to $6,000,000.

Twelve other individuals are insured for one million dollars or more: John Barrymore, Cecil B. De Mille, Buster Keaton, Charles Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, June Mathis, Mary Pickford, Eric von Stroheim, Gloria Swanson, Constance Talmadge, Norma Talmadge and Richard Thomas.

Talking Film or Record?

WITH talking and musical film devices springing up on every side, of all types and descriptions, some little confusion is bound to result and it is important to note that they fall sharply into two classifications. The first type, such as Vitaphone, uses some form of disc phonograph record, the sounds

EUROPE

First of A Series of Articles Based on Personal Survey

By William A. Johnston

AFTER a brief survey of the film situation in western Europe—altogether too brief to cover so critically important a field—I am brave enough to submit, first, some general conclusions.

The first is this and it is in the way of a suggestion to both sides of the Atlantic: that we discuss our international trade problems in the straightforward language of our trade. In other words, let us talk as showmen to showmen. If we are candid enough and practical enough in this respect, we can readily understand each other, however much we differ in other ways and however much difference exists among the various peoples to whom we dispense entertainment.

It is quite apparent that too much American hot air has been spilled abroad: with characteristic amiability, especially the ready amiability of a much more prosperous division of the world industry, we have made nice speeches and said nothing. It doesn't do to slap a man's back soothingly when his digestion is radically wrong, much less to deal out happy platitudes to him. We have also made tactical blunders, well meaning but thoughtless.

On the other hand, there still exists abroad a woeful lack of understanding of the American trade, its past history, its present status and its future objectives. Someone, I believe it was President Wilson, said that if a million people from each country could visit each other country, war would be impossible. If there was enough visiting back and forth in our international trade circles, we would have less trade misunderstandings. Great Britain is not to be criticized so much in this respect, but the Continent, except for a very few persons, is rather sadly in the dark to-day as to what it is all about.

Conclusion number two may sound rather trite, and in some ways it has been voiced before. But certainly it is a large practicality. It is this: in every country important enough to support production, distribution and exhibition, the film industry proceeds along exactly the same economic lines. Wherever I went abroad and whatever film problem was broached, I could readily reply: "Why, yes, that very same situation exists"—or more generally—"has existed in the United States." To me, this experience was illuminating.

Let us say that the film industry in each important country of the world started on a common scratch line, and let us admit, as we must, that the American industry, partly because of the war and for other important reasons, is somewhat advanced along the way. I find in each European country that the trade is going through exactly the same childhood diseases and periods of recuperation that the American industry has encountered.

The lesson to be drawn, it seems to me, is twofold. Europe, which is now progressing fast, will go faster and more securely if her film people will only study our own economic career more intimately and so take advantage of our mistakes. And we, on our part, should not duplicate our past errors abroad; and, if we feel that certain trade objectives must be had in a certain way—like the building, for instance, of key theatres—that at least we come candidly forward and with full trade publicity state just why we are doing what we are doing. There has been a sad lack of this straightforward talk over here within the American industry. That lack will be less countenanced abroad. As I say, we can readily talk in an international way in good practical showman's language.

And finally this:

The film business is a stern practicality—in itself. It has nothing to do with sentiment. It is a business. So much for that.

But it is more than an ordinary industry. It involves other industries, because it is a vast publicity agent. So it may promote a country's manufactures and its domestic and export commerce along most every line.

But it is still more. It is a nationalistic mat-

British Trade Press Comments on Mr. Johnston's Visit to Europe

COMMENTS on the recent visit of William A. Johnston to England and the Continent were made by British trade papers as follows:

THE BIOSCOPE—An interesting visitor to London during the week was William A. Johnston, the well-known and widely-respected Editor of the "Motion Picture News," who was on his way home from a tour of France and Holland. Mr. Johnston contemplates an important excursion into the exhibiting business; but, at the moment, he assures me, the scheme has not reached a point where reliable details can be expected.

His European trip having been cut unexpectedly short by a business call, Mr. Johnston was unable to stay in London as long as he had hoped, not to see any British films, of which he has often proved himself a friend in his paper. To the proposed Quota he sees no serious objection from the American point of view. Though he is guardedly non-committal on this, as on other subjects, he expressed the opinion that the Quota would "work out all right." Next time I hope that Mr. Johnston will pay London a longer visit. He is one of the men who really count in the American industry in respect of personality as well as of achievement, and London would like to see more of him.

KINEMATOGRAPH WEEKLY — It is pleasant to meet a man from another land who has to plough a paralleled furrow to one's own, but William A. Johnston, editor of the "Motion Picture News," has a personality which makes him doubly welcome here, quite apart from the community of interests.

Like other publicists, he shrinks from publicity himself, but an intimate chat with him revealed how very similar are conditions in the New York and London film trade centres. One of his companions on the trip is George Kleine, best known, perhaps, to the older members of the trade. They have been keenly interested in the theatre position on the Continent.

ter, and so a thing of nationalistic pride and welfare. It publicizes a nation's social order and ideals, internally and externally. And that is its greatest mission.

So we of the film business—we international film folk—had best get together as much as possible and think things over with the utmost sobriety and intelligence. We have got to hold fast to practicality; but also we have got to realize our vast, our international responsibility.

Of one main fact we may be certain:

The big countries of Europe will produce and distribute and exhibit their own pictures. They are already fast on the way; nothing can stop them.

They have, or they will have, their own sufficient market. They only need the American market in order to make better pictures, just as we also need the European market in order to continue to make better pictures.

So it would seem that reciprocity is inevitable—straightforward business reciprocity, based strictly upon such universal trade requisites as quality, price and service.

In succeeding articles, the film situation in western Europe will be discussed in detail.

from which are amplified and synchronized with the film. The second, such as the phonofilm, the Photophone and the Movietone, photographs the sound vibrations on the edge of the film and converts these light vibrations back into sound in the projector. Both can use the same amplifying and loud speaker units.

The Vitaphone engineers claim that the wax record reproduced in shellac is capable of better sound reproduction than the photographic method, while Lee De Forest claims for the latter systems greater simplicity, less expensive apparatus and permanent, automatic synchronization regardless of shortage in the length of a print.

Elsewhere in this issue is the announcement by five major companies of the appointment of a committee to pass on these devices with a view of bringing the industry to the use of one standard method, so that an exhibitor having such equipment installed may play the releases of all companies putting out synchronized films. There is merit in this suggestion, but it would seem a pity to take any hasty action while both are somewhat in the experimental stage and neither has had a chance to develop its full potentialities.

A NEW DE LUXE THEATRE FOR THE SOUTH

THE de luxe motion picture theatres, providing an environment of beauty and comfort for patrons of the photoplay and music and enriching the locality in which they are located, continue to spring up with marked rapidity in the South. One of the newest cinema palaces of this type is Saenger's Theatre in Mobile, an adaptation of the French Renaissance style of architecture, and having a seating capacity of 2,500.

The entrance to the house is from a spacious and elaborately decorated arcade, seventy-five feet long and running off Joachim Street. Ornamental plastering, rich furnishings, and the most modern equipment combine to make the Saenger one of the South's finest theatres.

It is one of the recent additions to this large circuit of theatres and ranks with the best houses operated by the organization.

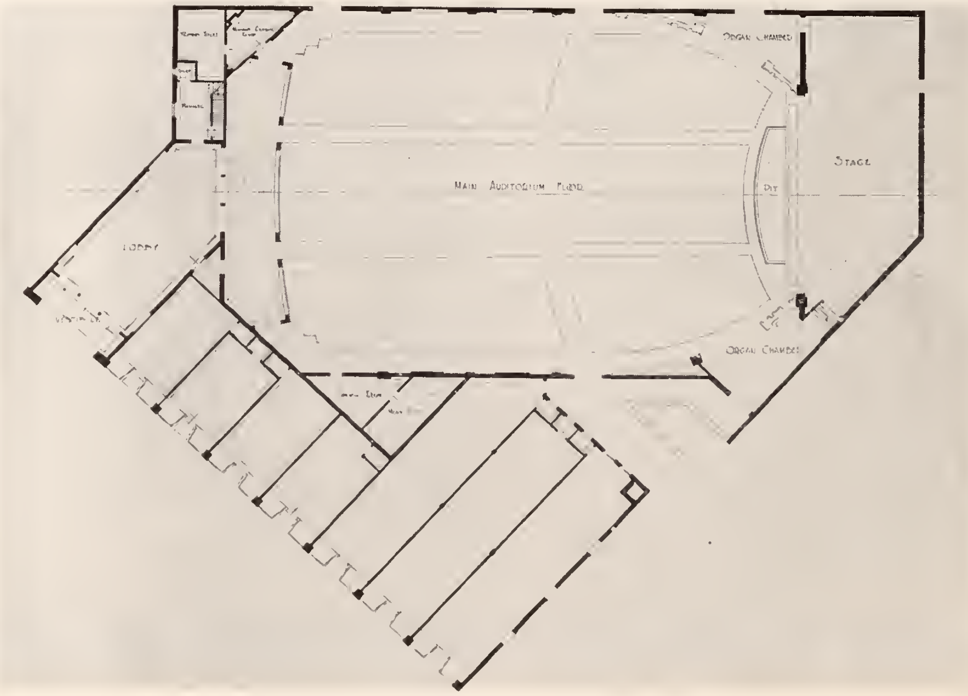
AN INTERPRETATION OF SPANISH ARCHITECTURE

The Sanford Theatre in Irvington, N.J., with a capacity of 1,800 seats, was designed by Wm. E. LeMan. It is of Spanish design, with walls and roofs of cast stucco. The interior features stuccoed walls, relieved by ornamental pilasters of Circassian walnut. The high lighting of gold ornamentation enlivens the decorative scheme of the auditorium. The Sanford is operated by the Stanley-Fabian Corporation.



FLOOR PLAN

Here's the answer to all the problems in theatre lighting, prepared by one of the foremost lighting engineers—a series written with a minimum of what is deemed "scientific," and practical in the extreme.

ONE of the most important elements of theatre management is the provision of correct illumination for the various parts of the theatre and for various phases of the performance. The art of lighting, although in a sense as old as the human race, has undergone a most remarkable advance in the last decade due to the development of new light sources and equipment. As a result it might be said that in its modern concept the art and science of illumination is very new.

When the writer was approached for a series of articles on the different phases of lighting, he was indeed very glad to undertake the task and try to provide for these columns material of a fundamental nature which would be useful as a guide to the theatre manager.

The attempt will be made to include from month to month really useful data. With the idea that the various issues in which the material appears will be kept for reference, the endeavor will be made to take up the subjects in a logical order. It seems expedient, therefore, to discuss in this first installment the thing which makes the lighting effect possible—the thing without which all our analysis would be useless, that is, the lamp itself.

In the article which follows by Mr. R. G. Morison are pointed out the principal different types of lamps, where these should be used, the theory behind their operation, practical hints on operation and fundamental data on light output, etc.

Future articles in this series will cover the following subjects, although not necessarily in the order given:

Fundamental Terms of Light and Illumination; Methods of Controlling Light; Light Measurement; Types of Reflectors and Their Application; The Psychology of Light; Color: Its Production and Effects; History of Theatre and Stage Lighting; Stage Lighting Equipment; Stage Lighting Design; Lighting for Prologues; Lighting of Theatre Auditoriums; Lighting of Other Parts of the Theatre; Lighting of Signs, Lobby, Marquees, etc.; Floodlighting the Building; Street Lighting as Related to the Theatre; Lighting Economy—Cleaning and Relamping, etc.; Incandescent Lamp Projection; Light and Music.

Incandescent Lamps for Theatre Use

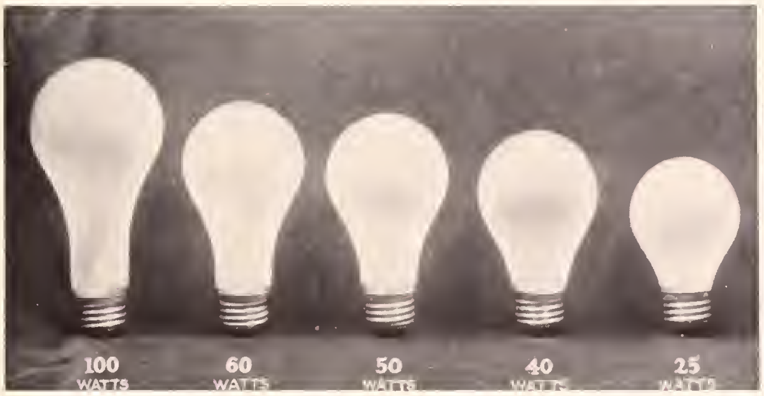
By R. G. Morrison

Engineering Dept., Edison Lamp Works, of G. E. Co.

INCANDESCENT lamps are usually designated by wattage, voltage, bulb shape, such as G for globular, PS for pear shape, A for inside frost, etc., and the diameter of the bulb in eighths of an inch.

Vacuum lamps are usually designated as Type B lamps and gas filled lamps as type C lamps.

In the following paragraphs an attempt has been made to state briefly some of the important characteristics of incandescent lamps, and to acquaint the users with the latest types of lamps, as well as some of the important points to be remembered in their application and use in the theatre.



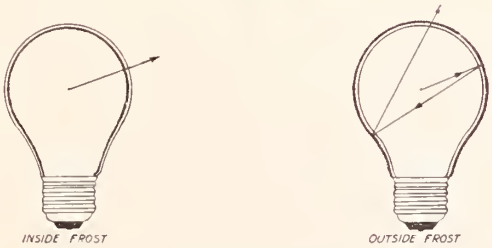
Above—the five new inside frosted lamps

During the past year a new type of lamp has been available for general lighting service, which differs in many respects from the old types.

These lamps are made in five different wattage sizes from 25 watts to 100 watts. A new and attractive bulb shape has been used which is a compromise between the round bulb shape and the pear shape bulb heretofore used. The lamps have a light frosting on the inside of the bulb which results in good light diffusion with low light loss, and which permits easy cleaning of the outer smooth surface of the lamp. The frosting cuts down the intrinsic brilliancy of the filament, thus reducing objectionable glare and sharp shadows so noticeable with the clear bulb lamp. The coiled filament commonly used on higher wattage lamps has been used throughout the new lamps, permitting a very rugged construction.

The light output of the new lamps even though frosted compares very favorably with the light output of clear lamps of the same wattage, since the loss of light due to the frosting is only 1 to 1½% initially and throughout life. Outside frosted lamps have a light loss of 6% when the lamps are new and increases to 12 % at the end of life.

A comparison showing better diffusion gained by inside frosting of lamps



Due to less internal cross reflection, inside frosting lets more light come through than outside frosting

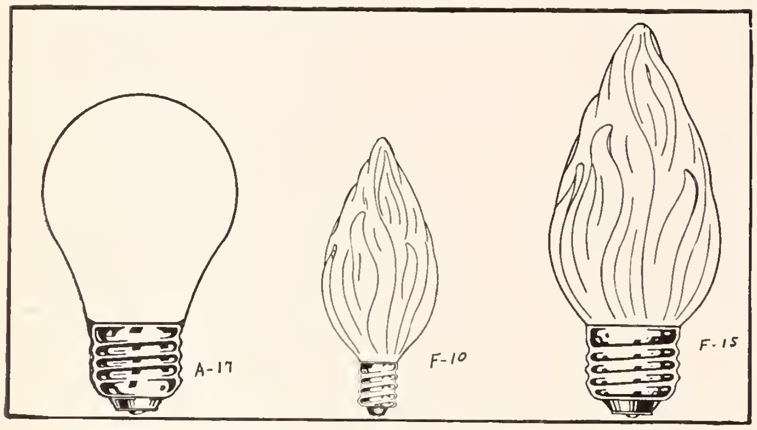
The absorption due to frosting is considerably less with inside frosting than with outside frosting. If the frosting is on the outside the light from the filament goes through the glass wall of the bulb where some of the light is diffused by the irregular frosted surface. The remainder of the light is reflected back through the glass to the opposite glass wall of the bulb. This process is repeated again and again until all the light gets out. Some light, however, is absorbed each time it passes through the glass.

When a high intensity is required for general illumination there are available clear bulb type C lamps from 150 to 1000 watts. The 150 and 200 watt lamps are equipped with medium screw bases, and the 300, 500, 750, and 1000 watt lamps are equipped with mogul screw bases. White bowl lamps are furnished in all of the above sizes, at a slight addition cost, for use in open mouthed reflectors where the hanging height is low enough for the lamp to be in the ordinary range of vision.

Round Bulb vs. Inside Frosted Lamps

Inside frosted lamps have to a large extent superseded the round bulb frosted lamps because of the higher lumens per watt, better candlepower maintenance and the lower cost of inside frosted lamps. There are some installations, however, where round bulb lamps may, from the standpoint of physical shape, appear to better advantage than the new lamps. This is true where fixtures have been specially designed for round bulb lamp use. Unless the observer is very close to the fixture a substitution of the new "A" bulb lamps for round bulb lamps can be made without detriment to physical appearance, and with the advantages of better illumination.

The practice of using frosted round bulb lamps in marquees, in chandeliers and for local light such as floor lamps, torchieres, wall brackets, etc., is quite common. In such cases the inside frosted lamps will be found to give more light and to be more economical.



Above are illustrated three types of decorative lighting lamps

Lamps for Decorative Lighting Service

The practice of using light for decoration and effects has increased very rapidly during the past few years. Recognizing the need of suitable lamps for such service, the lamp manufacturers have just recently designed two lamps which lend themselves to this type of lighting, a 15 watt F-10 and a 25 watt, F-15 with a twisted flame shaped bulb as illustrated. Both lamps are furnished in an all frost or in a flame tint finish. A third lamp a 15 watt, A-17 bulb lamp is inside frosted and may be obtained in coated colors if desired.

The above lamps burn in any position.

The theatre sign should be adequately and artistically lighted, it should have character and distinction. There is a wide variation in the types of signs now used, but they may be classified in three distinct groups:

Direct Light Signs
Transmitted Light Signs
Indirect Light Signs.

TABLE II—Round Bulb Lamps

Watts	Volts	Bulb	Bulb Dia. Inches	Type B or C	Screw Base
15	115	G-18½ Frosted	2¼	B	Medium
25	115	G-18½ Frosted	2¼	B	Medium
25	115	G-25 Frosted	3⅛	B	Medium
40	115	G-25 Frosted	3⅛	B	Medium

All of the above lamps burn in any position.

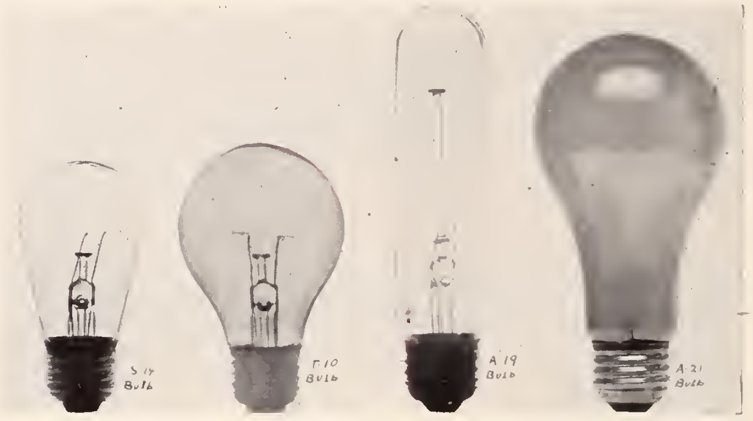
For direct and indirect light signs the following lamps are adapted:

10 Watt, S-14 Clear
15 Watt, S-14 blue
25 Watt, A-19 Clear blue
50 Watt, A-19 Clear blue.

The bulb of lamps designated as blue is of special blue glass which gives a whiter light than the ordinary clear bulb lamp. Due to the absorption of the blue glass a 15 watt lamp is necessary to give approximately the same illumination as the clear 10 watt lamp. Gas filled lamps should never be used in any type of sign where the lamp is exposed to the weather as the bulb becomes very hot and is apt to fail immediately upon contact with rain or snow.

For transmitted light signs, which are generally of the enclosed type, any of the above lamps may be used, but usually lamps under 25 watts are seldom desirable for these signs outdoors, because they give insufficient light. For the transmitted light sign which usually consists of raised or flat opal letters, or art glass letters and backgrounds, the 60 watt, A-21 daylight and the 100 watt, A-23 daylight type C lamps are especially suitable, giving a very good intensity and an excellent blue-white quality of illumination. In this type of sign, however, one caution should be observed. The wiring should be provided with proper ventilation because the lamps burn at a very high temperature, and useless ventilation is provided, wiring difficulty may be experienced. Sometimes a high intensity colored illumination, where considerable sparkle is desired, can be obtained by means of color hoods. The 50 watt, P-19 clear bulb lamp is especially adapted to this service. For small interior signs the 25 watt, T-10 type B lamp should have special consideration on account of the tubular shape and small diameter which permits the provision of good illumination within a very small confined space.

Below — four types of lamps for sign lighting. The A-21 is of daylight glass



Lamps for Colored and Tinted Lighting

The demand for colored and tinted lighting has rapidly increased during the last few years. The great white ways of our cities have gradually lost much of their sparkling brilliant whiteness and have become avenues of color and myriads of flashing tints and floods of rainbow hues. Individual tastes and efforts have brought about a competition in variety and intensity of color which is amazingly beautiful and unique. The demand for color is still growing, with the demand for contrast, for new and more striking color combinations. There are still unlimited opportunities in the field and ingenuity and experiments will lead to greater results.

Colored lamps may be classified as follows:

Natural Colored Glass Lamps
Spray Coated Lamps and Dipped Lamps.

Due to the improvement in the weather resisting qualities of spray coated lamps and lacquers, as well as their ease of availability and economy, superficially coated lamps have to a large extent superseded the use of natural colored glass lamps. Natural colored lamps are expensive to manufacture due to the requirement of special glass, consequently their cost exceeds that of coated lamps.

There are four types of natural colored lamps available as follows:

10 Watt, S-14
25 Watt, A-19
40 Watt, A-21
60 Watt, S-21.

In Ruby, Green, Blue and Amber Colors. Most any colored lighting effect which demands the use of natural colored lamps can be fulfilled with the application of one or more of these types.

TABLE III—Lamps for Decorative Lighting

Watts	Volts	Bulb	Bulb Dia Inches	Type B or C	Screw Base	Light Center Inches
15	115	A-17	2⅛	B	Medium	2⅜
15	115	F-10	1¼	B	Medium
25	115	F-15 Frosted	1⅞	B	Medium

All of the above lamps burn in any position.

While it is true that high wattage Mazda C lamps can be obtained in natural glass bulbs and are sometimes employed for stage lighting, the effects secured may not be just what were anticipated. The glass of the bulb is thin and does not give the same relatively purity of color as the low wattage natural glass lamps. Instead of a pure blue or green resulting, it is likely to be a blue or green tint, or as one might say, a deluded color. In general, better results may be obtained by the employment of clear or inside frosted lamps and colored accessories.

Although superficially coated lamps may be used for many and varied applications, their chief uses may be classified under two distinct services, Sign Illumination and Interior Decorative Lighting. The number of standard colors and tints as furnished by the lamp manufacturers is sufficient to give a wide range of color combination and changes, so that an unlimited number of shades and tints can be obtained for any color scheme desired by the combination of colors. The types of coated colored lamps available are as follows:

10 Watt, S-14

25 Watt, A-19 in red, but, green, yellow, amber-orange, flame tint and ivory.

Flame tint lamps are also available in 25 watts.

A-19 and 50 watt, A-21 types.

In the auditorium, the foyer, the entrance and sign of the theatre superficially coated lamps can be used to a very good advantage. If the direct type of lighting is used the coated lamps give off a warm soft glow due to the diffusing qualities of the coating, which is impossible to produce with the natural colored lamps. The heavy coating obscures the filament and gives good diffusion which is always desirable for good decorative lighting. In indirect lighting, such as luminaires, coves, translucent panels, domes, etc., coated lamps can be used to good advantage.

Amber-orange has recently found much favor for sign, foyer and auditorium lighting, as it produces a restful and homelike appearance. Everyone is familiar with the unexcelled combination of old rose and blue and the blue and cream used by the orientals in producing rugs and carpets. Theatres have followed out this color contrast scheme during the summer months and have been very successful in producing a pleasing atmosphere. Green is also used during the summer months to provide a welcome atmosphere of coolness and serenity.

Coated lamps individually have different characteristics and react differently when subjected to outdoor conditions. From experience gathered from special scientific tests and actual performance of lamps in service, certain recommendations are hereby given for the guidance of those who use superficially coated lamps.

Red. This is one of the most satisfactory, all-around colors for indoor lighting. In signs and other service where the lamps are exposed to sun and rain, the color has a tendency to fade, and should be used only when a color effect is desired for a comparatively short length of time.

Blue. Blue coated lamps are more satisfactory than red lamps for outdoor service, and if the lamps are in service six or eight hours a day the color probably will prove satisfactory for the life of the lamp.

Green, Amber-Orange and Yellow. These colors are satisfactory for all service, indoors or out. For sign illumination amber-orange is one of the most satisfactory colors, from the standpoint of fastness of color, permanency, power of visibility and attractiveness. Signs combining blue and amber-orange are especially attractive.

The Care of Coated Lamps

Very often coated lamps are stored by users in boxes and barrels, the bare lamps piled on top of each other. This is very bad practice, as the metallic bases mar the surface, and the enamel becomes scratched.

A common practice of many consumers at the present time is the use of too many types. Experience has shown that it is more economical and just as pleasing lighting effects can be obtained with the use of one or two types, rather than a number of types.

Due to the perfection of high grade lacquers for automobile painting the quality of lacquer available for dipping lamps is very much better than formerly. Two kinds of lacquer are now available on the market, a clear transparent lacquer and a satin finish lacquer, which resembles the diffusing coating of a spray coated lamp. However, lamp dips are very difficult to apply so that a uniform coating is obtained, and at best are not very permanent when used outdoors. Low wattage lamps must always be used for lacquer dipping for none of the lacquers which are now on the market will withstand the high temperature of the gasfilled or Mazda C lamp.

Lamps for Spotlight Service

When incandescent lamps first became available their advantages for stage lighting were at once recognized. As soon as they became practical they came into universal use. Their introduction marked the birth of a new art in stage lighting, due to the ease of control, ability to obtain much more light for a given space, the remarkable safety and their adaptability to color modifications. Later, high wattage lamps and lamps using concentrated filaments were introduced and together supplanted the arc spotlights and floodlights.

2000	115	G-48	6	C	Mogul	$5\frac{1}{4}$

The above lamps can be operated in any position save within 45 of vertically, base up

At the present day Mazda lamps are in universal use for stage-lighting with the exception of high powered arcs for long distance spotlights. Even these are gradually being displaced as high wattage spotlight lamps are being developed.

Spotlight lamps are designed to have an approximate average life of 200 hours. The concentrated filament lamps for spotlight service cannot be burned with the base up, for the hot filament is so close to the supporting glass stem that the latter is soon softened by the heated gas. The filament collapses and the lamp fails. Spotlight lamps can be burned in any position except within 45 degrees of vertical; base up.

Lamps for Projection Lighting Service

Motion picture and stereopticon projection with incandescent lamps is satisfactory and efficient, considering color, definition, intensity and freedom of eyestrain, as well as economy in electrical energy. The following lamps are available in tubular (T Bulbs) bulbs, which permit the lamps to be placed close to the lens and reflector equipment.

General Hints On Lamp Operation

Probably one of the most common causes of unsatisfactory lamp life is the use of lamps of the wrong voltage. It is important that lamps of the same voltage as the circuit be employed. If a 115 volt lamp is burned on a 120 volt circuit, the lamp life will be reduced about one-third, and if a 120 volt lamp is burned on a 115 volt circuit, the light output of the lamp will be very much reduced, and unsatisfactory illumination will result.

The Follow-through in Advertising

What Campaign Book Material Will Do for Your Theatre

By Russell Holman

Advertising Director, Paramount Pictures Corporation

WHEN you buy a vacuum cleaner or similar mechanical contrivance, you receive from the company which has made the product instructions and suggestions as to how to get the best use out of it.

These suggestions have been evolved by men supposed to be very good in their line, after a careful study of the vacuum cleaner, extensive experimenting with it and years of experience in dealing with a machine similar to the one they have just sold you. Of course, you are free to disregard their suggestions completely and operate the machine just as you please. The chances are that you will not operate it as efficiently as if you had followed out the suggestions and you may possibly wreck your electric equipment and set your house on fire.

Admittedly, there is an outside chance that you may, by yourself, evolve a way of using the cleaner that will be much better than the way suggested by the producer of it.

At the same time, the percentage is all in favor of your getting the best possible results out of your purchase by carefully following the suggestions offered you by the makers of the cleaner.

It seems to me that the above is analogous to the exhibitor buying a picture and receiving from the producer a campaign book offering suggestions as to how best to use the picture and the advertising accessories available on it. For there is a very important connection between the various advertising mediums, because it is only when newspaper ads, posters, heralds, and other materials used in a campaign, are identified one with the other by means of similar ideas, that the advertising drive observes the principles of "follow through" gained by concentration on the main selling points of the attraction.

Picture Analysis

The advertisements and the accessories are prepared by men who presumably know the show business and know all there is to know about the particular picture on which the campaign material is issued. They have carefully studied the selling points of the picture, they have probably seen their ideas tried out in a few pre-release runs and they have had long experience with similar pictures.

Now let us consider what this analysis means to the achievement of continuity or "follow-through," which manifests itself in an association of ideas executed in all of the advertising mediums, and which is a cardinal principle of good advertising.

At Paramount we carefully analyze the picture and decide what is its great selling point before we do a line of advertising on it. Specialists in newspaper art work, copy writing and layout, poster artists and exploitation men are instructed to develop, each in his particular medium, the concrete idea which has been selected as the most effective selling point of the picture. Thus, there is certain to result a tie-up, usually based on an illustration and a catch-line conforming to it, which becomes the focal point of the newspaper ads, the posters, rotogravures, etc., prepared as exhibitor aids on the production. And thus, the prospective patron is sold through an association of ideas which links up all of the advertising mediums.

To illustrate:

Paramount has a coming special production called "Casey at the Bat," starring Wallace Beery. Analyzing this picture shows that the two chief selling points are Wallace Beery, who has scored such a remarkable success in "Behind the Front" and "We're in the Navy Now" and the title of the picture. There are many other things in the picture, such as the other players, the Floradora Sextette, and so forth. But Beery and the title are the main things. In all the advertising, Beery should be identified with the title. He should be shown "at the bat."

IN

Paramount poster featuring the selling point in "Casey at the Bat"—the star, Wallace Beery, at bat—an illustration used in national advertising, campaign book ads, window cards and other accessories, the surest guarantee of "follow-through" in advertising

All of Paramount's advertising on this production has thus been centered around the figure of Wallace Beery with a baseball bat in his hand. Through the national advertising, the campaign book advertising and all the other mediums, this picture of Beery and his baseball bat persists. Thus the effort is made to build up a vast public interest in "Casey at the Bat" with the figure of Beery at the bat as a symbol and identification mark for the picture.

An exhibitor who uses the campaign book ads which feature this picture of Beery instantly identifies his showing with the desire that has been built up in the public mind to see the picture. If he disregards the campaign book ads and goes in for figures of Floradora girls or anything off the main track, he has to do a selling job entirely by himself. The job becomes both an extensive and expensive one if he wants to "follow-through" with all his advertising material, for it means not only specially prepared newspaper ads, featuring Floradora girls or some other element, but posters, lobby display material and all the rest of the items which are combined in a campaign as a whole.

Launching the Drive

Then there is another important consideration. This is the "follow-through" from the national advertising done by the distributing company and the local campaign of the theatre. If you use the advertisments, for instance, offered for your use in the campaign book, you are travelling with a tide of popular interest worked up for the picture. If you try methods of your own you fail to cash in on this publicity. Here is what I mean:

When, after analysis of the picture, we select a definite selling point as the most effective advertising line on a certain production, we start every engine of advertising in motion, concentrated along the line of the picture's big selling point. "Saturday Evening Post" ads and the rest of the national advertising, reaching 16,650,000 each month, campaign book advertising for the exhibitor's use, trade advertising, direct mail advertising, Showman's Manual Bulletins, all the ad sales material, such as posters, heralds, rotogravure sections and novelties—all this vast stream of popularization of a particular picture is hooked-up around the same central idea and often around the same piece of art work.

By disregarding the press sheet and carrying out entirely your own ideas, you may put a picture over for a clean-up. But the great majority of exhibitors get their best results by using the suggestions in the campaign book.

An exhibitor who does not use the campaign book ad and thus says that he disagrees with Paramount on the way to advertise the picture and gets out advertising of his own, fails to identify his showing in the public mind with the desire to see the picture already planted there by Paramount through other channels.

Better Projection Increases Patronage

IT is sound business judgment for every theater manager to secure the best projection possible. It forms an indispensable part in the entertainment value of pictures and is an added appeal for patronage.

The theater-going public appreciate good projection and will not patronize a house where the evening's entertainment is turned into a nightmare of dizzy flickers. Remember, lost patronage is not easily regained.

Good projection depends upon a reliable source of direct current. In other words, the power behind the arcs must be steady.

Westinghouse motion picture generators deliver a constant flow of power—assuring a clear, steady light on the screen. The projectionist may change from one machine to another without that objectionable flicker. There is no annoying variation in the intensity of light.

Just What Does Exploitation Mean Anyway?

Being both a query and an explanation of one of the most used—is it one of the most abused also?—terms in show business today. Here is the first of a series of three articles covering Exploitation, advertising and publicity, by a man who qualifies as an expert in all three.

By Vic Gauntlett

Advertising Manager John Hamrick Theatres

With Cartoon Illustration by the Author

Vic Gauntlett

THE editors of "The Showman" have requested me to write them three articles covering exploitation, theatrical advertising and publicity. This is indeed no small assignment they have tacked onto me for when you cover these three subjects you just about cover the show game. However, I promised them that I would, so if you bear with me for a few minutes, I will try, minus the glowing adjectives of my profession, to drive home to you a few pointers on "Exploitation" as they were driven home to me by "Old Man Experience" himself.

I think beyond a doubt that "Exploitation" is the most abused word in the show business today. Just its exact meaning I never have as yet been able to find out. The film companies claim that it's a means to sell the merits of the picture to the public in order to assist the exhibitor in getting bigger returns into the box office. The exhibitor on the other hand claims that it's a means used by the film companies to exploit the picture with the sole purpose in mind of making the attraction appear so big that the film company can boost the purchase price on the other exhibitors, with the first exhibitor paying for the sales campaign of the film company. However, no matter what are the various views and definitions, when you come right down to brass tacks, exploitation is merely advertising the merits of the picture to the public in an unusual and convincing manner.

Originally the film companies, in order to supply the exhibitor with an extra service in putting over some big attraction, for which the exhibitor had spent a young fortune, hired the services of a publicity man to assist the manager in handling in a big way a sales campaign on the picture. In those days the film companies secured the best men on the market for these positions. They were men as a rule who not only knew, from practical experience, the publicity and advertising game from the inside out, but oft-times knew the show business backwards. Their services naturally came high—for they were experts in their line. However, in very few exceptions they got big results for the exhibitor as well as the film companies. A few of the bigger film concerns still have such men on the pay rolls of their various exchanges. However, the majority of them, in order to cut the overhead expenses of their exchanges, let their high priced publicity men go and in place of them installed poor salesmen or young fellows who were endeavoring to break into the motion picture game, by any route. In spite of the fact that they had no experience whatsoever, they tacked upon them the title of "Exploitation Men," and sent them forth to ride many a good picture to a "flop," with the exhibitor footing the bills for these young budding aspirants' education. You can't blame the exhibitor for getting sore—he's running a theatre and not a correspondence school. He would have been a great deal better off if these so-called "Exploitation Men" had stayed miles away from his town.

Where the Exploiteer Fits In

I found out early in the game that an exploitation man can either be a great help to his exchange in the selling of pictures or the opposite. Usually if they endeavor to cooperate with the exhibitor instead of with the exchange in putting the picture over, they increase the value of their concern's products and get into the good graces of the exhibitors. I have had many exchange managers take exceptions to this point of view, but nevertheless they know that it's true.

The feeling of the various exhibitors throughout the country on exploitation is easily illustrated in an incident that happened to me in a small town in Oregon, when I was exploiting Mrs. Wallace Reid's "Human Wreckage."

I received my orders to go to this town and exploit the picture for one of three theatres owned by the same man. When I arrived there he informed me to pack up and get out of town as far as he was concerned and what he had to say about exploitation men in general would be too hot to repeat in this article. When he saw, however, that I refused to leave the town, he began to argue with me and showed me advertising bills that did not only include one, but many full-page ads that were run in the local newspapers by one of these so-called exploitation men from another film concern and who had just left town a few weeks before. All this fellow evidently did was to spend plenty of the exhibitor's money without any apparent reason whether it would get value received or not. In other words, he just wanted to make a big "show" and send a lot of full-page clippings back to the boss in order to collect his salary and expenses for the week. The picture financially was a big loss to the exhibitor.

However, I finally convinced the exhibitor that if he would let me go ahead and exploit the picture I would guarantee to spend less money than he usually spent on one of his regular attractions and still get him big results. This appealed to him, of course, and he told me to go ahead. By small but convincing advertising with a punch to it; by creating news articles so that the newspapers were forced to run them; by the backing of city and state officials and many other stunts that did not cost him one ex-

The Easiest Way to Get Good Ads

By Howard Dietz

Director of Advertising and Publicity, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

THOSE who have studied the course of motion picture theatre advertising are well aware that in this department of the business a progress and improvement which matches stride for stride, the advances made in the production of the pictures themselves has taken place in the past few years. Any reader not conversant with the subject and desirous of checking-up on the situation, may come to a full appreciation of the truth of the statement by going back into the newspaper files and comparing the exhibitor's ads of a few years back with those of today.

Two fundamental causes suggest themselves as the sources to which this advance in theatre advertising may be traced.

First: the improved technic in designing ad layouts so elastic that they readily may be adapted to the local uses of the theatre, and the application of this principle by the larger distributing companies in making up their campaign material.

Second: the growing practice among theatre ad men of getting the maximum display and selling value of this prepared material in layouts arranged in accordance with the local conditions peculiar to their theatres—size, general style, billing of supplemental features, etc.

The latter development is finding a wider application as time goes on—and it may be added that it is a development in harmony with a sound business principle, for the prepared campaign material puts at the disposal of the individual showman the advertising talent, experience and skill of organizations maintained by the larger distributing companies at a cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

While the practice of adapting this prepared campaign material is steadily increasing, there is still room for improvement along this line. We still see examples where theatre managers, offered the services of national distributors, through campaign book advertisements, turn their backs on the material and make up their own—with results which in the vast majority of cases, fall far below the standard of their fellow exhibitors who adapt the campaign book ads to their own local uses.

Either these managers fail to recognize the real value of campaign book material, which puts within their reach the work of noted artists and of an advertising staff of experts that no single theatre could afford to maintain, or they have not developed a working knowledge of how to adapt the prepared material to their local uses. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, for instance, attaches supreme importance to this service in behalf of exhibitors and employs the best available talents to prepare its service material.

Of course, no one believes that all campaign book ads should be used entirely as suggested in the sample lay-outs. But the range of material is so great—in most instances—that a manager can pick and choose, blend the elements of several ads and thus adapt the material furnished to his own locality and special clientele. Since this condition obtains, it seems uneconomic to go to the trouble and expense of re-drawing and hand-lettering, to get an effect, in nine cases out of ten, inferior to the original lay-outs.

Several of the examples illustrated here show how campaign book material actually had been adapted for local use. For instance, in illustration No. 3, the lettered title and part of the illustration was cut away, and a wide border or rules used to box in type. In No. 2, the title lettered on the football was taken from a two-column ad, the scene from another two-column, to make a three-column lay-out.

Rules for Making Good Ads

Here are a few general principles to be observed in adapting campaign book ads that managers and their advertising men should keep in mind:

There should be plenty of white space. Cramming the ad from column-rule to column-rule with type, lettering and illustration is confusing and wearying to the eye.

Examples 1, 2, and 3 show how this fault can be avoided. The use of two rules, with the illustration alone breaking through the border, as in No. 1, is one successful and

A Real, Civic Duty

I am not a fanatic.

I am not obsessed with the thought that motion pictures furnish tbe only worth while recreation.

Or that automobiles are responsible for all the wickedness that is chargeable to the present generation.

I hope I never reach that staga in life whare I can't get the other fellow's point of view, even if I don't agree with him.

But I just can't refrain from passing on to you tba observations of a great national organization on a subject that bobs up every now and then in Savannah.

Tbe current "Official Bulletin" of the Motion Picture Theater Owners Association declares it is the civic duty of every theater owner to work for the elimination of the traveling carnival.

"Any kind of show or performance which offends against public decency caters to questionable lines of procedure and inflicts injury on a community, automatically lowers the dignity of public entertainment and becomes a matter of concern to tbeater owners especially," the publication states, and continues:

"Dr. Ganz of the Pennsylvania State Department of Health has placed an official ban on the traveling carnival, declaring the same to be 'definite breeders of disease.

"He urges mayors, burgesses and city and town authorities generally to prevent these caravans from locating in their midst.

"Theater owners must maintain the dignity, decency and community value of the entertainment business. The traveling carnival definitely lowers and degrades public amusement, and this evil influence reacts on every kind of entertainment enterprise."

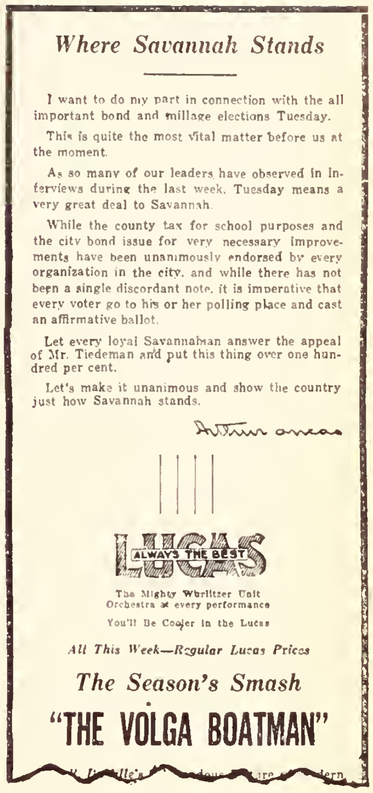
Left—One of the Lucas "personal observations" used as a lead to the Sunday ads for his theatres—a straightforward and sincere statement of the case against the traveling carnival shows.



Where Savannah Stands

I want to do my part in connection with the all important bond and millage elections Tuesday.

This is quite the most vital matter before us at the moment.

As so many of our leaders have observed in interviews during the last week, Tuesday means a very great deal to Savannah.

While the county tax for school purposes and the city bond issue for very necessary improvements have been unanimously endorsed by every organization in the city, and while there has not been a single discordant note, it is imperative that every voter go to his or her polling place and cast an affirmative ballot.

Let every loyal Savannahian answer the appeal of Mr. Tiedeman and put this thing over one hundred per cent.

Let's make it unanimous and show the country just how Savannah stands.

"THE VOLGA BOATMAN"

Right—A typical message from the head of a Savannah community institution—the Lucas Theatre—to his fellow citizens on a vital matter submitted to the voters.

WHEN I built the Lucas Theatre on a side street more than a block from the main retail street of the city—in other words on a site "around the corner"—it was, nevertheless, my intention right from the start, to "sell" the Lucas to the people of Savanah; to make it an institution and not simply a place where motion pictures were shown. I wanted to get people to feel that the Lucas was their plant—to be visited with the same regularity that they went to their clubs or their churches.

With this thought in mind all my energies were employed in exploiting the theatre and its service to the people, the picture program being but an incident of the Lucas service.

As a beginning along the line based on that idea, the slogan "always the best" was adopted as the motto of the Lucas. Next I established the "good will department" which consistently since that time has functioned as the point of contact between the Lucas and the public of Savannah, and adopted the "good will" form of advertising for newspaper as well as direct-by-mail messages.

Applying the Good-Will Idea

The application of the "good will" idea to theatre advertising in the case of the Lucas takes the form of signed observations that appear each Sunday morning as a lead to the advertisements of the week's attractions. This, however, is only a part of the general campaign that was followed in establishing the Lucas Theatre as a civic institution. No reference is made in these leads to the theatres or what they are offering. They deal with leading topics affecting the community—social, civic, religious, and even personalities are included.

These signed messages—occupying advertising space paid for by the theatre, yet entirely unselfish and devoted to affairs of interest to the entire community, served by the Lucas—attracted early attention and resulted in a great deal of favorable comment. Their interest for the public and the influence they exert has consistently grown, until today every reader of the "Sunday News" is a reader of the several civic welfare paragraphs that appear over my signature. I know this because I hear from these weekly observations as they are made.

How many continue and read what the theatres offer for the week I have no way of knowing. But I do know that the people of Savannah have become thoroughly sold to the fact that my chief interest and concern is in the upbuilding of the city. I believe the six or seven-inch Sunday lead, in which there is no suggestion of theatres or motion pictures, is worth more to our houses than ten times as much space devoted to display advertising printed in a Sunday issue of the newspapers of the city.

Arthur Lucas

We have taken as much space as a page in the daily newspapers calling on people to go to church; telling big corporations of the fairness of the people of the community to corporate interests and exploiting things apart from the theatre.

The effect of this good will form of advertising soon proved the efficacy of what had been but a theory when the plan was put into operation. The results have been wonderful and profitable.

Of course, we use a liberal amount of space for display advertising on the attractions in papers printed during the week.

Many exhibitors expect an advertising expenditure today to manifest itself at the box office tomorrow. That plan did not appeal to me when I started the Lucas Theatre, and it doesn't appeal to me now. I prefer to work on the plan that I will be in business the day after tomorrow as well as today and tomorrow.

The good will form of advertising is not the sort of campaign that will bring you immediate results. You start today, but the box office doesn't show results tomorrow or the next day. The good will plan will not do that. It is like any other constructive work, from which each day's effort, though not spectacular in its immediate results, has a permanency and shows continued growth. And when it does begin to show on the daily receipts, you just can't stop it. The growth is certain and steady, month in and month out.

No Longer an Experiment

I have proved this beyond the shadow of a doubt. Good will advertising is no longer an experiment so far as the Lucas is concerned. After three years we are "sitting on the top of the world," as it were, because of this policy of selling the "house" rather than the particular attraction.

As I stated above, the newspaper advertising is only a part of the general good will campaign upon which the Lucas was established as a civic institution. For example:

Each year through the good offices of the Board of Trade and the luncheon clubs of Savannah, we present a loving cup, called the Lucas Trophy, to the person who has done the most worthwhile thing for Savannah during the year. Three of these cups have been given, the presentations being

THE diagram above shows the marquee rigging—a permanent affair sturdy enough to withstand the rigors of storm and winds—designed by William Francke and erected on the canopy of the Rivoli Theatre, Paterson, N.J., of which Mr. Francke is the manager.

The chief advantages of this rigging are: labor saving—displays combining cut-out figures and letters are fixed in place quickly, the fastenings consisting of light wire wrapped about the cable strung around the metal uprights; security—the rigging itself and the displays fastened to it are capable of withstanding heavy weather.

The erection of this permanent rigging at the Rivoli suggested itself to Mr. Francke as the sensible course for a theatre manager whose location is such that frontal displays offer the greatest single advertising medium. The Rivoli is situated in the heart of the shopping district of Paterson, and according to figures obtained by a chain tobacco store adjacent to the theatre, an average of 50,000 people pass the location daily.

Making a new supporting structure for each separate display proved a costly and laborious job, so Francke set about to eliminate the waste effort and materials used for this purpose.

His permanent rigging paid for itself in a short time, and it eliminated the danger of having the big cut-out effects dashed from their moorings by wind and rain.

The piping and angle which constitutes the major portion of the structure is painted a color to match the facade of the theatre, thus it is inconspicuous even when no displays are in place. The placement of the cables, on which the cut-outs are fastened with wire, permits the use of figures and letters of very small or very large size, as the occasion demands.

The Rivoli's displays are designed by Mr. Francke and the work is executed by D. A. DiAngelo of the DiAngelo studio.

The cut-outs are preserved by a coating of shellac—which prevents water seeping into the compo board at the trimmed edges.

As an example of economies made possible by a display rigging such as this one at the Rivoli, a recent instance may be cited. The Rivoli played "Faust," and owing to a flashy display drew into the theatre a patronage that ordinarily would not be attracted to a picture of this class. A huge figure of Satan was the feature of the display, with the lettering F-A-U-S-T strung under the figure. The following week Francke played "Flesh and the Devil." He made some minor changes in the figure, and cut three letters, L, E and H to match the "Faust" spelling, substituting these for the A, U and T in the latter title. "Flesh and the Devil," the full title of the new attraction, was filled out by showing the last three words in a double line of letters half the size of the first word.

How a Loser Was Serviced to Success

Herb Jennings Blended Ideas and Ideals in a Formula That Has Made Keith's Palace an Indianapolis Institution

By S. ROLAND DUVAL

SPENDING a full day in fifteen different houses in Chicago—including the Chicago, Oriental, State Lake and McVickers—I came away with two ideas in theatre managing. I was seeking ideas that would build patronage or conserve more money for the profit each year. Next day I saw Keith's Palace Theatre at Indianapolis, Ind. It is the ideally managed house, both from a showman's viewpoint and sound business principles.

Six years ago, I happen to know, the house had been operated a year and was one of the outstanding "flops" in show business. It had every advantage by playing the only real combination policy in the city; it had good location; it was new and had many up-to-date advantages that were absent in other amusement structures. Today it is clipping off a profit that puts it on a par with the most successful houses in the city. Herb Jennings is the man who turned the trick. His ace in the hole has been a complete knowledge of the theatre that was applied with sound business principles. These facts are not apparent to the observer on first entering the theatre. Instead he is impressed with the cleanliness and comfort of the house; courtesy of the attendants from the cashier to the usher. Everyone seems to be busily engaged doing something, without the air of forced application; and the entertainment program runs rapidly and smoothly like a well-oiled machine.

When I purchased my ticket the cashier said, "Thank you." Not a staccato, parrot spoken "thank you," but said with seeming sincerity. Since I had stood in line to buy my admission, I heard the cashier say to others, "How many please?" "Your change—thank you." I later learned the cashiers must have but two qualifications to work for the Palace—personality and honesty. This combination is a hard one to get consistently. Recently the theatre had occasion to hire a new girl for the position. Out of sixty-eight applicants only two girls were considered. But I have noticed by four years of observation that once a girl is secured, she usually stays a long time.

> This is the first installment of an article describing the ideas—and how they were employed—used by a manager to put his theatre over to success; an article which may be said to constitute a SHOWMAN'S GUIDE in itself.

This same evidence of interested courtesy is shown all through the theatre, wherever the patron makes a personal flesh and blood contact. The doorman without any great show of attention thanks you quietly when returning your torn seat stub. He is kept well advised of comforts and courtesies offered by the theatre, and gives such information. I have even heard him suggest, "We will be glad to check your bundle on the right aisle," "I believe you will find better seats on the extreme left."

Even the ushers have an important part to play in selling the theatre to the individual. Every Sunday morning they are schooled collectively and individually. These girls are trained to always be alert to please and assist. "Please" and "Thank You" are again very much in use when handling crowds. Mothers with restless babies are made happy by an attentive usher offering the baby an attractive candy novelty. I have seen old ladies assisted upstairs by ushers. I have seen crippled patrons singled out of crowds and given seats in preference to other standing patrons.

The marvelous thing is that these attentions never seem to be routined or forced.

The shows are a combination of five acts of vaudeville with big first-run feature pictures. These pictures usually carry the heavy end of the advertising, some interesting and effective exploitation having been done on Producers Distributing Corporation pictures, and a few big specials.

As a newspaper reviewer, it was my job to catch the weekly programs at the Palace. Never has there been any swearing or suggestive filth permitted on the stage. After the first matinee "cuts" are sent backstage. But that is not the end. The stage manager, the orchestra leader and the superintendent are watchful thereafter to see that all objectionable material is kept out of the show. I can back up with facts where "bits" that were a "wow" at the first matinee have been taken out to conform with a well defined policy of cleanliness, which has been widely advertised.

Also I have never found the house anything but clean and comfortable. A system of triple checking on temperature and cleanliness assures this.

A talk with "the man behind the scene"

The Palace Theatre paved the way for the Police band to complete uniform fund by engaging their quartette for one week. By way of gratitude, the band helped the theatre put over a special attraction by giving nightly concerts in front of the house.

CHARITY AND GOODWILL

reveals how the transformation from a "white elephant" to a popular community center has been accomplished. Mr. Jennings is small in stature and the possessor of personality. He seems to have the ability to enthuse. He has enthused the individuals of his house staff. He has enthused the worthwhile people and the rank-and-file of the town. The answer has been co-operation.

The Palace is distinctly a one-man organization, with all department heads functioning perfectly under his supervision. The town people (and Indianapolis is a town of more than 350,000 inhabitants) bring him their civic and entertainment problems. About the city Mr. Jennings is known as the man who always can do something "a little different." I was in his office when the Mayor called him and asked his aid on raising funds for sufferers in Florida. The Mayor later told me, "Herb Jennings mapped out the whole campaign in one afternoon... I always like to have him on my citizen committees because he has ideas."

Works With Employees

The same is true of the employees in the house. They are always seeking his assistance in solving personal problems. And to each he gives attention.

When he first came to Indianapolis, the newspaper boys—of which I was one—congratulated him with, "Glad to know you Mr. Jennings, but you won't stay very long with this house." But he did stay. And he broke down every prediction.

An advertising solicitor predicted the theatre would never be a success unless he took half and quarter page ads in the Saturday and Sunday papers. All other theatres were doing it. Mr. Jennings said it was poppycock and proved it by taking the smallest space. Other theatres are today following his policy.

Building Up Location

The street upon which his theatre was located was geographically a good location. Only the street as a business street was dead. Merchants shook their heads and refused to spend money trying to bring business to their street. Past efforts had been fruitless. Some of the stores even failed to light their windows at night. Only two electric display signs were seen on the street. Both of them were theatre signs. Mr. Jennings organized a Business Association, raised the money by pep talks in door to door solicitation and by installing showmanship, brought 10,000 people to two squares of the street on a single night. It was the greatest demonstration of interested shoppers ever seen in Indianapolis. That was the fuel which turned every merchant into a booster. Now additional street cars are being routed over the street, all windows are lighted with attractive displays at night, and nine big electric signs are evident in two squares. A dead thoroughfare has been changed to an extremely popular one.

With this association of business men Mr. Jennings has followed a far-sighted policy. He has increased the number of people that pass his door twenty-one times —according to a recent check. He has given lights to the street which attract at night and every person there becomes a shopper for entertainment. On another occasion he secured the co-operation of his business association in putting over his show. With their co-operation, he wove a newspaper campaign that secured fifty-three advance notices in three weeks.

When Mr. Jennings cut his advertising, dramatic critics sadly informed him that he could not expect as much free copy as the theatres who advertised in larger space. But the check of a year's free space showed that by lines obtained the Palace out numbered any other theatre in town. This was accomplished by selling the newspapers real news of a local nature instead of press agent's bunk. We boys used to make almost daily calls at the Palace to see if Herb Jennings had any human interest news. And the newspaper boys of the three local papers are still doing that today.

Crashes Newspapers

Twice in a year Herb Jennings sold the managing editor of one paper a newsy idea that landed him on the front page for twenty-three days. And Indianapolis newspapers are known the world over for being "hard-boiled" to show publicity.

Mr. Jennings is a keen student of events in the show world. Four years ago he predicted many of the things that are actually happening now in show business. Among them were presentations as a popular entertainment for picture houses.

New And Improved Equipment

A Review of the Latest Developments in Theatre Engineering

A Change-over Device that is Simple in Operation and Positive in Action

THE problem of effecting satisfactory change-overs from one picture projector to another so as to avoid even minor interruptions in the presentation, has troubled projectionist and exhibitor alike for a considerable time.

In the endeavor to evolve a suitable device, which would be at once simple of operation and positive in action, quite a number of mechanical contrivances were offered to theatres, along with their respective inventors' beliefs, that at last a satisfactory means had been found for obtaining the much desired and much talked about, smooth change-over from picture to picture.

Of the many devices which have at one time or another made a bod for popular favor, but one has succeeded in enjoying a national distribution; which can be taken as a pretty good indication that it has satisfactorily ironed out the troublesome points in this particular problem.

The successful contender for the change-over field is the one popularly known as the Strong Change-over. It consists of a magnetically operated pair of light metal shutters which derive their actuating impulse from a thin wire plunger working up and down through the core of a solenoid.

These shutters are hinged so that the plunger opens and closes them, scissors fashion. The entire mechanism is enclosed by a housing, part sheet metal and part aluminum, measuring about 6 x 8 inches, a porthole 2½ inches in diameter being provided for the passage of the light beam when the shutters are opened.

As commonly used, a change-over unit is mounted on the front wall of this projection room so as to be directly before each motion picture projection lens in order to intercept the light beam beyond the shutter of the projector. In the case of either double dissolving stereopticons, or effect lighting projectors, one change-over is

A dancing beam of light, trained onto the edge of motion picture film, is the basis of the newest talking picture, the Photophone, invented by Charles A. Hoxie of the General Electric laboratories. Synchronization of sound and pictures by means of this principle were first introduced to the public by Lee De Forest in his Phonofilm. The difference between the latter and Photophone is that in the De Forest invention light is controlled, modulated, by sound impulses, whereas the Hoxie device uses a beam of uniform intensity, the beam vibrating back and forth to produce a wave-line which traces the sound waves on the edge of the film.

Dollar-for-Dollar Value and MORE!

¶ When you spend a dollar for equipment or supplies you expect, of course, to get a dollar's worth of merchandise. And you're entitled to nothing less.

¶ A dollar's worth of carbons—a dollar invested in a picture machine, a pipe organ or a screen will buy only so much, when reckoned as a cold-blooded "so-much-for-so-much" proposition.

¶ It's that something—many things in fact—beyond cold cash value which makes a dollar or ten thousand dollars spent for National Service buy SO MUCH MORE.

¶ The best of service; finest merchandise; undivided attention to your requirements; prompt delivery. All these and many more factors combined with facilities to really serve you, is what makes National Service popular with Exhibitors everywhere.

Just What Does Exploitation Mean Anyway?

tra dime, I opened the picture to such big business that the picture still holds the house record for attendance in the theatre. The exhibitor was delighted and bought more pictures from my exchange with the proviso that I was to exploit the super specials in his town.

This is just a little actual happening to illustrate the curse of "exploitation men" who have no regard for the result of their endeavors on the pocketbooks of the exhibitors, but who, on the other hand, are ruled by instructions from their bosses to spend plenty of the exhibitor's money. And don't you kid yourself that these instructions don't come through. I have received plenty of them and so has nearly every other exploitation man.

Don't get me wrong on this article and think that my sole object is to "pan" the idea of exploitation. I am just merely trying to show the abuses that exist under this title. There are two kinds of exploitation, the sensible and non-sensible, and if I must say it, the non-sensible is the predominating factor of the two. Also don't think for one minute that all the abuses of exploitation are made by the exchanges and their so-called exploitation men—far from it. For instance, there's the handsome "tuxedoed house manager," whose main idea of exploitation consists of spending plenty of the bosses' money for an elaborate float and having his picture taken in front of the same and then sending this beautiful "close-up" of him back to the trade papers for publication. This stunt is always a sure-fire advertising getter for the manager, but not for the theatre.

There is only one kind of exploitation that is good for the theatre and that's the kind that doesn't cost anything. Every exhibitor in the country will agree with me on this. You'll say that this kind is hard to get. Sure it is and yet it can be gotten. I know because I have gotten it not only once but many times and I am no wonder, but use my head once in a while instead of the press books.

It is not for me to lay down a certain campaign or set of rules to cover exploitation. I wish that I were able to do it, but it just can't be done for there isn't any. The only one rule that covers good exploitation is just "common sense." However, I have found out under the stringent teachings of "Old Man Experience" that the best means of exploitation is through the columns of the daily newspapers. There you already have a standard field. You have thousands of readers who are waiting to have their curiosity aroused or to drive home to them your salesmanship on the picture. Exploitation is salesmanship of the highest standard. Any picture that is big enough to exploit is worth exploiting in the highest manner; but the value of the picture must live up to the quality of its exploitation. Never cheapen a picture by your exploitation and nexer exploit a cheap picture. It's not worth it, for even if you get the crowds you're getting them under false advertising, and will only do your theatre plenty of damage. The two big, valuable aids to exploitation are advertising and publicity. However, they are so big in importance that they cannot be covered in this article.

You Can't Kid the Public

In my many years of exploiting screen attractions I would never sign up with a film company to exploit a picture unless I was first thoroughly sold upon its merits. This applies the same with everyone. You cannot sell an attraction to the public with the force and conviction that it requires unless you yourself are all "hopped up" as it were on the bigness of the offering. You may think that you can "kid" the public but you can't "kid" yourself.

I have said this before, but I am going to say it again, and that is, the only sensible advice that I know of to pass on to you on exploitation is to carefully analyze the selling values of your attraction and then analyze your motion-picture-loving public and tell them the points that you know will appeal to them. For instance, if you have a war picture and your town likes them, boost the war angle to the skies, and if they don't like war pictures, and you have one, play down the war angle and play up the romance, pathos or the comedy. If they like thrillers, sell them the thrills, and so forth. Remember this matter of exploitation is a serious one and deserves more real thought and clear thinking than any other item in the operation of a theatre. Sell them the picture, but sell it right. Exploitation has wrecked many theatres throughout the country because it was not handled with kid gloves.

COMPLETE AIR CHANGE EVERY ONE TO TWO MINUTES

The Supreme Blower is built to efficiently cool the average theatre of 250 to 1000 seats. It constantly changes the air and creates cooling breezes throughout your auditorium, obviating the necessity for fans. Its sole operating cost is the power it uses. The all-steel wheel, as finely balanced as a crankshaft, is quiet and easy running. There is no unpleasant noise or vibration.

Many exhibitors have told us that the Supreme Blower has paid for itself in the extra profits made possible in a single month. It will do the same for you, making the coming summers seasons of profit, if you will install it now and advertise it well to your patrons.

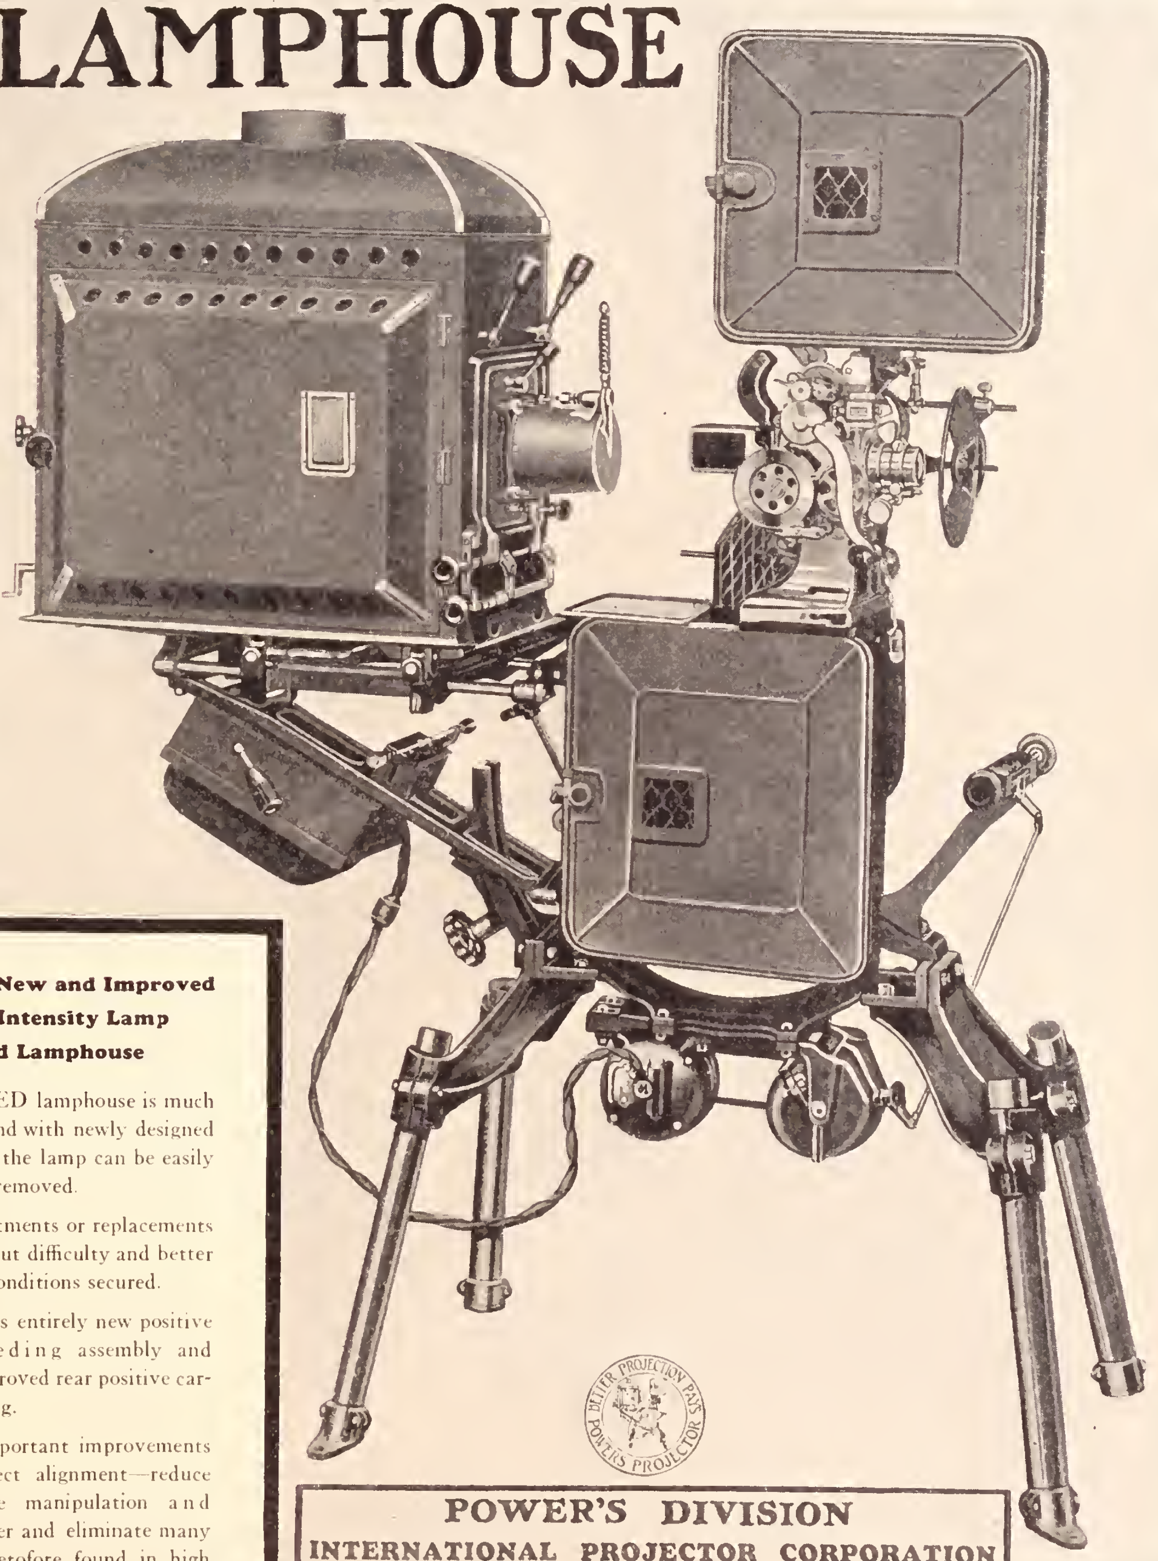
POWER'S PROJECTOR WITH NEW AND IMPROVED HIGH INTENSITY LAMP AND LAMPHOUSE



Power's New and Improved High Intensity Lamp and Lamphouse

IMPROVED lamphouse is much larger and with newly designed wide doors the lamp can be easily cleaned or removed.

All adjustments or replacements made without difficulty and better operating conditions secured.

Lamp has entirely new positive carbon feeding assembly and greatly improved rear positive carriage bearing.

Other important improvements insure correct alignment—reduce wear—make manipulation and control easier and eliminate many defects heretofore found in high intensity lamps.

Balcony Spotlights

INSTALLED in an enclosed structure that forms part of the balcony rail—Kliegl Balcony Spotlights provide excellent facilities for lighting the stage. Light beams are thrown directly upon the performers, eliminating all facial shadows and distortions; also a splendid arrangement for lighting front drops and curtains with varying color schemes, and for floodlighting the orchestra. Can be operated from the switchboard back stage or from motion picture booth—with automatically controlled color frames if desired.

Descriptive folder, with structural plans, for architects and theatre owners, available upon request.

Put Your Orchestra On A Greater Paying Basis

Your orchestra has a definite box office appeal. It stands to reason, if you increase your orchestra you increase this appeal—and ticket sales as well. Many great theatres have found it so. You can do this at a very little cost. By installing Gallagher Orchestral Resonant Bases, you can increase tone and volume over 20%. The installation can be made in a few hours after your final night show. The results will over-pay for it many, many times.

Attention to your lighted displays in competition with displays on other theatre fronts means more patrons in your theatre, more money in your box office, MORE PROFIT.

DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS get that attention, give that individuality to your theatre that builds bigger profits—and—at the same time—save 35% on your current bill.

You're losing money two ways when your lighting displays are not equipped with DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS.

Ask your electrical supply man to install DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS in your displays today. If you don't know a dealer, write us direct for the name of our nearest distributor.

California Theatre, San Francisco, an attention getting display for the lobby where DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS give a novel effect. This display is permanent. The front section is changed each week and relettered to suit the picture. This is the kind of display that pulls them off the street.

St. Francisco Theatre, San Francisco, uses DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS on a special marquise display. DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS give a very unusual effect in their flashing of the lights outlining the rim of the monster glasses. This is just one of the many instances where DIAMOND FLASHER BUTTONS are being used by the largest show houses to bring more money into the box office.

then be placed in front (toward the screen) of the projection lens then in use and no further focussing of the lenses would be required since the lenses all remain permanently in focus, being merely swung to one side when not in use.

Further control over the size of the projected beam of light is obtained by operating the iris shutter in front of the condenser lenses so that all in all the unit is extremely flexible and should find a place in the projection rooms of all large theatres when a powerful projector of this kind is required. The entire unit is carefully balanced and counterbalanced so that it is possible to swing it in any desired position with a minimum of effort.

In referring to this device as an effect projector, it should be remembered that it is equipped to project only single effects, as it possesses but one optic system, instead of the two systems incorporated in the standard effect projector.

There seems to be some question concerning the need for the double-deck effect projector and some projectionists hold that a machine for projecting single effects only is all that is required. There is room for some argument on this point, but this much seems clear—that the smaller houses, limited in the amount of money they can place in projection equipment, are quick to seize upon the double-decker type as it also permits them to use it as a dissolving stereopticon lantern. Hence it eliminates the need of a separate projector for the showing of slides and cut-outs, which consideration is not troublesome to the large de luxe houses with their ample capital, adequate projection room space, and large staff of projectionists.

The Brenkert Company claim their high intensity flood lamp and effect projector to be the first of its kind ever constructed, so that its operation in the Roxy Theatre undoubtedly will be observed with some interest. In all, four units have been installed in the Roxy, where they will be placed, along with eight of the Brenkert Company's C-14 spot lamps, in a special spot lamp booth above the main projection room.

Liberty Electric Corporation,
Stamford, Conn.

Gentlemen:

I have been using one of your Syncrovertors at the Hollywood Theatre for the past seven months and I must say that it is the most efficient and economical A.C. to D.C. machine that it has ever been my pleasure to handle.

Your Syncrovertor has been running, steady for nine and one half hours a day for the past seven months and produces a wonderful steady white light without the first sign of trouble of any kind.

As a whole your Syncrovertor is the most rigid, compact and requires the least attention of any A.C. to D.C. machine on the market that I know of.

Yours very truly,

C. Harold Koon

Chief of Projection,
Hollywood Theatre.

Read What This Syncrovertor User Says

THE Hollywood Theatre at Pottsville, Pa., is one of the most modern picture houses of its size in America. The selection of the Syncrovertor is in keeping with the high resolve of the proprietors of this theatre to install only the most efficient equipment available consistent with economy. The Liberty Syncrovertor as a unit for the conversion of A.C. to D.C. proves its superiority beyond all question of doubt. It will save fully 25% in your current cost of projection. The transformer of the Syncrovertor is the machine's own emergency unit. If the motor ceased to function, the transformer would furnish A.C. current of the proper voltage to the arc.

architecture of the theatre in general.

Here, also, the equipment was selected at the last moment, and again it was necessary to discard some of it in order to get the most necessary devices into the room.

The distances between projectors, as finally decided upon, will be exactly twelve inches, neither more nor less, since there is a limit in this matter of cutting down on the equipment required to produce a show.

Not all of the improperly designed projection rooms in the country are the result of accidental errors in design, as observe what happened in a large Chicago theatre where the architect, not to spoil the lines of the interior of the house, created a rather novel "bolognie-shaped" projection room at the rear of the main floor in such a manner that the projectors were below the center line of the screen.

Since the space in any theatre is valuable in that it replaces seats, it was deemed advisable to restrict the dimensions of the room to the irreducible minimum, with the result that this imposing theatre has the snuggest little, tightest little, "bolognie-shaped" projection room of any in the land.

Although we have been so far unable to confirm this, we understand that the principal requirement of projectionists in this theatre is that they have concave chests and convex backs, after the manner of a meniscus lens, so that they may fit snugly against the walls while operating the projectors.

Plan In Advance.

There is a simple way, of course, in which such monstrosities in projection room design may be avoided and that is far the owners of the theatre to appoint a competent projectionist to supervise the selection of equipment and charge him with the responsibility of seeing to it that all matters pertaining to projection are carried out in strict accordance with plans.

The owners should then go to the architect with a list of the proposed equipment and a notation of the space required by each piece and insist that the projection room be of a size sufficient to meet the necessary space requirements.

And this should be done before the plans are drawn in order to be fair to the architect so that he can incorporate the projection room in his design of the building as a whole.

To Really Save Money You'll Buy Peerless

"The Super Reflector Arc Lamp"

PEERLESS Reflector Arc Lamps are the most conservatively priced reflector lamps obtainable. Their actual performance record, mechanical superiority and dollar for dollar value make any other lamp extremely expensive.

Service, after you have purchased, is assured you, and this, regardless of where you are located, for Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps are sold and serviced from over forty-three (43) principal cities in the United States.

Remember this.—There are more Peerless Reflector Arc Lamps in use than the combined total of all others put together; they are standard factory equipment on Simplex Projectors; they are sold by the greatest sales organization in the country; they are made by the largest manufacturer of reflector arc lamps in the world and outsell all others two to one, and by these qualifications can never become an "orphan" on your hands.

Visiting "Fire Brigade"

FLANKED by a motorcycle police escort, with sirens shrilling, traffic was swept aside one night last week for Chief Johnson and his party of Bridgeport, Conn., firemen—who had come to New York not to save the city from a holocaust but to see "The Fire Brigade" as guests of M-G-M. At six-thirty they were photographed before the Central Theatre, after which they dined in state at the Strand Roof until the hour for the performance.

Clara Wins the Cup

CLARA BOW this week received the Wampas achievement trophy given to the Baby Star of 1924 selected by the Los Angeles film critics as having made the most signal progress in her screen career. This presentation was to have been made at the Wampas Frolic, but Miss Bow was confined to her home by physician's orders, so Alberta Vaughn received the cup from Fred Niblo and this week presented it to Miss Bow. The youthful winner reached full fledged stardom in "It," and will resume work in a few days on "Rough House Rosie."

Projection Supervisor Honored

THE testimonial dinner and dance given at the Hotel Astor Saturday night, February 19, to Charles Johnson, supervisor of projection of the Fox Film Corporation, was one of the pleasantest of these entertainments given during the winter by the projectionists of this community to honor their leaders. This is the fourth annual dinner given to Mr. Johnson, who has been in charge of projection of the Fox Film Corporation for over twenty years. While not the largest of the projectionists' dinners it was in many respects one of the most enjoyable of the season and a great success in spite of the fact that it was held on one of the worst winter nights of the year.

The toastmaster, P. A. McGuire, advertising manager of the International Projector Corporation, said that while those present were there to do honor to Mr. Johnson, it was the desire of the committee and the guest of the evening that the dinner and dance be as informal and enjoyable as possible. He then expressed for the assemblage the high esteem in which Mr. Johnson is held and made the pleasant announcement that to all intents and purposes formal speech-making was through for the evening. The guests then proceeded to the enjoyment of the dinner, followed by dancing, with no formal interruption except the few moments taken by Mr. McGuire to present a very handsome radio set to Mr. Johnson with the compliments of the committee and friends in the industry. Mr. Johnson expressed his sincere thanks for the good will indicated by holding the dinner and the presentation of the radio set.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Johnson, Mr. Charles Levine, general manager of the Fox Theatres Corporation, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Kaplan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Day, Mr. and Mrs. William Gluck, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Weinberger, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Fiber, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Friedman, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Abrams, Mr. A. E. Meyer and Miss Hauschild, H. Griffin, Simon Terr, J. LaFantie and J. Krulish.

The committee, S. Friedman, S. Fiber, L. Weinberger and J. Abrams, introduced a number of interesting novelties in the course of the evening for the entertainment of the guests and deserve great credit for the excellent work which made the dinner a very successful and enjoyable event.

A Profitable Talk

THAT newspaper men and press agents are the most promising material for the producing and scenario ends of the film industry was made evident by speech and action at last Thursday's luncheon of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., held at the Mid-Town Hoffbrau.

Arthur Caesar, successful playwright and scenarist, who has been both newspaper reporter and press agent, furnished the most convincing proof. For after hearing Caesar relate his playwriting and movie-titling experience E. M. Asher, co-producer of "McFadden's Flats," invited the speaker to write the titles for his next First National picture, "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath."

Caesar accepted the offer on the spot to the accompaniment of thunderous applause from the assembled multitude of press agents.

The speaker had just concluded a talk in which he gave it as his opinion that no group in the picture business was better fitted to write titles and scenarios or to direct and supervise photoplays than publicity men with the background of valuable experience in the newspaper game.

Two other guests of honor who voiced his sentiments were Mr. Asher and Edmund Goulding, singer, novelist, scenario writer and director.

Mr. Goulding, in his talk, said that the big need of the industry was new blood and young blood in the production end and asserted that many good men could be drawn from the ranks of newspaper men and publicity agents. 'The big trouble with the film industry is that, when a man is good in the job he holds, the producers are afraid to take him out of it. For example, the moment they get a good cutter who might make an excellent director they don't tell him to take up direction. They're afraid they can't get another cutter as good. A publicity man, who is getting results, is left where he is for the same reason. Thus a lot of mediocre ability flocks to Hollywood from the outside and this, together with the fact that production chiefs are overworked because of the lack of sufficiently capable lieutenants, is reflected in the quality of productions."

Actors' Fund Entertainment

THE British committee which is co-operating with the Actors' Fund of America in its $1,500,000 Endowment campaign includes in its membership Charles Chaplin and Ronald Colman, representing England, and Mary Pickford and Norma Shearer, representing Canada. Dewey D. Bloom, Canadian, is secretary of the committee.

A gala all-British entertainment will be staged at the Imperial Theatre, New York City, on Sunday evening, February 27. The entire proceeds go to the fund to care for the sick, needy and infirm of the theatre. Those desiring to make reservations for the performance, or to contribute to the fund, should address the secretary, at 1658 Broadway.

"Joy Girl" Returns

MEMBERS of the Allan Dwan company filming exteriors for "The Joy Girl" at Palm Beach returned to New York on Monday to start on the interiors at the Fox New York studio. The location trip is reported as successful in every way. Not only was some excellent footage obtained, but the company was feted and dined by Palm Beach society, which was thrilled at the presence of a small film colony in its midst.

Meanwhile, things have been humming at the Fox studio in preparation for their return, with six sets being constructed under the direction of Sam Corso. These include an elaborate milliner's shop and the bedroom of the hero.

Lloyds En Route

HAROLD LLOYD and his wife, Mildred Davis, are on their way to New York City, due to arrive the end of the week. Miss Davis' birthday occurs on the trip East, and she will further celebrate in New York by attending the premiere of "Too Many Crooks," which marks her return to the screen. They expect to spend at least three weeks in Manhattan, during which the comedian will begin preparation of his next vehicle, active work on which will begin late in March.

Rare Roosevelt Film

THEODORE ROOSEVELT will be brought back to life on the screen in a special assemblage of film prepared by the Roosevelt foundation and included in "Thirty Years of Motion Pictures," to be shown by the National Board of Review at Carnegie Hall, New York City, on Monday, February 28. This portion of the film will cover the life and work of Roosevelt from 1897 to the time of his death in 1919, and includes views of his funeral at Oyster Bay.

Enters Concert Publicity

A CHEERY note from Margaret I. MacDonald informs us that she has made an advantageous connection with the Scala Concert Bureau and has turned from the silent drama to a more audible field. She was formerly on the editorial staff of the Moving Picture World and later was in the publicity department of Columbia Pictures.

Christianson Returns

BENJAMIN CHRISTIANSON, M-G-M's Danish director, has returned to the studios from a brief vacation in Denmark, and will shortly be assigned a new production. He reports interesting activities under way in Sweden and Germany, and anticipates a strong bid for fame by the Russians this year.

Directors Write--Cutters Make

How Successful Pictures of Today Are Improvised; Griffith Tells Why Present Continuity Form is Inadequate for Purpose

(Editor's Note—This series of articles, advocating a radical change in scenaric method, covers relatively uncharted ground, and THE NEWS will be pleased to receive views of any character from its readers. The previous articles were "No One Can Write a Photoplay," "Scripts Must Be Made Unreadable" and "Better No Script Than Words." They are an individual expression of opinion and do not necessarily represent the views of the Editor.)

By L. C. Moen

TODAY'S continuity serves two more or less useful purposes: 1. It provides the business office with an approximate means of laying out budgets and schedules. 2. It suggests situation, incident, business and characterization, just as does the gag man. But it is not from today's continuity that today's successful pictures are made. They are made, in the main, by director and cutter. Sometimes one man deserves the credit for both operations.

A picture is not "written" until someone has put it into dynamic images, visualized it in motion—and this man today is the director. A picture is not "made" until it has been assembled, so that the effect of each scene on the ones before and after may be intelligently gauged, as well as the total effect of the whole. That man, today, is the cutter. The rhythmic and compositional factors which determine whether or no the story is well told are largely in the hands of these two. Thanks to the fallacy of the literary continuity, neither one is helped a great deal by the present type of script. Last week we referred to the views of D. W. Griffith on that score. Contrary to general opinion, he is not opposed to working with a script—but he wants a better type of continuity than that now handed him. He uses the present script as far as it is useful to him, then discards it without any pretense of working from it.

"There is an impression," Mr. Griffith told us, "that I shoot at random, in a haphazard way, not knowing what I want until I see it. That is untrue. Before I start to make a picture I know very definitely what I want in every scene.

How Griffith Works

"I read the script over, usually once, in search of ideas—nothing more—and then discard it. If I find one good idea it may easily be worth the cost of the script. I do not read the script to determine the manner of telling the story on the screen, because words are inadequate for that.

"After I get the story firmly in hand, I plan the telling of it, scene by scene, in my own mind, and before I start to shoot I know exactly what I want in every foot of film. My work from then on is not haphazard, despite the fact that I don't use the script. I know precisely what I want and I shoot until I get it.

"I have nothing against continuity. When a type of script is evolved that will visualize all of these things in advance, it will simplify matters tremendously. I often have difficulty in getting what I want, just because words are so inadequate to convey to someone else your pictorial ideas. I don't think that many directors really use the present sort of script very much.

"When the visual script comes, it will mean two directors—a master director, who will supervise preparation of continuity, filming, cutting and editing, and a director who will correspond to the stage director in the legitimate theatre, simply aiding the players in the interpretation of their roles. That is as it should be, and it will mean better pictures."

Others Who Improvise

Others who create directly in celluloid, shunning the deceptive word-script, are Chaplin and Lloyd. Chaplin shoots a vast amount of negative, trying every possible angle on an idea, looking at it in the projection room, discarding and selecting—until ultimately he has a completed picture.

Lloyd starts out with a theme, works over it with his gag men, and when he has a clear idea of what he wants, starts to shoot his story in sequence, taking scenes in the order in which they will appear on the screen. That is a great advantage in using Improvisation, because it insures, despite the absence of a written script, a correct and logical succession of scenes. If consecutive scenes are shot at a considerable interval of time without a script, errors of one sort and another may creep in, with unfortunate results.

Nearly all of the really outstanding screen successes, if you get to the bottom of their making, have been improvised. Either no script was used, or the story was so built up and altered in the course of filming that it was lost sight of.

Improvisation, however, has its many drawbacks. To be successfully applied, the man using it must be able to visualize keenly and accurately, and he must be in virtual control of the production unit. It is expensive, because it means a certain amount of experiment to determine matters which a Visual Continuity would settle in advance. It is slow and laborious, for the same reason. It places an unfair strain on the director, since he must create, carry out and criticize. The director could accomplish more, were he expected to accomplish less.

The Weakness of It

The greatest weakness of improvisation, however, is the fact that a scene viewed individually in the taking or even on the screen may be a far different matter when assembled in a reel with a hundred others. Its tempo, its composition, its emotional shading may be well nigh perfect, considering the scene by itself—but they may be entirely out of step with the rest of the picture.

"When the rushes are all so good, where do all the bad pictures come from?" asked a leading independent producer the other day.

Precisely, of course, from the fact that when scenes are assembled in consecutive order they are strongly affected by their juxtaposition. Place a spot of red paint on a green background and it will seem brighter and redder than it appears by itself. Place a slow-tempo scene between two lively ones, and it will seem slower.

This can be taken into account in improvisation only if you are willing to do any necessary amount of retaking after the picture is assembled. Under Visual Continuity, or the method of Composition as opposed to Improvisation, these factors can be brought under control and regulated in advance, with a corresponding increase in quality, sureness, ease and economy.

Motion Picture Is Uplifting, Declares Minister

"MOTION pictures increasingly will make for honesty and world morality. In them, crime is condemned and punished, injustice meets defeat and righteousness triumphs. And the pictures relieve the monotony of lives of millions who seek escape from long hours of drudgery," said the Rev. Clinton Wunder, pastor of the Baptist Temple, Rochester, in an address before the Greater Buffalo Advertising Club in the Hotel Lafayette the other day. "The motion picture is no longer just an entertainer. It has become a high-class entertainer and has added the functions of teacher and preacher. Its advancement in the field of entertainment has been phenomenal. It provides the world with romance at a price within the reach of all and psychologists tell us diversion and recreation are essential for human happiness," he declared.

T. O. of W. Pa. and W. Va. Arrange 7th Meet

MOTION PICTURE THEATRE OWNERS of Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia are arranging for their Seventh Annual Convention to be held at the William Penn Hotel, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, on the 24, 25 and 26 of April. The theatre men have engaged the entire seventeenth floor of the hotel for this occasion.

On the first date, a Sunday, two special pre-release showings are scheduled for the afternoon and evening for the entertainment of the delegates and their friends. The convention proper will convene on Monday at 11 A. M. Mayor Charles J. Kline, or some other city or state official, will deliver the address of welcome. The questions confronting the independent exhibitor will form the convention proceedings on Tuesday morning. On Tuesday evening the grand ball will be held in the ballroom of the Hotel.

Franklin Heads West Coast Chain; Resigns Publix Post

Harold B. Franklin

HAROLD B. FRANKLIN, in charge of the operation of Publix Theatres for approximately three years, has resigned his position with that company to become president and general manager of West Coast Theatres, a circuit with theatres in California numbering 136. It is stated that Franklin will receive a yearly salary of $75,000 on a five year contract in addition to a percentage of the profits that the theatre circuit shows under his management. His resignation from Publix takes place officially March first, according to report, and it is also stated that he will sever his connection with Famous Players-Lasky which company he served as a director and member of the executive committee as well as executive officer in many F. P.-L. subsidiaries.

Previous to his connection with Publix Mr. Franklin was managing director of the Mike Shea theatres in Buffalo. He reorganized the theatre department for Famous which formed the nucleus for Publix conceived by Sam Katz when the Balaban and Katz houses were taken over by Famous. Mr. Franklin aided the financing, designing and supervision of the building of over fifty theatres, chief of which is the Paramount, during his affiliation with Publix.

Among other innovations Mr. Franklin is credited with the establishment of the first theatre managers' training school.

There will be no change in the West Coast Theatres staff, says the report, although it is considered quite probable that Mr. Franklin will take some of his Publix helpers out to West Coast Theatres. Whatever changes to be introduced will be for the expansion of the present holdings of the circuit.

With the announcement of Mr. Franklin's resignation from Publix, there were rumors to the effect that Publix had taken over West Coast Theatres. These rumors were absolutely denied. Mr. Franklin is expected to leave New York for the West Coast in about a month.

No $5,000 Vitaphone, Says Albert Warner

Official Declares Present Charge For Installations in Theatres Is Below Cost

THE recent statement published in the trade journals to the effect that a new Vitaphone machine costing approximately $5,000 was soon to be issued is misleading, unfair to the theatre owners who have already installed the Vitaphone and to those that have contracted for installations, and was not authorized by the Vitaphone Corporation, according to a statement issued this week by Albert Warner, Treasurer Vitaphone Corporation.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Warner, "what is now being charged the exhibitors for Vitaphone installations is much less than what it actually costs the Vitaphone Corporation. For example, the amplification device alone costs more than $5,000. These facts are conveyed in order that exhibitors will not be misled by erroneous statements.

"The fact that so many large theatre owners are competing with each other to get Vitaphone equipment indicates clearly the judgment of the exhibitors, and their desire to make provision to get equipment at the earliest possible date. If simplification or reduced cost ever becomes possible we will certainly arrive at it as soon at is is humanly possible. But this is something that only the future can tell.

"Exhibitors should not be swayed by unauthorized statements. We have facts and figures to prove any statement we make. The showmen who are now showing the Vitaphone know its true box-office value. Without exception, every theatre owner who has installed the Vitaphone has been able to pay for its installation within a comparatively short time. And the payments for the machine are very liberal indeed.

"In view of all the circumstances it is absurd for anyone to be misled. The statement published is unfair to the theatre owners who have installed the Vitaphone. It is unfair to those who have contracted for the service. It is unfair to those contemplating installations, and it is unfair to the Vitaphone Corporation because the statement was not authorized by them. We have the facts and figures, and we'll be glad to lay them on the table for any and all persons interested in the Vitaphone."

Belle Bennett Asks Change in Goldwyn Contract

Belle Bennett, screen player under contract to Samuel Goldwyn for five years, is seeking to break this contract unless the loan and lay-off clauses are changed, it was revealed this week in a statement from her attorney, Charles B. Hazelhurst, who announced that he was laying the matter before Will H. Hays and would withhold court action until the Hays office had an opportunity to affect an adjustment.

The letter alleges that she was rushed into signing the contract at the time of her son's death, that she could earn more freelancing in the 22 weeks in which Goldwyn can now keep her idle, without pay, than in working the entire 52 weeks for him at her salary of $1,000 weekly, that he has made a large profit out of lending her to other producers at a high salary, that her income on the stage was larger, and other complaints.

A statement from Mr. Goldwyn implied that he had built Miss Bennett up through giving her good stories and good productions, and that she had acquired an exaggerated idea of her value; that the contract was customary, fair and liberal and that he was entirely willing to have the courts pass on it, and said in closing: "Miss Bennett is not a great star—she is merely a good actress and she has a good contract."

"U" Gets 3 More Houses in Atlanta, Georgia

A new chain of houses in the Southern territory, the Fairfax, Madison and Ponce de Leon, three new neighborhood houses in the Atlanta, Ga., suburbs, has been acquired by Universal. The theatres are a part of the newly created Naborhood Theatre Corporation. The Fairfax, a 600-seat house in Eastporin, Ga., is situated on the outskirts of Atlanta. This house, which cost $100,000, has been opened since last October. The Madison, an 800-seat theatre in East Atlanta, also costing in the neighborhood of $100,000, will be ready for opening in July. The Ponce de Leon, located at Ponce de Leon Avenue and the Boulevard, Atlanta, will be opened either late this month or early in March. It is a 500-seat house which cost $80,000.

Injunction, Asked for by Smith Service, Denied

The Smith Messenger Service was denied a temporary injunction against the Film Board of Trade of Cleveland, the exchange members of the Film Board of Trade and P. L. Tanner of the Transit Film Company last Friday, February 18, by Judge Eastman on the ground that the case is not a case in equity but a case for the court of law. The Smith Messenger Service had asked for an injunction against the above named defendents claiming conspiracy and restraint of trade and asking $100,000 damages. The case was heard in a court of equity and ruled out by Judge Eastman. It is not known whether the Smith Messenger Service will take the case into a court of law.

The Smith Messenger Service claimed conspiracy on the ground that all of the exchange members of the Film Board of Trade withdrew their business simultaneously in favor of the Transit Film Company, and by this act crippled it to such an extent that it is unable to do any business.

Fire Destroys Hippo. and Block at Williamsport, Pa.

The Hippodrome Theatre, Williamsport, Pa., was completely destroyed by flames which wiped out the Linck block, on West Fourth Street, and damaged the adjoining Weightman building, early in the morning of February 16th. Fireman Charles T. Maloney, of Engine Company No. 3, perished when a roof collapsed. The owners of the building placed their loss at $500,000, with the replacement value at $650,000. They carried $35,000 insurance.

Members of the theatre company estimated their loss on equipment, exclusive of the pipe organ that was ruined, at $10,000. The rest of the $1,000,000 loss was to property owned by the tenants of the Linck block and damage done to the nearby Weightman building. The fire is believed to have spread from the incinerating plant in the Linck structure.

Hines, T C.. Egan and M. A. Regan.

South Dakota Kills Bill for 10% Tax on Receipts

The South Dakota house last week killed the bill which would have exacted a 10 per cent tax on the receipts of exhibitors of that state. The vote which decided the fate of this bill was 62 to 37.

Famous-Lasky in England Appeals to British Exhibitors' Sense of Fair Play

JOHN CECIL GRAHAM, managing director of Famous-Lasky Film Service, Ltd., has issued a statement to the British film trade for the first time since the boycott move by the C. E. A. in England. This takes the form of an advertisement in the trade papers addressed "To the Exhibitors of Great Britain." Briefly summarized, Mr. Graham's contentions are:

That the Plaza, in London, is a member in good standing of the C. E. A.; that he has never been approached by any member of the C. E. A. General Council asking for a statement as to Famous' intended theatre activities in Birmingham; that the boycott action was instigated by men controlling the neighborhood houses of Birmingham, who use practically no Paramount product; that there are three downtown first-runs in Birmingham, none competing with the neighborhood houses; that Famous has declined many chances to buy leading British circuits; that one of the two houses purchased in Birmingham has already been turned back to its former owner personally to run, Famous having no hand in its management; that Famous would be glad to sub-lease the other to any exhibitor who will guarantee to protect the Famous first-runs; that the company has operated successfully in England for more than a decade, is proud of its reputation, and would do nothing to disturb it; that the company stands on its own feet and has always let its product speak for itself, asking no favors from an exhibitor if he did not feel he could show Paramount pictures profitably; that no threats have been made against exhibitors, even though they controlled a certain territory. Then, in closing, Mr. Graham says:

"Do you know of any reason why your past ten years' confidence in us should change now? In the words of an internationally-known English phrase—'Is it cricket?' "

Mid--West is Foremost

Will Lead Other Sections in Theatre Construction in 1927 is Prediction; $93,367,500 Involved

Before the end of 1927 the Mid-Western States will have led the field of theatre construction activities, is the prediction made by "The Architectural Forum," which further prophesies an expenditure of approximately $93,367,500 for 1927 in that territory alone for building purposes. $199,652,500 will be spent on the country as a whole.

The states along the Northern section of the Atlantic Coastline follow second in the "Forum's" estimate with a building program involving $54,747,500 invested. Other sections of the country will spend the following amounts: $18,637,500, Northeastern; $14,892,500, Western; $11,012,500, Southwestern; $6,995,000, Southeastern.

Up to the present time, 292 theatre projects are definitely planned or under way. They involve some $79,861,000. An approximate division, given in detail and covering different section, is given below.

Waxman, Warner Advertising, Publicity and Exploitation Manager

WARNER BROS. this week announced the appointment of A. P. Waxman as head of the advertising, publicity and exploitation departments connected with Warner Bros. pictures, Warner Bros. extended run productions and the Vitaphone Corporation. He has had charge of Warners' road show advertising and publicity and it is due to his work in that department that the promotion was made, says Warners. He takes charge of his new duties at once.

Before coming to Warner Bros., Mr. Waxman had many years of road show experience with First National, Sam Goldwyn and Famous Players. In 1914, he was an exhibitor in New York and New Jersey. Previous to that he handled "Caberia," the first foreign importation, and attractions for D. W. Griffith.

During the war Waxman was with the Italian Government and served as Press Representative for their war picture, "The Italian Battlefront," with the Photographic Service of the United States Signal Corps.

Nine U. A. Houses Open Before End of Year

Schenck's Official Announcement to Stockholders; Tie-Up With Loew on Two Theatres

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by Joseph M. Schenck to stockholders of United Artists Theatre Circuit, Inc., that nine United Artists prerelease houses will be in operation before the end of the calendar year, 1927. Five are now running, two will open in September and two more in November. It is probable that several others in the chain of twenty planned may be built or acquired before January, 1928.

Negotiations for theatres are in progress or have been completed in a number of cities throughout the country, among them a deal with Loew's, Inc., which makes the U. A. Circuit and Loew equal partners in a theatre and four-story office and store building in Pittsburgh. It is being erected on a site at Penn Avenue and Federal Street, and construction is under way, backed by the Penn-Federal Corporation of Delaware. According to Mr. Schenck's statement the theatre will open September, 1927; seating capacity will be 3,477.

In addition to this transaction are deals which include the acquisition of the Valencia Theatre atop the Century house in Baltimore, which will become the United Artists' Baltimore house. This 1,472 capacity house has been leased by the Century Parkway Corporation which also controls the Century. U. A. now has a half interest with Loew's, Inc., in the Century as well.

As announced last week, the Chicago U. A. house is now under construction on the site formerly occupied by the Apollo Theatre. Everything but the four walls of the old house will be torn down and an 1,800-seat theatre erected. In Detroit, a 2,000-seat house will be the foundation of an eighteen-story building at Bagley Avenue and Clifford Street. Opens November. A Los Angeles house is at present under construction at Broadway, between Ninth and Tenth streets, as the two lowest floors of a 13-story building. Also opens November.

As previously announced, Grauman's Egyptian in Hollywood passed to United Artists control in January, 1927. U. A. and Pacific Northwest Theatres' deal in Portland gives another outlet in the Maejstic Theatre, which will be closed this summer and completely remodeled. A similar deal with Northwest brings the Liberty Theatre in Seattle into the pre-release group. This house has been operating as the local U. A. theatre since January 4, 1927. It is a 1,620-seat house and is operated on a fifty-fifty basis.

According to the Schenck announcement, negotiations now are under way for United Artists theatres in the following cities: New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, St. Louis, San Francisco, Brooklyn, Milwaukee, Newark, Louisville, San Diego and Oakland.

Mr. Schenck announced the nucleus of a permanent organization in the formal designation of Louis Anger as operating Vice-President and Ralph Hornbrook as mechanical engineer. Mr. Anger arrived in New York from Hollywood several days ago and it is expected he will soon announce additional theatres in the East and Middle West.

Plaza Theatre, Sioux City, Damaged by Flames

The Plaza Theatre at Sioux City, Iowa, was recently damaged by fire. This house is operated by the Frank Amusement Company which has its headquarters at Waterloo. The estimated loss in the burning of the Plaza was placed at $60,000.

Stanley Acquires New Ogontz in Philadelphia

The new Ogontz Theatre, on Ogontz Avenue, near Chelton Avenue, has been added to the Stanley Company of America's chain according to an announcement from John McGurk, president of the company, who makes known the fact that the house will come under the Stanley management on Monday, February 28th. The policy inaugurated at the opening of the Ogontz several weeks ago, will be continued.

The Ogontz, said to represent an outlay of a million dollars, is of the Spanish Renaissance type and is located in what is known as the Spanish Village. The 2,000-seat house is decorated with mural paintings and draperies of Spanish Castilian style.

Publix Entering New York Neighborhood Field

The neighborhood districts in New York City are to see a battle between Loew and Publix, it appears as a result of an announcement this week that Publix will erect three neighborhood houses, all in districts where Loew is already strongly intrenched.

The three are the Parkway in the Brownsville section of Brooklyn, the Venetian on on Grand Concourse, and the Spanish Theatre in Jamaica. Publix has previously announced plans for the erection of a large downtown house in Brooklyn.

British Empire Films Is Incorporated at St. John

The British Empire Films of Canada, Limited, has been incorporated at St. John, N.B., capitalization of $50,000. Incorporators, Robert J. Romney, St. John, former Canadian general manager of Vital Exchanges of Canada, Limited, and also identified with Cranfield & Clarke of Canada, Limited; Richard G. Magee and James M. Next Equipment Meet to Be Held in N. Y. C.

THE next annual convention of the Theatre Equipment Association will be held in New York City, during the month of July, it was announced. following a meeting of the directors of the association in Chicago, last month. A convention committee of three, composed of W. E. Green, Irving Samuels and J. C. Kroesen was appointed to investigate the adaptability of New York City as the convention center and a report is to be handed in at the April meeting of the Board of Directors.

Directors attending the January meeting were: J. H. Hertner, president; S. S. Behrends, treasurer; J. E. McAuley, W. E. Green, Irving Samuels and C. D. Struble. The directors took under consideration an institutional advertising campaign in the trade press, designed to foster the purposes of the association and its members. Miss Mary O'Neill was appointed secretary of the association.

A number of new members have recently joined the association and it was declared that the organization was in a favorable condition to carry out a program of exceptional activity for the next year.

Nat'l Theatre Supply Men Confer in Chicago

An important series of conferences were held in Chicago this week by National Theatre Supply Company officials from all parts of the United States. Policies for the coming year and sales methods were discussed at the meetings which were presided over by President H. A. R. Dutton.

Among those who came to Chicago for the conferences were: Messrs. Joe Hornstein, vice-president in charge of Eastern division; Oscar Oldknow, Atlanta, Ga., vice-president in charge of Southern division; Less Dolliver, San Francisco, vice-president in charge of Western division; P. C. Parrish, purchasing agent for Southern division; O. H. Dutton, sales supervisor, Midwest division; W. D. Interstate Co. Controls 2 Lebanon Houses, Is Report

The Capitol and the Colonial, two motion picture theatres in Lebanon, Pa., recently purchased from the Penn-Steitz Amusement Company by the Baring Realty Company, are believed to have been acquired by the latter company for the Interstate Company, operators of a chain of vaudeville and movie theatres. The sale of the properties was announced early in February and the aggregate price paid for them is said to have been around $400,000. The transfer became effective the middle of February.

News of the transaction was given out by Jeremiah H. Greiner, president of the Penn-Steitz Company and Walter C. Graeff, attorney, both of Lebanon.

In and Out of Town

CONFERRING with Clayton Sheehan, manager of the Fox Films foreign department, are two foreign officials of Fox Films. J. P. Ryan, manager director for Southern Europe, arrived on board the La France on Wednesday, February 16. Bruno Fux, managing director for Italy, arrived earlier on the liner Diulio. They will both remain several weeks looking over new Fox product.

AFTER having just returned from the West, where he had been visiting several of Warner Bros.' exchanges in the Middle states, Edwin Silverman, sales manager for Warners, is on a trip to the South which will take him through that district for three weeks. His trip at this time is to acquaint the salesmen with the new Warner product now on the way.

GUS SCHLESINGER, general manager of the foreign department of Warner Bros., is leaving on the Leviathan on February 26th for an extended trip abroad in the interests of foreign distribution for the Warner product. He will visit London, Berlin, the Scandinavian countries, Milan and Paris. S. Maurice Livingstone has preceded Mr. Schlesinger abroad and is now spending his time in field work throughout Europe.

Fox Production Greatest Last Year; 103,000,000 Feet of Film Used

PRODUCTION of Fox Films for 1926 was the greatest since the company's inception with a total of approximtaely 103,000,000 feet of film made and distributed; the major portion of this film was used in the manufacture of 226 subjects of which 49 are feature length, 47 two-reel comedies, 130 news reels and single variety subjects including educational films.

The entire footage was turned out by the Fox laboratories in this country and abroad, the greater part being developed in the home office plant at Tenth Avenue and 56th Street, New York City.

With the production of these pictures, the total output of the Fox Films since its organization in 1915 was increased to more than 1,068 feature pictures and two-reel subjects, and to 976 short-reel subjects.

Standard Synchronizing System is Planned

Five Companies Cooperating; Single Device in View; Present Arrangement Not Efficient

AN arrangement has been effected between Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, First National, Famous Players, Universal and Producers' Distributing Corporation, with the object of standardizing systems and methods of sychronizing sounds with pictures. It is hoped that further development of the device will follow along lines "which will keep competition free and open among producers and distributors, instead of having theatres tied up by the exclusive use of certain devices obtainable only in connection with certain companies' productions."

A committee, composed of representatives of the five companies, will be appointed for the purpose of surveying all of the numerous recording and reproducing systems to determine upon standard devices if possible. These would be available to all producers, distributors and exhibitors on reasonable terms. The companies' statement follows:

"Recent inventions have developed many devices designed to be used in conjunction with motion pictures through which, in addition to the photographing of pictures and their subsequent projection upon the screen, sounds will be recorded and subsequently reproduced simultaneously with the projection of the picture. These devices vary greatly in nature, efficiency and expense of installation and operation and require different systems and devices both in the studio for recording sounds and in the theatre for reproducing sounds. The systems are such that the use of one for recording in connection with a film usually means that no other can be used for reproducing in connection with that film, so that if a producer of motion pictures adopts one recording system, his pictures can only be exhibited in theatres which have installed the corresponding reproducing system. The theatres with such reproducing systems cannot exhibit films made by producers using other recording systems, unless they put in reproducing apparatus for those systems.

"The adoption of different systems, by different producers and exhibitors would thus restrict competition in the picture business since the producers would be limited in their business to those theatres using their system, and theatres on the other hand, would be limited in their dealings to producers having the system corresponding with the theatres' device.

"Inasmuch as most of all of the systems now on the market are in an experimental stage and further development should follow the line tending toward standardization of devices to keep the market open to all, the five film companies will appoint a committee that will determine upon the system or systems best adapted for standardization in the motion picture industry. This committee will employ scientific experts and consult with governmental authorities and will make comprehensive experiments with all devices, now or hereafter made available.

"It is expected that whatever recording and reproducing devices are recommended by the Committee will be available on reasonable terms to all producers, distributors and exhibitors.

"All other companies are welcome to join in the investigation if they see fit and may each appoint a representative to work with the committee."

No Ban on Charlie Chaplin Films in Pasadena

WHEN C. V. Cowan, chief of the Pasadena Board of Review, declared to the world two weeks ago that Charlie Chaplin films must not be exhibited there he exceeded his authority. This is the opinion that the city directors of Pasadena, California, hold. They declared this week that the Chaplin films had not been banned in Pasadena. This is the fifth evidence in two weeks of a city administration refusing to ban the comedian's pictures.

Establishes New Credit Committee

Following action by the Atlanta Film Board of Trade in re-creating a Credit Committee, President Ben Y. Cammack of the board has announced the committee's personnel: John Ezell, Warner Brothers exchange, chairman; Dave Prince, Famous Players-Lasky branch; and H. D. Hearn, Liberty-Specialty Film Distributing Corporation's branch.

The new committee began functioning at once. Its duties will be to pass upon the credit of exhibitors in the territory, obtain information relative to sales and transfers of theatres and other data pertaining to contracts and films.

Publix, Ltd., Incorporated Under Federal Co. Charter

The Canada Gazette, the official newspaper of the Canadian Government, announces, February 19, the incorporation under a Federal company charter of the Publix Theatres Company, Limited, with headquarters in Toronto, Ont. It is noted that the stock of the company is of no par value and no authorized capitalization is announced. In theatre circles this is understood to be the entry of the Publix theatres organization into the Dominion.

Changes in Ufa Likely

Newspaper Publisher Seeks Financial Control of German Firm; Jacob and Davidson Resign

THE entrance of Alfred Hugenberg, German newspaper magnate, and the withdrawal of Siegmund Jacob and Paul Davidson, moving spirits of Ufa since its inception, were the principal new developments in the German film situation this week. Both moves are likely to be of considerable importance, the first affecting the finances and the second the personnel of Ufa.

Herr Hugenberg, according to newspaper dispatches, seeks to acquire virtual control of Ufa by obtaining for the concern a Government subsidy of 20,000,000 marks. This move is viewed with alarm in certain quarters as Hugenberg is a Nationalist political leader, and his opponents assert that the screen would be turned into a propaganda medium for this party.

Later dispatches stated that the budget committee of the Reichstag had resolved to ask the film industry to trim down its requests for subsidies to the lowest possible point. The industry seeks guarantees on export credits to enable German producers to finance the extension of credit to foreign buyers.

The German trade is, according to a report from our Berlin correspondent, Heinrich Fraenkel, considerably surprised by news of Siegmund Jacob's resignation from his position as chief of the Ufa renting organization which he has occupied for more than eight years. Incidentally Jacob is quitting his position in the Parufamet Directorate. Jacob has for many years been one of the most prominent personalities in the German trade. He left on a holiday trip for Switzerland a few days before the announcement was made. At the present moment everybody is rather in the dark as regards the direct reasons for Jacob's withdrawal as well as his future plans.

Another well-known personality quitting Ufa is Paul Davidson who, years ago, was Ufa's managing director and who lately has again been responsible for the concern's production. It has just been announced that Davidson is going to Hollywood in March, and it is generally anticipated that the well known production man's activities will, in future, be somehow or other linked up with either Jannings, Negri, or Lubitsch, all of whom can be considered to be his "discoveries." No official announcement, however, has been made in this matter.

Patheserial Unit Escapes Death in Explosion

MORE than a dozen persons, comprising Production Manager E. Oswald Brooks, Mrs. Brooks, Director Arch Heath, his assistants and cameramen, making the Patheserial, "The Crimson Flash," experienced a narrow escape from destruction in Charleston Harbor, February 15, when their launch, stuck in the mud, sounded a distress signal which was mistaken as a cue for the explosion of a schooner, which scene is one of the highlights in the final chapter of the serial.

The members of the company were stationed not ten yards from the dynamite-charged hull of the schooner and unable to change their position. The two men on board the schooner, who were to take care of its firing and exploding, fortunately only carried out half of their duties, the first igniting the kerosene-soaked schooner and "beating it." The second did not light the dynamite fuse two minutes after the boat was afire, as he heard the shouts of those aboard the launch, who escaped the peril through their own initiative and the help extended them by a near coast guard cutter. They had hardly reached a safe distance when the explosion occurred.

New Building Program at M-G-M Studio Initiated

As the first step in a new building program, that in new stages alone will represent an outlay of over $180,000, contracts have been let for what is claimed will be the largest motion picture set in the world, to be constructed shortly at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's studio in Culver City. Three stages, with a floor area of nearly an acre apiece, will be constructed during the coming year. Structural steel instead of wood will be the dominant material used in their construction. The first will cover an area of 135 by 311 feet with a floor space of 41,983 feet. Its height will be 45 feet. The new stage will be known as "stage fifteen" and it will be the fifteenth major or general utility stage at the Culver City studio.

"The Grey Hat" Changed to "On Ze Boulevard"

"The Grey Hat," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's story of Parisian life, has had a change of title and will henceforth be known as "On Ze Boulevard." Harry Millarde directed Lew Cody and Renee Adoree, the featured players in this one. Additional members of the cast art Roy D'Arcy, Dorothy Sebastian, Mack Swain and Anton Vaverka.

Gotham Signs A. Vaughn for "Sinews of Steel"

In the new Gotham production, "Sinews of Steel," announced as a "romance of the flaming forges," the leading feminine role will be played by Alberta Vaughn. The actress was orginally engaged for a previous Gotham picture, but a slight indisposition made her withdraw from the part rather than hold up production.

David Selman Will Direct "Paying the Price"

Harry Cohn, vice-president in charge of production for Columbia, has chosen David Selman to direct the company's forthcoming production, "Paying the Price." This will be Selman's second production for Columbia, for he also handled "Remember," a December release.

Saskatchewan Lifts Ban on Fight Pictures

Moving pictures of prize fights can now be shown in theatres of the Province of Saskatchewan as a result of the repeal of a clause in the Theatres and Cinematographs Act of the Province prohibiting the screening of a film or slide depicting a prize fight. Following this decision, Canadian Educational immediately introduced its Tunney-Dempsey fight picture in the Saskatchewan territory.

The Saskatchewan Legislature has adopted a measure, however, which provides for the censorship of all posters, lithographs, still photographs and advertisements for moving pictures and these can now be banned by the Saskatchewan censor.

Swedish Film Actress Is Signed by M-G-M

Advertisements of Le Mat-Metro-Goldwyn, Swedish distributors of M-G-M pictures, and announcements in Swedish trade papers, state that Mona Martenson, a well-known and beautiful screen actress of that country, has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and will come to America this summer. Other Scandinavian players and directors already at M-G-M include Greta Garbo, Lars Hanson, Karl Dane, Benjamin Christiansen and Victor Seastrom.

"Way of All Flesh" New Title of Jannings Film

Believing a passage from Samuel Butler's novel, "The Way of All Flesh," to be peculiarly applicable to a screen story, Paramount executives have decided to change the title of Emil Jannings' first American made picture from "The Man Who Forgot God" to "The Way of All Flesh." One of the pages from the Butler novel, which is said to epitomize the theme of the picture, will be used as the foreword of the screen play.

Donald Crisp Directing Leatrice Joy in "Vanity"

Donald Crisp, director and actor, has been assigned the direction of Leatrice Joy's new starring vehicle, "Vanity," which has just been put into work at the De Mille studio. Alan Hale and Charles Ray have the featured male roles.

Gaiety Pict. Signs Roy L. McCardell, Author

GAIETY PICTURES, INC., producers of a forthcoming series of two-reel domestic comedies featuring Taylor Holmes, has signed Roy L. McCardell, author and humorist, as continuity writer.

Roy L. McCardell

The first three stories to be produced by Gaiety are now in the hands of McCardell, who has already written the scenario for the first. Production on it is expected to s'art immediately.

NewsReel & Comedies for M-G-M

Hearst to Produce 104 Issues Each Year; Announces "Our Gang," Chase and Max Davidson Series

Hal Roach

Nicholas M. Schenck

ANNOUNCEMENT is made this week by Nicholas M. Schenck, executive vice-president of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, of the creation of the M-G-M news reel, to be produced by the Hearst organization, and the affiliation of Hal Roach as the first steps in the establishment of a short subject department. The news reel, issued twice a week, will be given world-wide distribution, and, at the present time, three series of two-reel comedies are planned, one with "Our Gang," one with Charles Chase and the third will star Max Davidson.

A brand new idea will be injected into the news reel, says Mr. Schenck, and this short subject will be developed along new lines. In addition to this product, M-G-M will release six "Epic Western" comedies and an equal number of fun-films starring celebrities.

"We have been moved to act by the convictions of hundreds of exhibitors that their audiences whose patronage at the box-office has established the entertainment superiority of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer features will welcome the opportunity to see in one theatre a complete program of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer quality throughout," stated Mr. Schenck.

"We are proud to announce the affiliation of Hal Roach and M-G-M as the first indication of the type of short reels that this organization will deliver to theatres. In line with its high standard in all branches, M-G-M has obtained in Hal Roach an affiliation with a man who is acknowledged throughout the world as the leader of all comedy and short subject producers. Thus in one initial move M-G-M assures theatre owners and public of the greatest and most comprehensive short picture activity ever known in the history of the industry."

"For years I have been experimenting with the short feature and have raised its quality to a plane which has won recognition from both the industry and the public," said Mr. Roach. "Just as the Act-in-One was once a space filler on the vaudeville bill so the short subject was once upon a time considered. It has been my life-long work to bring the short reel into its rightful place of importance. Today it is with gratification that we note the true feature and drawing value of these pictures which are now billed in all advertising as equal to other parts of the program and in many instances even above them! In affiliating with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer I am undertaking a policy of expansion that will thrust all precedent aside, creating a Short Subject product that will in every way be worthy of the high standard set by this aggressive organization, providing a well-oiled feather to make the M-G-M Lion a Laughing Lion."

Additional announcements will be made concerning other short product, names of established value with the public and personalities of importance in the short picture field.

New England Building Is Active

Many Theatres Planned and Others in Construction; Grainger to Start Memorial Theatre—No Let Up

THERE is no cessation in building activity throughout the New England territory. A site was purchased this week and construction work will start within ten days on the third new theatre for Medford, Mass. The latest addition to the number will be located on High Street, West Medford Square, will have a seating capacity of 1,500, and will be financed by Haverhill, Mass., men. Howard A. Goodspeed of Boston has prepared the plans and a lease of the house has been signed by I. K. E. Prager of Boston. Pictures and vaudeville will be the policy.

Work started this week on the demolition of the old Medford rum distillery in Medford Square, on which site Samuel Woolfson will at once start erection of an 1,800 to 2,000-seat theatre. It is also expected that James R. Grainger will start erection of his memorial theatre near his old home in the South Medford-Somerville section, within a month.

Interests believed to be backed by the Publix organization, are planning a new theatre at Rockland, Me., to seat 1,800. A site has been purchased in the section known as the "Brook," surveys have been made and plans are in preparation. Local capital is behind the construction of the building.

Community Theatres, Inc., of Providence have secured a theatre site in Mansfield, Mass., for a community type theatre and it is understood that plans will be drawn within the next two weeks.

Architect Ralph Testa of Boston has prepared plans for a theatre in the Auburndale section of Newton, Mass., for John Chiniell, to seat about 1,500.

Garden Theatre, Inc., Springfield, Mass., has been organized with $30,000 capital. Harry Cohen, Louis Cohn and Austin M. Pardee are the incorporators. Messrs. Cohen and Cohn recently acquired the Garden Theatre and the company is organized to operate it.

Exterior construction work on the new theatre in Plainville, Conn., erected by the Sequassen Corp., is completed and interior work is under way. The new playhouse is expected to open inside a month.

Stoughton Theatre Co., Boston, has incorporated with 1,000 no par shares. Incorporators are Catherine D. Boyle, Margaret L. Carroll and Marjorie C. O'Brien.

Paramount Inaugurates Stock Company

New Policy; Includes All Artists But Stars; Was Organized to Develop Actors' Screen Talent

WITH the idea of developing to the fullest extent the screen possibilities of its players Famous Players this week announced the establishment of a stock company which is to include all players appearing in Paramount pictures with the exception of its stars; new players will also be acquired. B. P. Schulberg is credited with the new move which has the approval of Jesse Lasky.

The stock company has as its primary duty the task of keeping the contract players busy so that their screen possibilities will have the opportunity to develop, Schulberg stated. When there is no role in any of the productions being made at the Paramount studio which particularly suits them, they are to be loaned to other producing companies. In this manner, they will be cast in a varied type of roles calculated to give full play to their talents, Schulberg said.

The Paramount Stock Company, as now constituted, includes the following 60 players: Richard Arlen, George Bancroft, Warner Baxter, Noah Beery, Charlot Bird, Sally Blane, El Brendel, Mary Brian, Clive Brook, Louise Brooks, William Collier, Jr., Chester Conklin, Ricardo Cortez, Lil Dagover, Josephine Dunn, Susan Fleming, Douglas Gilmore, Walter Goss, Iris Gray, Lawrence Gray, James Hall, Sterling Holloway, Neil Hamilton, Einar Hanson, Marion Ivy Harris, Raymond Hatton, Doris Hill, Ione Holmes, Betty Jewel, Tom Kennedy, Donald Keith, Sue Kilbourne, Irma Kornelia, Blanche LeClaire, Jocelyn Lee, Jack Luden, Ginette Maddie, Arlette Marchal, Alyce Mills, Marietta Millner, Margaret Morris, Jeanne Navelle, Guy Oliver, Mona Palma, Nancy Phillips, William Powell, Imboden Parrish, Margaret Quimby, Charles Rogers, Larry Semon, Ann Sheridan, Edward "Gunboat" Smith, Ford Sterling, Philip Strange, Iris Stuart, Lotus Thompson, Thelma Todd and Vera Voronina, Fay Wray and Gary Cooper.

'U' Schedules Spring Jewels

Eleven of Fourteen for Current Half-Year Now Ready for Screen; Remaining Three in Work

WITH fourteen Jewels productions scheduled for release from February 27 until the beginning of the 1927-28 season, Universal at this mid-season point of the releasing schedule, has eleven of the fourteen completed and ready for issuing to exhibitors. Almost all of them have been pre-released and on the showing of two of them, "The Claw," and "Beware of Widows," Universal officials state that they are justified in speaking in box-office terms when referring to their value.

The pictures and the months during which they will be released follow: "The Love Thrill," a new Laura La Plante Jewel, "May; "Taxi, Taxi," a farce comedy co-featuring Edward Everett Horton and Marian Nixon, April; "Held by the Law," Edward Laemmle's new mystery melodrama, April; "The Sensation Seekers," with Billie Dove and Huntley Gordon, March; "The Mystery Club," with Matt Moore, Edith Roberts, Warner Oland and Mildred Harris, March; "Perch of the Devil," made by King Baggott and co-starring Mae Busch and Pat O'Malley, March; "Down the Stretch," with Marian Nixon, Robert Agnew, Jack Daugherty and Otis Harlan, May; "The Wrong Mr. Wright," starring Jean Hersholt, February; "Hey, Hey, Cowboy," a Hoot Gibson Jewel, April; "The Prairie King," in production with Hoot Gibson starred, May.

Twelve F. B. O.'s in March

One Gold Bond, Two Westerns, O'Hara Vehicle, and the Rest Comedies and Novelties

FILM BOOKING OFFICES will release twelve subjects during March, consisting of one Gold Bond production, two Westerns, one from George O'Hara, two "Wisecracker," one Standard, one Bowers Novelty comedy, two Alice cartoons and two Krazy Kat cartoons. "Moulders of Men" is the title of the Gold Bond production starring Conway Tearle and Margaret Morris. John Chapman Hilder wrote the story and Ralph Ince directed.

"The Sonora Kid" with Tom Tyler starred is the title of one Western and the other is "Terror of the Bar X" with Bob Custer in the stellar role. Peggy Montgomery appears opposite Tom Tyler, and his picture was directed by Bob De Lacy; Ruby Blaine has the feminine lead in the Custer vehicle which Percy Pembroke directed.

"Is That Nice," written by W. A. Cinclair, is the title of the George O'Hara vehicle which was directed by Del Andrews. Doris Hill plays opposite the star.

"Survival of the Fattest" and "Cry and Get It" are the titles of the current "Wisecracker" two-reelers. Al Cooke, Kit Guard, Lorraine Eason and Thelma Hill are featured in these comedies, which Del Andrews directed.

"Shoosh" is the title of Bowers Novelty Comedy number eight; "Old Tin Sides" is the title of the Standard Comedy. This series feature the fat men trio, Fatty Alexander, Fat Carr and Kewpie Ross. Gil Pratt is the director.

Four one-reel cartoons make up the balance of the March releases. "Alice the Collegiate" and "Alice in the Alps" are of the Alice Cartoon series. The Krazy Kat Cartoons are "Stomach Trouble" and "The Rug Fiend." Walt Disney is the artist for the former series and Bill Nolan for the latter.

Harry Scott Appoints New Pathe Branch Managers

Harry Scott, general sales manager of Pathe, announces his appointment of new Pathe branch office managers in Dallas, Philadelphia and Oklahoma City, effective on February 21st. James L. McKinney, in charge at the Oklahoma City office, has been transferred from this post to the managership of the Dallas branch where he replaces Oscar Morgan, resigned.

Mr. McKinney's former post is now filled by A. A. Renfro, promoted from the rank of salesman, which rank he held for several years at the Kansas City branch.

H. W. Lewis, assistant branch manager at Philadelphia for a number of years, has been appointed chief at that exchange, replacing Miles Gibbons, resigned. Succeeding Mr. Lewis as assistant branch manager, is C. U. Martin, former salesman at the Philadelphia branch and recently acting in that capacity in New Haven.

Elinor Patterson, Nun of "Miracle," Signed by "U"

Carl Laemmle has signed Elinor Patterson for Universal pictures after seeing her in her role of the Nun in "The Miracle." He immediately decided Miss Patterson was an actress who had splendid possibilities for the screen. Miss Patterson, and her father, Joseph Medill Patterson, of the Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News and owner of Liberty Magazine, went to Universal City for a screen test at the invitation of the Universal president. The test proved to be so satisfactory that a contract was entered into immediately. Mr. Laemmle intends to give Miss Patterson an intensive training in picture work with her stardom as an eventual outcome.

Columbia to Star Hobart Bosworth in "Blood Ship"

The first important announcement relative to the coming season's plans of Columbia Pictures was given out this week when Harry Cohn, Columbia vice-president in charge of production, mentioned the acquisition by his company of "The Blood Ship," a sea story by Norman Springer.

The story is to go into work immediately and will form one of the important features on Columbia's new program. Hobart Bosworth has been signed to play the leading role—that of a shanghaied sailor.

Rossman on MacCreagh Expedition to Abyssinia

ONE of the first moves of S. Barrett McCormick, promoted last week to the editorship of Pathe Review, was to obtain exclusive film rights for the Gordon MacCreagh Expedition and to add to the staff Earl Rossman, author, explorer and producer of "Kivalina of the Icelands." Mr. Rossman sailed last week with the expedition, which contemplates securing rare animals and the truth of some of the legends connected with the unexplored land. The party will be gone about six months and will go inland from Jibuti in French Somaliland to the Abyssinian capital where they will be extended a welcome by the Abyssianian ruler and will be lent assistance in the outfitting of natives.

Edward Sloman Gets New Contract from Universal

Director Edward Sloman has affixed his signature to a new contract with Universal. Under the new arrangement his first picture will be "Lea Lyon," from the European stage success by Alexander Brody. The name of this production will be changed before release. In it Mary Philbin will be starred with the other featured role in the hands of Ivan Moskine, the star of "Michael Strogoff." This is his first role at Universal City.

W. B. Plan "Irish Hearts" for May McAvoy

May McAvoy's next feature for the Warner Brothers will be "Irish Hearts," based on a story by Walter Morosco, author of "Why Girls Go Back Home," a recent Warner release. Bess Meredyth is scheduled to do the scenario for the production which is to be made by Lloyd Bacon upon the completion of "Matinee Ladies." "Irish Hearts" was originally announced by the Warner Brothers as a starring vehicle for Dolores Costello.

James Cruze Will Direct "Beau Sabreur"

"Beau Sabreur," Percival Christopher Wren's sequel to "Beau Geste," which Paramount acquired shortly after the production of "Beau Geste," will be made by James Cruze, according to a recent announcement from Paramount. Production on this special will get under way on June 6th. The director has just finished "The Big Sneeze," a Wallace Beery starring vehicle adapted from the Ziegfeld production, "Louis the Fourteenth.

E. L. Alperson New W. B. Division Manager

E. L. Alperson, former branch manager of the Kansas City exchange of Warner Bros., has been appointed division manager with supervision over Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis. He started as a salesman in Omaha, and was later made branch manager of Omaha. His promotion is said to be due to his excellent results achieved while managing the Kansas City branch.

Four M-G-M Mar. Releases

"Lovers," "Slide, Kelly, Slide," "Frisco Sally Levy" and "Heaven on Earth" Offered

METRO-GOLDWYN-MAYER'S four features destined for release during March include a baseball comedy, "Slide, Kelly, Slide," a Ramon Novarro vehicle, "Lovers," "Frisco Sally Levy" and a story of post-war France, "Heaven on Earth." This latter production is scheduled for March 5 and the comedy revolving around baseball on March 12.

William Haines acts for the first time in a starring position in "Slide, Kelly, Slide." Among the featured members of the cast which Edward Sedgwick directed are Sally O'Neil in the feminine lead, "Bob" and "Irish" Meusel, Tony Lazezeri and Perry O'Brien, prominent diamond celebrities, and Harry Carey and Karl Dane. Many of the scenes were made in New York and St. Louis during last fall's World Series games.

Alice Terry plays opposite Ramon Novarro in "Lovers," which is based on "The World and His Wife," a play by Charles Frederick Nirdlinger. John M. Stahl directed the pair whose support came from Edward Martindel, George K. Arthur, Holmes Herbert, Roy D'Arcy, Lillian Lighton and Edward Connelly.

In addition to her featured role in "Slide, Kelly, Slide," Sally O'Neil is the starring player in "Frisco Sally Levy," William Beaudine's first directorial effort for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Charles Delaney portrays the leading male role. Roy D'Arcy, Tenen Holtz, Turner Savage, Leon Holmes, Kate Price and Helen Lavine contribute supporting roles.

"Heaven on Earth" has Renee Adoree playing opposite Conrad Nagel. Phil Rosen directed the story, an original by himself which Harvey Gates adapted to the screen. Included in the cast are Julia Swayne Gordon, Gwen Lee, Marcia Mannon and Pat Harrigan.

During the months of April and May, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's releases will include "Mr. Wu," "The Unknown," "Tillie the Toiler," "On Ze Boulevard," "Captain Salvation" and a comedy of training camp life, as yet untitled.

Complete "Becky" Cast; Film Under Way

With the addition of Mack Swain to the cast of "Becky," the new Cosmopolitan production now in production at the Metro-Goldywn-Mayer studio, the list of players for the story by Raynor Selig is now complete.

The title role is being portrayed by Sally O'Neil, and Owen Moore has the leading male role. It will be produced with a number of lavish settings and is now in work under the direction of John P. McCarthy. Gertrude Olmstead and Harry Crocker are also in the cast.

F. N. Eastern Div. Winner

Manager Smith's Salesmen Victors in Month Sales Contest; Silver Loving Cup Awarded

FIRST NATIONAL'S Eastern sales division is the victor in the First National month sales drive which occurred in January. A. W. Smith, Jr., heads the division which challenged the Western, Southern and Canadian sales forces, and offered a silver loving cup as the prize which now remains with the challengers. It is now at the New York Home Offices but with the public announcement of the winner, will be tendered to the following Eastern Division managers for display at their exchanges: Thomas B. Spry, Eastern Division Manager, Boston; F. J. A. McCarthy, Buffalo; M. H. Keleher, New Haven; W. J. Heenan, Philadelphia; J. C. Vergesslieh, New Jersey; Robert Smeltzer, Washington, Jules Levy, New York, and J. C. Bullwinkel, Albany.

The Eastern Division's challenge was issued at the last sales convention, held in Chicago. According to Sales Manager Smith a similar challenge is slated to be offered at the coming sales convention, which will be held at Burbank in the spring.

It was pointed out by Secretary-Treasurer Spring as a noteworthy fact that three of the recently-named charter members of the K. O. Club, First National's exclusive sales fraternity, come from Eastern Division exchanges. The three K. O. Club members are Max Pincus, of Buffalo; A. P. Bibber, of Boston, and F. J. Leonard of Philadelphia. One of the first marks of tribute to these men is their invitation as the guests of Mr. Spring to the testimonial dinner given February 23rd, at the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston, to Eastern Division Manager Thomas Spry in honor of his recent promotion from Boston exchange manager.

The standing of the four territorial divisions at the end of the First National Month Drive were: Eastern, Southern, Western and Canadian.

"U" Buys Liberty Story as 1927-28 "Thriller"

Universal has secured the screen rights of "The Small Bachelor," the P. G. Wodehouse serial which recently ran in Liberty Magazine. The story is to be adapted for production as a Universal Jewel with an all-star cast for release during the next season.

Metro-Goldwyn Pict. Corp. Declares Dividend

The Board of Directors has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾% on the preferred stock of Metro-Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, payable March 15th, 1927, to stockholders of record at the close of business on February 26th, 1927.

Famous Has 19 in Work

Twelve Productions Under Way at West Coast Studio and Five Being Filmed at Eastern Plant

THE spring production drive at the Famous Players East and West Coast studios is under way; twelve productions are in work at the Hollywood plant with two more scheduled for start of camera work this week and the Long Island studio is busy with five pictures in various stages of filming.

At the West Coast studio, Pola Negri has just launched work unon her new vehicle, "The Woman on Trial." This is the screen adaptation of one of Ernest Vajda's stage dramas, which Mauritz Stiller is directing. Ricardo Cortez is playing the featured male lead.

Gary Cooper, Paramount's new Western luminary, has just begun his starring career, heading the cast of "Arizona Bound," which John Waters is directing. Betty Jewel has the featured feminine lead, with Jack Dougherty in the "heavy" role.

The other pictures at the West Coast studio include "Afraid to Love," starring Florence Vidor; "Beautiful Women," starring Raymond Griffith; Eddie Cantor's "Special Delivery," Clara Bow's "Rough House Rosie," "Wings," the air service epic; "The Whirlwind of Youth," with Lois Moran; Wallace Beery's "The Big Sneeze," being directed by James Cruze; "Too Many Crooks," with Mildred Davis and Lloyd Hughes; "Fashions for Women," Esther Ralston's first starring vehicle; "The Way of All Flesh," Emil Jannings' first American-made picture; "Ritzy," the Elinor Glyn picture starring Betty Bronson, with James Hall in the leading male role, and "Senorita," starring Bebe Daniels.

At the Eastern Studio, the pictures in work are "Rubber Heels," Ed Wynn's first film comedy; "Knockout Reilly," starring Richard Dix; "Cabaret," Gilda Gray's new vehicle; "The Telephone Girl," a Herbert Brenon production, and "The Timid Soul," starring W. C. Fields.

Among those productions scheduled for filming are three which will be started on March seventh. These will be Thomas Meighan in "We Are All Gamblers," Malcolm St. Clair directing and Greta Nissen in the leading feminine role. Herbert Brenon's "The Devil Is Alive" and Richard Dix's "The Roughneck Gentleman." There may also be a fourth on that day.

Raymond Griffith's first starring picture in the East has been delayed owing to the star's being detained on the Coast. He is expected in the East in the near future and work on the production, as yet untitled, will get under way with Frank Tuttle directing.

Warners List New Films

"Heart of Maryland" for Dolores Costello, May McAvoy in "Irish Hearts" and "The Climbers"

WARNER BROTHERS' production reached its zenith this week coincident with the arrival of Jack Warner, head of production, from New York. At the present time the company has four pictures in process of filming, four specials and six winners are in preparation and new productions are being lined up for the Warner stars.

The "Tracked by the Police" unit is on location in Arizona and will remain about three weeks. Rin-Tin-Tin is starred in this production and Virginia Brown Faire is replacing Frances Lee in the leading feminine role because of the illness of the latter. Ray Enright is directing.

Director Byron Haskins is almost finished with direction of "Matinee Ladies," May McAvoy's first starring production for Warners. The story is by Albert Howson and Sidney R. Buckman and Graham Baker fashioned the script. Dolores Costello's latest starring picture, "A Million Bid," is in the last stages of filming. The film is based on the play by Barryl Francis Zanmck, and Anthony Coldeway wrote the scenario.

"The Brute" company has returned from filming location shots and is now making exteriors. Monte Blue is starred under direction of Irving Cummings. W. Douglas Newton wrote the story and the scenario is by Harvey Gates.

Preparations are being made for the filming of four specials and six winners, among them "The Climbers," Irene Rich's next starring vehicle. This is the Clyde Fitch play which Tom Gibson is adapting, and which will be directed by Paul S. Stein. Forrest Stanley has been assigned the leading male role opposite Miss Rich. Bess Meredyth is preparing the scenario for May McAvoy's next picture, "Irish Hearts," which will follow "Matinee Ladies." Lloyd Bacon will wield the megaphone.

James T. Donahue has been signed to prepare the script for Dolores Costello's next production, "The Heart of Maryland." Alan Crosland will direct the picture.

Millard Webb to Direct "Naughty But Nice"

Millard Webb will direct Colleen Moore throughout her new feature, "Naughty But Nice," on which filming is scheduled to begin within a few days. Webb has just finished directing "An Affair of the Follies," a forthcoming First National release. He is now spending several days with Carey Wilson, who is engrossed with the script for the Moore vehicle. Mervyn Le Roy, will again be comedy constructor with the production unit and is now conferring with Wilson on the scenario. The only supporting player to date is Donald Reed.

Lewis Stone Set for Lead in F. N.'s "His Son"

The leading role in "His Son," the tentative title of "Lorenzo the Magnificent," Garrett Fort's Liberty Magazine story which Sam Rork will produce for First National, will be played by Lewis Stone, who has just finished working in "The Notorious Lady," another Rork production in which the other principals are Barbara Bedford and Ann Rork. Work has just been started under Francis Dillon's direction.

Appearing in "His Son" with Mr. Stone will be Lilyan Tashman, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., E. J. Ratcliff and Andre Beranger. Tony Gaudio will be cameraman, and others on the Rork staff include Bob Ross, assistant director; Jack Okey, technical and art director; Frank Lawrence, film editor; and Ben Singer, production manager. Jane Murfin is responsible for the adaptation and continuity for "His Son."

"The Golden Calf" Story Rights Go to First Nat'l

The story rights to Aaron Davis' story, "The Golden Calf," have been secured by First National. The picture is to be put into production as soon as a star and director can be assigned. Work on the story was speeded up following the visit of Florence Strauss, First National scenario chief, to the company's studio at Burbank. John McCormick, West Coast production manager, is now considering several actresses as possibilities for the leading role. The story concerns a stenographer who does not realize her worth until she wins a "golden calf" contest and is made to realize that she has the best pair of calves in town.

Exploitation ranges from beauty contests to tie-ups with national hosiery advertisers. The Eastern and Coast exploitation departments of First National are now thinking up stunts, it is reported.

Allan Hale Acting Again in Leatrice Joy's "Vanity"

After two years of experience in the director's chair, Alan Hale has returned to acting before the camera and will be seen in a supporting role in "Vanity," starring Leatrice Joy. He declares that during his work of directing other people he learned more about acting than he ever did before the camera. Donald Crisp is directing "Vanity" from a scenario by Douglas Z. Doty. His return to the screen is only temporary, for his contract with the DeMille studio calls for him to direct several other productions during the coming year.

"The Man From Hardpan" to Be Issued on March 6th

"The Man From Hardpan," a new Leo Maloney starring production for Pathe, is announced for release by Pathe on March 6th. Ford L. Beebe, author of many of the previous Maloney feature successes, also wrote the story for "The Man From Hardpan." In the latest Maloney vehicle, the star is supported by a cast including Eugenia Gilbert, his leading lady, Rosa Gore, Murdock MacQuarrie, Paul Hurst, Ben Corbett and Albert Hart.

THE CHECK-UP

Weekly Edition of Exhibitors' Box Office Reports

Productions listed are new pictures on which reports were not available previously.

KEY—The first column following the name of the feature represents the number of managers that have reported the picture as "Poor." The second column gives the number who considered it "Fair"; the third the number who considered it "Good"; and the fourth column, those who considered it "Big."

The fifth column is a percentage giving the average rating on that feature, obtained by the following method: A report of 'Poor" is rated at 20%; one of "Fair," 40%; "Good," 70%; and "Big," 100%. The percentage rating of all of these reports on one picture are then added together and divided by the number of reports, giving the average percentage—a figure which represents the consensus of opinion on that picture. In this way exceptional cases, reports which might be taken alone, and such individual differences of opinion are averaged up.

For ratings on current and older releases see MOTION PICTURE NEWS—first issue of each month.

Estelle Bradley Leading Lady in "Perfect Day"

Estelle Bradley, feminine lead in much of the product turned out from the Educational studio, appears as the leading lady in "A Perfect Day," an Educational-Cameo comedy in which George Davis and Phil Dunham are featured.

Four of "Mike and Ike" Comedies Completed

"Mike and Ike," the new comedy series on the Stern Bros. list, is now well into production at the Hollywood studio of the comedy producers. Four of the two-reelers, co-starring Charles King and Charles Dorety, have already been completed and received in New York. A fifth is now in the cutting stage and sixth is in work. The four new comedies are "Dancing Fools," "All for an Uncle," "Dates for Two" and "There's a Will." Among the feminine coterie supplied King and Doherty are Ethlyne Clain, Thelma Daniels, Margery Mareel, Madalynne Field, and the Angus Twins, Mary and Margy. Frank Gorby is doing the direction.

Rube Goldberg, creator of "Mike and Ike," is now conferring with the Sterns. It is said that he is learning studio methods with a view of devoting more of his time to the screen in the future.

Pathe Lists Rogers Film

First of "Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad" Series; Roach, Sennett Comedies Scheduled

THE first of the Will Rogers series of one reel pictures with the general title "With Will Rogers, Our Unofficial Ambassador Abroad," and the specific caption, "With Will Rogers in Dublin," heads the list of Pathe releases for the first week in March. Also scheduled for distribution are a Mack Sennett comedy, "Smith's New Home," "A One-Mamma Man," a Hal Roach contribution, "The Rival Sex," a Grantland Rice Sportlight, Pathe Review and Topics of the Day No. 10, Chapter six of the Patheserial "On Guard," "Taking the Air," an Aesop's Fable and the regular two issues of Pathe News.

There are twelve subjects in the Rogers series and the first describes the monologist's personally conducted tour through Dublin; views of Trinity College, and part of the Irish army are incorporated. Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Mary Ann Jackson have the principal roles in the Smith Family comedy which was directed by Alf Goulding. It is a story of the difficulties besetting the man who buys his home on the installment plan.

Charles Chase is starred and Eugenia Gilbert is featured in the Roach comedy; Gale Henry, Vernon Dent and Burr McIntosh make up the supporting cast. James Parrott directed under supervision of F. Richard Jones. "The Rival Sex" proves how each year the female beats down the male lead in various sports, hockey, golf, archery, rowing, etc.

Pathe Review No. 10 contains "The Vanguard of Night"—Camera portraits of the sky at twilight; "Korea Today": A Pathecolor unit dealing with farm life in the rural districts of Korea. Planting rice, the manna of the starving millions in the cities; "Wild, Wild Babies": Beginning a series with animal actors, titled, "Animal Crackers." Little stories of zoo life, with snappy titles and a clever plot.

Topics of the Day No. 10 present the latest wit and humor culled from the press of the world. "Taking the Air" is the animated cartoon comedy contribution of the Aesop's Film Fables series. Pathe News issues Nos. 22 and 23 depict last minute world news events with international scope.

Educat'ls March Releases

Six Two-Reel, Two One-Reel Comedies and Four Animated Cartoons Scheduled

EDUCATIONAL'S list of March releases includes six two-reel, two one-reel comedies and four animated cartoons. "Big Boy," the three-year-old star, is featured in "Grandpa's Boy," a release for the first week of the month. Charles Lamont directed. Another release for the same month is "Hot Lightning," a Mermaid comedy with a cast including Clem Beauchamp, Phil Dunham, and George Davis, with Lucille Hutton in the leading role. Stephen Roberts directed.

Lloyd Hamilton's latest is "Somebody's Fault," with Estelle Bradley as his leading lady, and Norman Taurog as director. "Here Comes Precious" is the newest Jimmie Adams comedy, with Vera Steadman in the leading feminine role. Earle Rodney directed. Al. St. John is seen in "Roped In," a Mermaid comedy which has Lucille Hutton in the leading feminine role. Charles Lamont directed.

"Cash and Carry," a Christie Comedy featuring Neal Burns, is the initial two-reel comedy to be directed by Arvid Gillstrom under his new contract with the Christies. Edna Marion is Neal's leading lady, while Eddie Baker and Billy Engle head the supporting cast. "A Perfect Day," a one-reel Cameo Comedy, features George Davis and Phil Dunham in a travesty on girls' boarding schools. Phil Dunham is featured in "First Prize," another Cameo film.

The Bruce Scenic Novelty for the month is titled "Hawaii From the Car Window—Black Sand, The Harbor Beacon." "Felix the Cat Sees 'Em in Season," and "Felix the Cat in Barn Yarns," the two animated cartoon comedies from the Pat Sullivan Studios, picture the black cat in some new antics.

"Climbing Into Cloudland" is the new Lyman H. Howe's Hodge-Podge, and the Life Cartoon Comedies series, which is edited by Robert E. Sherwood, editor of Life, will have "Local Talent" and "Ruling the Rooster" for showing.

New Smith Comedy Finished at Mack Sennett's Studio

Another of the Jimmie Smith domestic comedies, which Mack Sennett is producing for release through Pathe, has just been completed by Alf Goulding. The new two-reeler is called "Smith's Candy Shop" and gives the ups and downs of the candy making business. Raymond McKee, Mary Ann Jackson, Ruth Hiatt and Omar, the dog, are the featured players. A. H. Giebler and Jimmy Starr wrote the titles.

The title of Ben Turpin's new offering is "Love's Languid Lure." Peggy Montgomery, Jack Cooper and Irving Bacon were coached by Lige Conley, now a director.

Alma Bennett Returns to Sennett Comedy Work

After sixteen weeks of work at other producing studios, Alma Bennett has returned to fulfill her contractual obligations at the Mack Sennett studio, where she is now continuing her appearances in Pathe comedies. She is at present engaged with a new comedy written around the recent Catalina Channel swim.

Pathe Sets "Princess on B'way" for March 13th

"The Princess on Broadway," a feature which Pathe is distributing, is scheduled for release on March 13th. Pauline Garon enacts the title role. Other players who have much to do during the unreeling of the feature are Johnnie Walker and Dorothy Dwan.

Opinions on Current Productions

“Ask Dad”

(Educational-Cameo Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

LEWIS SARGENT has just been turned down by his girl; but, with commendable philosophy, that does not discourage him, for he is looking for a successor. He finds her when he absent-mindedly drives his car into a department store and emerges with a lot of women's clothes and a girl in the car beside him. Starting for her home his white trousers are splashed with mud by a passing truck. He parks his car and waits for his trousers to be cleaned. But traffic cops are no respecters of youths minus trousers if they stop their cars near hydrants. Consequently, Lewis drives around the block to find the tailor shop closed for the day. What would you do under such conditions? Lewis gives a pedestrian—he happens to be the girl's father—a lift and when the car emerges from a tunnel Lewis is wearing father's trousers. He didn't ask dad, he simply helped himself. Alright—if—on arriving at the house of the girl, father had not been the passenger robbed of his all too essential trousers.

The only thing to be done is to persuade the butler to kidnap the girl, so Lewis may shine as a rescuer and get father's approbation. The conspiracy works out somewhat according to schedule. I believe that Lewis did get the girl in the end. Director Sam Newfield saw to that.

Lewis Sargent, Audrey Ferris, Robert Burns and Henry Murdock are the quartette who tell the tale. It has a number of things to recommend it.

“Drama De Luxe”

(Educational-Lupino Lane Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

NORMAN TAUROG, who wrote and directed this picture for the English comedian, who was formerly in “The Follies,” has done both jobs well. He has Lane, monocle and all, arriving on top of a freight car, but on an automobile seat and handling the freight car brake as though it were the steering wheel of a motor car. Fired from the train, Lane places his victims—they are two by this time, as the town constable has come up, beneath the waterpipe. Then he pulls the rope which releases the flood. Not such a bad start. Then follows a job with a small town theatrical troupe. First, he posts bills—and how. Then as general utility man in the olio. As a member of an acrobatic act Lane has full opportunity for falling all over the place. Of course, there is heart interest. Lane and Kathryn McGuire provide that. She is a member of the troupe and Lupino rescues her. Exeunt both on a freight for parts unknown.

Speed and variety are essential to success for a picture of this kind and “Drama de Luxe” has both in full measure. Lane is always in some sort of scrape, to his own discomfiture, but the delight of the audience.

Glenn Cavender completes the quartette of players. The piece is well staged, one effective scene being in the opry house, showing the reaction on the audience of Lane's antics.

“Petering Out”

(Bray Cartoon—One Reel)

COULD you paper the walls of your house with the assistance of a cartoon pup? Artist Walter Lantz tries just that and the result is far from successful. But then, again, you cannot blame his miserable effort on the pup, especially when that quadruped happens to be Pete, the pup who barks and struts his way with such amiable grace through the Bray Hot Dog Cartoons. Lantz summons Pete to him in much the same manner as Fleischer does his Ko-Ko. Armed with brush and paste and paper of a most captivating hue (black and white), they make their initial bow as paperhangers. At least, it seems that they are novices at the game, for they mess things up in an individual and inextricable fashion.

Pete, the Pup, is some pup, undoubtedly. His pantomime and the work of Lantz has our approval.—RAYMOND GANLY.

“A Sorority Mixup”

(Bray-Sunkist Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

A PEEP into the activities of the girl students of Yaboola College—co-eds, malicious, sweet, and otherwise—flit across the scene, as do also the figures of Buddy Messenger, a quite hefty dame, built along the lines of a Babe London, Buddy's sweetheart, Ann Porter, and the educated monkey, “Mr. X,” who hovers in the background in readiness for any coup d'etat to assist his friend, Buddy. Because the affections of Ann and the heavy one happen to be centered upon Buddy, a natural and excusable dislike for each other comes between the two girls. The aforesaid fat girl wields the balance of power, at least in the first half of the picture, for it comes to pass that Ann must be initiated into a sorority, with the mistress of ceremonies none other than our plump, but capable friend.

In her dire predicament, Ann, who is busy receiving punishment from numerous sources upon the advent of her initiation, is aided by Buddy, who assumes her place and clothes. Comedy wells up in the scenes where the poor male, in feminine attire, is compelled to kiss nearly a score of females. They command the supposed female to undress and don a bathing suit and their imperative tones are backed up by vicious-looking racquets. However, at the crucial moment, the girls are foiled through the entrance of “Mr. X” and his taking of their clothes.

There is humor of a sort packed into this two-reeler, portraying as it does the pursuit of the male, a helter-skelter initiation and its comic developments and its “Campus Flirt” atmosphere. The decorativeness of the Sunkist bathing girls is very much in evidence. Scheduled for March 10.

“Be My Wife”

(Universal-Stern Bros.—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

CHARLES KING is married. Among other reasons for his wife nagging him is his diffidence in asking for a raise. Being habitually late to business, he is afraid to look for a raise, rather is he fearful about holding his job. The arrival of the good looking servant girl to collect her wages creates the impression in the boss' mind that she is Charley's wife. He invites himself to dinner. Thus Charley is compelled to get the maid to pretend to be his wife and get the dinner. That would be all right if she had not a burly admirer and also if Charley's real wife did not come snooping around.

Something doing every minute of the two reels with more than the usual amount of crockery broken. How movie actors stand the amount of physical punishment scenarists and directors inflict on them in two-reelers is a never-ceasing source of wonder. They are veritable gluttons for punishment. And every disaster is good for laughs by the audience who are not suffering vicariously but really enjoying it all because they are on the safe side of the camera. “Be My Wife” is good roughhouse entertainment.

Francis Corby wielded the megaphone. You may see it March 23.

“He Couldn't Help It”

(F. B. O.—Charley Bowers—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WHEN you can get them laughing in a projection room at a trade showing of a picture it is fair to assume you have them going. That is what happens invariably when Charley Bowers' two-reelers are shown and “He Couldn't Help It” is no exception

This time it is the story of a lost vaudeville trick dog. He is the mainstay of the act, so when he disappears the offering falls flat. Then the search. One day, at the boarding house table, Charley's sweetheart, Corinne Powers, sneaks a frankfurter, bread and other edibles up to his room. From these he creates Pinkus, the lost dog. But the change back to a frankfurter for space-economy purposes is fatal. The hotdog (or cold) jumps out of the window and is lost. That is how Charley happens to be holding up everybody who passes, searching their pockets for the lost frankfurter, Pinkus. And why he is arrested. It is to the judge he tells his harrowing tale. But Charley discovers in the coat of the magistrate a frankfurter which becomes—not Pinkus, the performing poodle, but a dachshund. Luck is with him, however, for a second frankfurter, found up the trouser leg of the arresting policeman, turns out to be Pinkus.

For genuine amusement and originality there are few things offered today in the picture world comparable to these Bowers “dreams.” Neal O'Hara's titles help a lot. The Cast: Charley Bowers, Pinkus, Corinne Powers, Mae Dean, George Williams, Roy Applegate, Jack Burdette, Dan Duffy. Authors and directors: Bowers and H. L. Muller. Titles, Russell Neal O'Hara. Released through F.B.O., February 21.

Short Shots No. 10

(Castle Films—One Reel)

THIS number of the Short Shots maintains the high standard established since the inception of the series. This issue incorporates shots of Katie Schmidt, world's champion figure skater, in action and Bobby Hern, the crack ice-skater, hurdling barrels. Next a Chinese fashion show in which some beautiful costumes are exhibited and in the same connection the novel hand-painted gowns of Antone Novak are projected. That circus folks continue working during the winter season is proved by the following scenes and then we see the latest one-man automobile, which, says its inventor, will run eighty miles to the gallon. The reel closes with an acrobatic sequence in which a ten-months-old baby is top “man.”

There are ten minutes of educational entertainment in this reel.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

Short Shots No. 11

(Castle Films—One Reel)

THEY do manage to pack quite a number of oddities into these one-reel subjects, as for instance, toe-dancing in Japan amidst beautiful natural settings, then a dog which has all the vaudeville tricks at his “toe-tips,” then the much publicized Hamid Bey, Egypt's miracle man who induces rabbits and chickens to lay down and roll over for the benefit of the audience; Minna Schmidt, who is no relation of Katie in Short Shots No. 10, exhibits some of her handiwork in the form of sculptured models of the ladies of all times, from Cleopatra to Gertrude Ederle and “Philadelphia” Jack O'Brien shows stout women how to reduce the superfluous avoirdupois. They also show a baby messing around with a flock of alligators, which didn't strike me so funny, for I expected “one look, one swallow,” American fashion. More instructive and pleasant diversion for your patrons, so book it.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"I'm the Sheriff"

(Universal-Gump Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

ANDY is invested with the honor but logically not the dignity—can you possibly associate the latter quality with Sidney Smith's creation?—of the office of sheriff. He is discovered doing his spring planting with a duck picking up each seed as he drops it in the furrow. Then he uses top torpedoes belonging to "Chester" with the result that there are constant explosions. One torpedo hurled at a neighbor brings the latter over to punch "Andy." To impress "Chester," Andy lays off his badge and—gets punched. That for a starter.

Then motoring with "Min" and "Chester," "Andy" loses a tire. It starts one of those endless pursuit races ending at a repair shop owned by—whom do you think? None other than the irate neighbor with whom "Andy" has already had one fight. Thinking that one of his own new tires is being carried off by the chinless one he naturally makes "Andy" pay for a new tire. And to add to the latter's distress it is his own old tire which blows out once it is placed on the machine. It is a sad life these cartoon characters live with almost no alleviating joy.

As usual, Joe Murphy, Fay Tincher and Jackie Morgan are directed by Erle Kenton. Released March 7.

"Smith's New Home"

(Pathe-Mack Sennett—Two Reels)

AN hilariously funny two-reeler this. I am predisposed in favor of the Smith family anyway, composed as it is of the delightfully human Raymond McKee, Ruth Hiatt and Mary Ann Jackson, to say nothing of the dog. And in this one, which concerns itself with the signing of a lease for a new home and the subsequent ruin of that selfsame home by a rainstorm, they are at their funniest and best. Even before the storm breaks the family and the next door neighbors, their conscienceless landlords, have gone through enough trouble for an ordinary two-reeler. A freshly-laid concrete walk, a mud puddle in which the two children of the adjoining families and then their elders manage to land: these things merely prepare for Smith and the landlord on the roof trying to patch up a hole in the roof.

Exhibitors, book this one if you never booked a comedy before. When you get hard-boiled reviewers cackling in a projection room you can bank your less sophisticated audiences will chortle even more. Credit J. A. Waldron for his direction also. Released March 6.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Clouds. Korea and Wild, Wild Babies"

(Pathe Review No. 10—One Reel)

CLOUD shots at sunset and then in the moonlight make up the first part of the Pathe Review to be released March 6. Some excellent photography is found in these even though you feel you have seen the same thing a number of times before. But there cannot be too much of that which is really beautiful, hence they are welcome in any program.

"Cultivating Korea" tells of farm life in rural districts of that small but picturesque country. It emphasizes the primitive methods of farming still followed there. Done in Pathecolor, it is an effective travelogue.

"Wild, Wild Babies," produced by John Rounan, is an unusual group of shots of animals and their young. Mallards, malamutes, coons, skunks, lions, monkeys, mules, goats, kangaroos; these are the subjects of excellent photographic work. On the theory that all the world loves not only a lover but a baby, there is your appeal. It is universal.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Taking the Air"

(Pathe-Fables—One Reel)

AVIATION is the theme of the Pathe artists in this March 6th release. Farmer Al decides to try for the prize offered for the highest altitude achieved. First a chair with an umbrella to act as a parachute over the cliff-side; total results, disaster. Then reversing his auto, removing the wheels, standing the machine on end with the motor as the propelling force, he ascends to unbelievable heights. But again back to mother earth. He does get the reward but, opened, it proves to be a bag, not of money, but mice. Can you beat that? He risked his life twice and won the prize and that is the manner in which the cartoonists reward him. It is a hard life, mates, particularly if you happen to be an animated cartoon character.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Sailor, Beware!"

(Educational-Billy Dooley Comedy—Reels)

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

THE balance of the song, "for many brave hearts are asleep in the deep," the favorite vocal exercise for baritones who possess subway voices, is not at all pertinent to this Billy Dooley comedy. It is a question of not only "sailor, beware!" but everyone else in the picture, because Billy is carrying ashore for his girl a guinea pig and another guinea pig carrying all the diseases in the medical calendar has escaped. Naturally, Billy's pig is avoided as one would an inmate of the pest house. Billy, with his fatuous smile, is ignorant of all this and goes blissfully on his way. He even gets the idea that his rival, the husky Eddie Baker, is intimidated by his physical prowess and flees on that account—not because of fear of infection from the pig.

For a fitting finale the health squad, carrying disinfectant atomizers. This disinfectant renders semi-conscious, for the moment, all on whom it is blown. You can, without seeing the picture, imagine what Billy does with that, once he gets his hands on a machine.

It is one of the best of the Dooley series with a succession of amusing situations, including the run-away street car.

The cast: Billy Dooley, Vera Steadman, Eddie Baker, Bill Irving. Director, William Watson. Producer, Christie.

"Felix the Cat in Icy Eyes"

(Educational-Pat Sullivan Cartoon—One Reel)

ALAS for unrequited affection! Felix sees what he thinks is his ideal but she turns him down cold. And then, man-like, to get her attention he undertakes some fancy skating before her unappreciative eyes. He even rescues her from an icy plunge through the ice. But even that nets him no smiles or appreciation. But when he solves a jewel robbery and recovers the gems and has become famous and wealthy she relents. Alas, it is too late; she has become fat and unattractive, so that the critical Felix spurns her with eyes that are just as icy as hers had been earlier in the reel when both were younger and she was slender and svelte—whatever that quality may be.

Felix is alright as a sleuth but not so strong as a suitor. His shortcomings here are a merit and Pat Sullivan tells a tale with a moral that he who runs or skates can read.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"Golf and How"

(Castle Films—One Reel)

THIS reel makes its bid for popularity at a propitious moment as "it won't be long now" before the national fever of unrest will cause the men to lay down the pen and pick up the driver. An excellent treatise on golf and how it should be played is given in this production which shows informal poses of some of our and England's great golfers. Bob Morrison, of Los Angeles, gives a practical demonstration of how a golf club should be held, the manner of distributing weight during the swing, the hand-grip and then proceeds to show some shots, the drive, getting out of the "bunker," the putt, winding up with some fancy shots, using a girl's toe, knee and nose as the tee.

They'll enjoy this one, so get it for them.—HAROLD FLAVIN.

"A Polo Bear"

(Bray Comedy—Two Reels)

(Reviewed by Raymond Ganly)

HE comes into her life, does the conventional surmounting of the difficulties, the foiling of the villains and the winning of her heart—that's what Lewis Sargent does to Wanda Wiley all through this Bray offering, which is programmed for March 20. There is no doubt about it; he had the ability and he did his stuff in convincing fashion. An insignificant detail like being acquainted with neither a horse or the game of polo does not deter a man of Sargent's caliber from mastering the ways of horses and the intricacies of polo in an incredibly short period of time and becoming an adept in this aristocrat of the sports. There is some degree of humor in his efforts to mount his steed (his first attempt, we are told) and the way the patient and understanding animal reacts to his struggles. They have mixed suspense and drama with comedy here, for the hero is subdued by the villains who intend throwing the game just as Sargent is about to play for Wanda and her father. But when the game reaches the important stage, the hero appears on the scene and wins the game, which process was expected and is entirely up to the Hollywood standards.

A fair proportion of entertainment is meted out in this one.

First of the Will Rogers Travelogues

(Pathe-Dublin is the start—One Reel)

AND now Will Rogers makes his re-entry on the moving picture screen. It seems that all the time he was abroad last year he had a cameraman with him to shoot interesting people and buildings. Now they are being released with typical Rogers comments. The first stop is in Dublin, where the comedian and lecturer, tobacco endorser (even though he does not smoke), lasso and bull thrower, etc., introduces his movie audience to the President of the Irish Republic. Then he goes rambling around the city and to a view of the small army. Incidentally he points out the fact that despite the youth (as a separate nation) and smallness of Ireland she has more army planes today than the United States has. Further editorial material for Arthur Brisbane.

Judging by the first reel the Rogers ramblings will be quite amusing largely because of his method of presentation and his quips.—PAUL THOMPSON.

"The Rival Sex"

(Pathe-Sportlight—One Reel)

IN this release Grantland Rice pays tribute to women and their place in sports. He contends that, with the strides they have already made, in a few years they will be on the level of the performances by men in the matter of distance, speed, etc. He shows excellent moving pictures of women at archery, playing hockey, rowing, throwing the javelin and discus, putting the shot, hurdling, sprinting, etc. It is an extremely interesting contribution and one of the first in text and pictures to give the women their due. It will score naturally with them and also with their brothers, fathers, sons and husbands. So the appeal is universal—PAUL THOMPSON.

"A Furry Tale"

(Bray Nature Special—One Reel)

IT is a safe guess and a sure one to say that this issue from the Bray Studios will find a response from the women-folk.

Furs are an important article to be taken into consideration when replying to the question, "What is the well-dressed woman wearing?" This commendable production gives us interesting and generous glimpses of the many four-footed little folk who give up their lives and their skins that mankind might be warm during the rigorous winter months.

An appealing little number. Released on February 21.—RAYMOND GANLY.

The Wrong Mr. Wright

Not Particularly Amusing Farce Screened

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

MANY years ago George Broadhurst wrote a farce-comedy called "The Wrong Mr. Wright," which enjoyed much success. Harold Shumate made a scenario of this. Scott Sidney directed. Jean Hersholt starred and Carl Laemmle "presented." The result is not so satisfactory.

To meet a sweetheart of fifteen years before who had jilted him, married and become a widow, Hersholt, as the son of a corset manufacturer, goes to Atlantic City to meet the girl of his dreams. She proves to be overweight, with two impossible brat-children. But a letter, promising marriage, which the diffident son of the corset works has sent, dictated by his father, complicates things. A female detective trails him, thinking he is the cashier of the firm, also traced to Atlantic City with ten thousand dollars belonging to the firm. The cashier has taken the money to put on with the sales manager a show of teddies, or whatever feminine undergarment is supposed to replace the corset, and thus save the tottering firm. Their plot succeeds and they get the orders. Hersholt is exonerated. He has fallen in love with the female sleuth and she with him.

Seemingly a lot of trouble has been taken and money spent, but the result does not, from my viewpoint, justify it. It lacks plausibility and provides a lot of situations that are banal and un-amusing.

The Cast: Jean Hersholt, Walter Hiers, Dorothy Devore, Enid Bennett, Edgar Kennedy, Jay Belasco, Mathilde Comont, Robert Anderson. Director, Scott Sidney. Author, George Broadhurst. Scenarist, Harold Shumate. Titles by James Madison.

THEME: Farce-comedy story of mistaken identity. Diffident son of corset manufacturer's love tale of disenchantment with childhood sweetheart and new romance with woman detective.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Hard to find.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Broadhurst was long famous for his farce successes. Hersholt's growing fame.

DRAWING POWER: Fair.

Length, 6,459 feet. Released February 27.

Johnny Get Your Hair Cut

Better Production Would Make This a "Wow"

(Reviewed by Harold Flavin)

JACKIE COOGAN'S first grown-up production proves a better than average program picture and if dressed up a little more, it could have made Broadway without any trouble. It seems the producers were marking time on the Chaplin protege awaiting audience reaction to Jackie with his hair cut; to our mind the child hasn't the magnetic appeal that made him so popular since Chaplin took him under his wing; he is still "there" with the limpid brown eye and the appealing gestures—gets even more out of them though he has not become theatrical—he gives an unaffected performance. While the title gives no indication of the nature of the story its reason for being is obvious and quite a few of the posters show Jackie in a barber shop being clipped; evidently to arouse curiosity as to how he looks shorn of his locks.

Jackie becomes a jockey in this first film under his new contract. The story tells of an orphan, practically raised with horses, and his great opportunity when he is permitted to ride a has-been in the ——— stakes which, needless to say, he wins. There is quite a bit of comedy throughout the action and an excellent cast supports the star. Ralph Spence turned out a good set of titles.

The Cast: Jackie Coogan, Mattie Witting, Maurice Costello, James Corrigan, Pat Hartigan, Bobby Doyle, Kenneth Erickson. Directed by E. Reeves Eason and Archie Mayo.

THEME: Orphan, raised with horses, saves daughter of horse owner and is allowed to ride under owner's colors in big race which he wins.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: The scenes at the race track—at the boarding house and the barber shop. The race.

DRAWING POWER: Good draw for neighborhood and second run houses. For the whole family.

Produced and distributed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Length, 6,781 feet. Released January, 1927.

Don Mike

Fred Thomson Scores Another Hit

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

WERE I Fred Thomson or his distributor, Joseph P. Kennedy, I certainly would make a determined effort to book "Don Mike" for one or more weeks on Broadway. It would show the somewhat provincial New Yorkers that a man whose pictures they practically never see on the main street is doing things just as important and just as well done as some of the—to them—better known stars. "Don Mike" belongs in that category. It is not a big picture judged by so-called "special" standards, but it can court comparison and emerge from the ordeal unashamed. Few more striking or effective scenes can be recalled than the hacienda in Southern California, the ancestral home of "Mike" Thomson. Color, incident, humor abound. Then follow striking photographic shots throughout the balance of the story so that in handing out credit to the star, Frank Clifton's story, and Lloyd Graham's continuity and direction, Cameraman Ross Fisher deserves more than honorable mention.

Not only does Thomson give one of the best performances of his career, but he is admirably supported by Noah Young, Ruth Clifford, William Courtright, Albert Frisco and the others.

The Cast: Fred Thomson, Silver King, Ruth Clifford, Noah Young, Albert Frisco, William Courtright, Tom Bates, Norma Marie, Carmen Le Roux. Author, Frank M. Clifton. Continuity and director, Lloyd Ingraham. Cameraman, Ross Fisher.

THEME: Attempt of a Yankee squatter to steal property of Mexican hidalgo California, when the country became a state. Romantic, swashbuckling drama.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: All the preceding. Stress "one of the best yet" Fred Thomson pictures.

DRAWING POWER: Should be excellent.

Length, 5,723 feet. Released February 27.

Hills of Kentucky

Home-spun Yarn with Rin-Tin-Tin Starred

(Reviewed by Paul Thompson)

AGAIN Rin-Tin-Tin plays the role of the god-from-the-machine, baffles the villain, saves the heroine's life and does all the other things that a two-legged hero would or could do. This is in "The Hills of Kentucky," Edward Clark's script from Dorothy Yost's story, "The Untamed Heart." It will satisfy admirers of the extremely clever dog actor—and others.

A school teacher with a crippled younger brother, the fine, upstanding, youthful mountaineer in love with her, the villain who hates the hero and covets the heroine and the outlaw dog, leader of a pack, whose extermination the villain also desires. The dog not only rescues his own mate captured in a trap but saves the heroine from going over the falls on a raft to which she has been tied by the "heavy." Incidental, of course, is the child's love for the misunderstood dog and the reciprocal affection of Rin-Tin-Tin for this child, the latter quite well played by Billie Kent Shaeffer, not unknown in the movie world. The foregoing, in brief, is the plot.

It is an elemental, kindergarten story but it has an appeal. Not only is the canine star afforded an opportunity to do the unusual things that he does so well, but he is fortunate in the human support which he has. This includes Jason Robards—who is featured as the hero—Dorothy Dwan, as the heroine, and Tom Santschi, who is his usual villainous self.

The Cast: Rin-Tin-Tin, Jason Robards, Dorothy Dwan, Tom Santschi, Billy Kent Shaeffer, Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., and Nanette (also a dog). Director, Howard Bretherton. Author, Dorothy Yost. Scenarist, Edward Clark. Cameraman, Frank Keason.

THEME: Outlaw dog reclaimed by crippled child's kindness. Saves sister of child from villain's machinations in the hills of old Kentucky.

PRODUCTION HIGHLIGHTS: Melodramatic quality of story. Star's uncanny cleverness. Good support. Convincing atmosphere.

EXPLOITATION ANGLES: Star's prestige and popularity.

DRAWING POWER: Good.

Length, 6,271 feet. Released February 19.
Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers.

Regional News from Correspondents

Cleveland

DOWNTOWN business in the picture theatres was most satisfactory last week. The fact that all of the downtown first-run houses were playing big pictures did much to stimulate business all over. Competition was keen. Exploitation was alive and the weather mild enough to encourage even the most timid to brave the terrors of the winter. "Don Juan" played to packed houses both matinees and evenings and, of course, is being held over. "The Show" vied with "Don Juan" for first place in local favor. "McFadden's Flats" packed the Cameo. "An Affair of the Follies" at the State, "Love's Great Mistake" at Keith's Palace, and "Wandering Girls" at Reade's Hippodrome all fared well with the public. The Metropolitan scored with a return engagement of "The Sea Hawk" and "Tell It To the Marines" staged a record second-run at the Park. The neighborhood houses, however, reported business off. The Circle at Euclid Avenue and East 101st Street, an uptown first-run house, did big business. Vitaphone was the big attraction at the Circle. The picture, "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," was secondary.

The Circle Theatre is starting its week on Saturday now. This policy went into effect with the installation and presentation of Vitaphone.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association will move on or about March 1st into Room 713, Film Exchange Bldg. This space is about three times the size of the present organization headquarters. In addition to a director's room and a secretary's room, the new quarters will also house a club room. Secretary W. J. Banks is busy picking out carpets and new furniture and he promises a real club room when he gets through

It's party time for the local exhibitors. Every year about this time the members of the Cleveland Motion Pictures' Exhibitors' Association feel the urge of a party. Jules Schwartz heads the entertainment with Frank Gross, Henry Greenberger, Henry Lustig and Percy Essick as fellow conspirators. It'll be a dinner dance with surprise entertainment features. Exhibitors are hereby notified to get their glad rags out of camphor so as to be ready for the big affair, which is scheduled to come off in a week or so.

Sol Bernstein is busy remodelling the Lyceum Theatre, Canton. It is being done over inside and out and when completed will play a straight second-run picture policy. The Lyceum used to be the home of Keith vaudeville until just recently when the new Keith-Albee house was completed.

Jack Steinberg, well-known Youngstown exhibitor, is suffering from a combination of grip and spring fever. He's using all his leisure hours reading the timetables and expects to be on his way in the near future.

Frank Howard, of the Detroit P. D. C. sales force, is a victim of Division Manager Robert Cotton's policy of promotion within the ranks. Howard is now on his way to Atlanta, Ga., to take over the management of that exchange.

The local P. D. C. exchange personnel has formed a social club. It's so new it has no name at yet. The first event of the organization will take place on Wednesday. It will be a dinner party downtown followed by a theatre party at Keith's Palace Theatre.

Jack Flynn, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer division manager, spent a few days in town last week going over division matters with local Exchange Manager Arthur Ehrlich.

The girls of the Standard Film Service Company held their monthly social meeting last Saturday at the home of Catherine Zwilling. It was a Valentine bridge, with prizes, valentine favors and a spread. There were four tables of bridge.

Harry Charnas, president of the Standard Film Service Company, who went to California about a month ago for his health, reports home that he has gained fourteen pounds and a corresponding amount of pep. He'll be back in Cleveland the end of February or the beginning of March.

The Columbia Theatre, Cleveland, formerly the home of Columbia burlesque, will open February 26th under the management of Nestor Lavene, with musical stock. Lavene was formerly with the Grand Theatre, Akron, which was also a burlesque house until recently. It is now playing dramatic stock and the burlesque shows have moved over to the Musical.

There's a rumor around town that the Columbia burlesque people are dickering for the Stillman Theatre, Cleveland. The Stillman is now one of the strong links in the Loew's Ohio Theatres chain, playing special photoplays and continued runs. No verification of this rumor could be obtained, but it is persistent enough to attract more than passing attention.

From Fremont comes word that John Harland has closed the Gem Theatre.

Gibsonberg, O., comes to the fore with a new 300-seat motion picture theatre which will be completed in about a month. W. B. Follett, who runs the Star Theatre in Fremont, is building it.

C. H. Miller keeps his Opera House in Fremont open only on Sundays and Mondays. On those days he plays legitimate attractions and road-show picture attractions. The house is closed the rest of the week, but the Strand plays a straight picture policy seven days of the week.

W. J. Powell, proprietor of the Lo-Net, Wellington, has gone to Florida for the months of February and March.

George Kadell, of the Strand Theatre, Carey, Ohio, has let a contract for redecorating his house.

J. R. Johnson—you all remember him as manager of the old Vitagraph exchange here—was in Cleveland last week and called around on his various friends in the Film Building. Johnson has been interested in real estate in Florida for the past several years. Now he is interested in some advertising proposition in Columbus.

A. G. Constant, who owns and operates theatres in Steubenville and all through Southern Ohio, has recently taken over the Temple Theatre in Bellaire. It formerly belonged to George Velas.

R. Knoepfle has been named manager of the Warner Brothers exchange in Cincinnati. He succeeds Jack Stewart. Matthiew Schiesel, for many years associated with the Cleveland Universal exchange, is now with the Majestic Sales Company of Toledo. The company manufactures a completely equipped miniature automobile which is being used for exploitation in the theatres.

John Pekras, leading Elyria exhibitor, had his tonsils out last week and says he never felt better in his life. Pekras has been in ill health for several years.

John Kessler, who owned and operated the Alhambra Theatre, Canton, for many years until he sold it to the Silverman brothers, was married last week. He has been a restaurateur since his wthdrawal from the exhibition field.

Martin Printz, general manager of the Circle Theatre, Cleveland's first Vitaphone house, was in New York last week, presumably trying to arrange for the showing of Vitaphone accompaniment to the big Warner specials. At present the Circle is confining its Vitaphone program to the specialty acts only.

Vitaphone is practically all set in northern Ohio. Information has been given out that nine installations in this territory have already been contracted for and that three more are almost closed. The nine contracted for are two in Cleveland and one in each of the following towns: Toledo, Akron, Canton, Youngstown, Alliance, Warren and Zanesville.

Frank Greenwald, formerly of the Greenwald-Griffith exchange, and more recently with Columbia pictures, is now a member of the selling organization of the local Metro-Goldwyn exchange.

Baltimore

FRANK HAMERMAN, president of the American Theatres Corporation, who has been managing the Embassy Theatre, 415 East Baltimore Street, has gone to Philadelphia to supervise the management of the theatres in Pennsylvania operated by that company. Succeeding him is Harry Berman, brother of Louis Berman, president of the Independent Theatres Corporation of Philadelphia.

Cora Whitaker, about 60 years of age, sister of Kent Whitaker, one of the doormen at the Rivoli Theatre, Baltimore, died recently in Baltimore.

Minnie Keyser, program distributor at Loew's Century Theatre, Baltimore, Md., has resigned her position to go to the Tivoli Theatre, Brooklyn, N.Y., having been offered a position at that playhouse by Harry Shead, formerly manager of the Century.

The Majestic Theatre, 1118 Light Street, Baltimore, Md., and the haberdashery store next to it, both owned by Joseph Brodie, was badly damaged by fire early Sunday morning, at 1 o'clock when the bad sleet storm was at its worst.

Four alarms were sent in and the billowing smoke hindered the firemen somewhat but at 2 o'clock the fire was under control. The Majestic Theatre, formerly the Brodie was leased recently to Ruben Soltz, Pittsburgh, Pa., by Mr. Brodie.

Mrs. Elsa Julien Smith has been declared the legal widow of George Edgar Smith, the late treasurer of the New Theatre Company operating that playhouse here, according to a decision handed down by the Court of Appeals confirming the verdict of the lower court.

An enjoyable night was spent by the members of the Deputy Sheriff's Association, of which practically all the motion picture theatre owners and exhibitors of Baltimore are members, at the Alcazar on Thursday night, February 17th, when "A Night in Bohemia" was given by the association.

Frederick Clement Weber, associated with Warner's Metropolitan Theatre, was in charge of the committee of arrangements and Frank H. Durkee, who operates a number of playhouses here, was his assistant, with a number of other members, on the committee. The affair lasted from 8 P.M. to 3 A.M.

Denver

MARCELLUS C. GERHART, one of the pioneer exhibitors of the West, died last Tuesday morning while submitting to a minor operation in a Ft. Collins, Colo., hospital. Mr. Gerhart was in the best of health apparently just a few days before when visiting exchanges in Denver and his sudden death was a distinct shock to all who knew him. He had operated the Empress Theatre of Ft. Collins for a number of years and formerly operated theatres in Wyoming before coming to Colorado. The funeral was held in Ft. Collins Friday afternoon and was attended by a number of exhibitors and exchange managers. He leaves a widow and a small daughter.

The Alladin, Denver's newest and most beautiful theatre, gave Denver a treat last Friday night when the Vitaphone was introduced to local theatre-goers. The house was packed and those in attendance were astounded at what they saw and heard. Mr. Huffman, manager of the theatre, will put on all Vitaphone productions.

S. D. Weisbaum, F.B.O. manager returned Friday from a two weeks' trip visiting exhibitors in New Mexico. He visited all key cities as well as numerous other points.

E. C. Trieb, president of the Civic Theatres Co. of Roswell, N. M., arrived in Denver Friday for several days' visit with Denver exchange managers. The Civic Theatres Co. operates theatres in Roswell, Portales and Carlsbad, N.M.

"Whoopee, go to it," shouted O. A. Kressin Thursday night in the Rivoli Theatre as the antics of the star in the picture appealed to his western blood. The management of the theatre went to it immediately and Kressin was yanked out and taken to the police station. "I live at the Cheyenne Hotel," said Kressin but police didn't think that made him a cowboy and held him on charges for disturbing the peace.

A. G. Edwards, Producers manager, returned to Denver Monday, after a long sales trip into New Mexico district.

New York and New Jersey

STUART HOLMES, Marguerite Clayton, George Walsh, Miriam Battista and a host of celebrities from New York's night clubs actively participated in the opening ceremonies of Loew's Grand Theatre, Fordam Road and Jerome Avenue, last Thursday evening. A wire was read from Marcus Loew, now in Palm Beach, regretting his inability to be present, by N. T. G. of WHN, who acted as master of ceremonies. Nicholas M. Schenck, first vice-president of Loew's Incorporated and general manager of all Loew Theatre properties, represented the vaudeville and photoplay magnate. Loew's Grand adopted its regular policy of vaudeville and feature pictures combined in continuous performances from 1 to 11 o'clock the following day.

The Calderone Circuit, managing motion picture theatres in Hempstead, Lynbrook and Valley Stream, L.I., has adopted a cooperative group insurance program for its employes. Underwritten by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the life insurance established exceeds $58,000, while liberal benefits are payable under the terms of a health and non-occupational accident policy.

In the main group, composed of rank and file employes, each worker receives $1,000 life insurance, and under the health and accident policy, he will receive weekly benefits when unable to work due to sickness from any cause or injury received while off the job. These benefits amount to $10 a week and are payable for a maximum of thirteen consecutive weeks.

In addition to contributing liberally towards the cost of the insurance, the Calderone Circuit has arranged with the insurance company to provide sick or disabled employes with the advantages of a visiting nurse service, and the frequent distribution of health conservation pamphlets.

Louis Gold, formerly connected with the Steiner and Blinderman circuit for a long period, has purchased the Chester Theatre, Brooklyn.

Universal's new Brooklyn theatre project at New Utrecht Avenue, Boro Park section, will probably reach completion in a month or six weeks. This house will introduce the atmospheric type theatre to this zone.

Among those who will be missing at the Theatre Owners Chamber of Commerce Ball on Monday evening, will be Joe Hornstein, Eastern zone manager of the National Theatre Supply Company. Joe is still in Chicago.

New equipment sales reported by National include the Strand Theatre, Summit, N.J.; Roth Bros., new Maplewood, which will open on Feb. 28th, and the Tivoli, Brooklyn, a house reopening with Vitaphone.

Another theatre reported to be ready for its first night is the new Broadway at East Rockaway. The 28th of February is reported to be the definite date.

The Bergen Theatre, Tenafly, will also open on Feb. 28th.

Florida

THE Tampa Tourist Club, composed of winter visitors, are giving weekly entertainments for their members. This week the entertainment committee arranged for an airplane flight over the city for those who wished to go up in the air, and a matinee theatre party at the Victory for those who prefer to take their entertainment on terra firma. The theatre party had much the best of it.

Irene Reynolds, a singer known as "The Sweetheart of the Air," a title given her while broadcasting from station WOW at Omaha, is playing a return engagement at the Tampa this week.

The management of the Rialto gave a theatre party to the members of the Washington American ball club, who are now in Tampa for their training season. Clark Griffith, president of the club, Connie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics and other notables of the diamond were there also.

The Tampa is showing a special reel this week, made up of scenes taken last week during the Gasparilla Carnival. It is very interesting. Another feature of this week's bill is the offering of the Symphony Orchestra, "Rhapsody in Blue."

Horseshoe pitching is becoming one of the most popular amusements of Florida's winter guests, so this week, in addition to the regular line up of amusements in St. Petersburg, we have an Annual Convention and Winter Tournament of the National Horseshoe Pitchers' Association. They get six-bits admission too.

W. H. Carroll, a former Tampa exhibitor, is now located in Douglas, Ga., and having wonderful success with the Rivoli there. Lately he gave a benefit performance for the Woman's Club. In appreciation of his efforts to help the local civic and social associations, the Woman's Club issued a public letter in which they commended him for running his theatre on such a high plane and being so public spirited. Last fall there was a shortage of homes in this city and Mr. Carroll headed a combination of citizens who each contributed a sum of money to be handled through a building committee, and new homes were erected as fast as there was a demand for them.

There's nothing like being loyal to your firm and having confidence in your line. The above thought was suggested by overhearing a film salesman doing his stuff. He told of the merit of his products and their wonderful drawing power. "Why," said he, "wise exhibitors know the value of our films. Whenever a mortgage comes due, or the house must be remodeled, or the taxes have to be paid, they simply order in our service which pulls the money, pays the bills and they bank the difference." Not bad, hey?

Milwaukee

THE theatre-going public was only mildly active last week, concentrating their patronage at the Wisconsin Theatre, showing "The Show," and at the Alhambra, where "Night of Love" was held over for its second week, drawing in its second week a goodly crowd. "The Four Horsemen," at the Merrill, drew a fair patronage, possibly seeming more slim by contrast to the unprecedented crowds that stood in line until 10:30 P.M. the week before to see "Tell It to the Marines." The snappy cold spell which finished up the last two days of a week of slushy, rainy weather, marked an increase in patronage at all theatres.

Ray Kerredge, of the Kerredge Theatre, Hancock, is seriously ill and is now at the Mayo Hospital at Rochester, Minn.

George Fischer, of the Milwaukee Theatre, Milwaukee, will take over the Allis Theatre, West Allis, in the fall. Gene Phelan is the present owner. Mr. Fischer is planning to strengthen his position further by the erection of a new 2,-200-seat house in the vicinity of National Avenue and Seventh on the South Side. This will be competition to Saxe's Modjeska and Tower, the two pre-release suburban houses of the Saxe chain.

J. P. Adler was in the city during the week, dating up pictures for the Adler and Trio at Marshfield, the Majestic and Lyric at Stevens Point, and the Waupaca Theatre at Waupaca.

Roman Bollenbeck, Sheboygan exhibitor, made his first visit in a long time to the exchanges here. Mr. Bollenbeck is managing the Majestic.

The opening of Saxe's new Ambassador Theatre on the East Side is scheduled for Decoration Day.

Louis Rossa, manager of the Douglas Theatre at Racine, spent a few hours in the city on business during the past week.

The opening of the Crown Theatre at Racine has been changed to the 12th of March. Steve Dorece, manager, was in the city to arrange bookings and also to arrange for the installation of the new Barton organ which just arrived.

Since he sold out his Parkway Theatre, E. W. Van Norman seems to have lost his bowling eye. Anyhow, his team in the exchange-exhibitor tournament is in cellar position, having lost three straight again last week to Charley Trampe's "Tigers." The "Tigers" continue to hold top place in the league.

George Bauch, formerly owner of the Mirth Theatre, Milwaukee, which was taken over by Saxe, is now traveling the territory in the interests of Charles Trampe's Midwest Exchange.

Harvey Hanson, of the Palace Theatre at Antigo, visited Milwaukee exchanges during the week.

Manager Wheeler, of the new Menominee Theatre, Menominee, is very proud, and justly so, over the excellent business the new theatre is doing. Formerly all Menominee crossed the bridge to Marinette for their entertainment, but now they stay at home.

A. J. Cooper was seen this week at the local exchanges. Mr. Cooper is an infrequent visitor. He manages the Bijou and Strand theatres in LaCrosse.

John Ludwig left this week on a trip to Fargo, N.D. Mr. Ludwig is planning to stop off at Minneapolis to look after his interests there.

On Thursday, we met Louis Shimon at the exchanges. Mr. Shimon is manager of the Uptown in Sheboygan.

A trade screening of Will Rogers, Wednesday morning at the Strand, was well attended.

At the home of Eddie Pruesser on Thursday morning, there arrived a new nine-pound baby girl. Eddie admitted he would have liked a boy whom he might train to become an exhibitor. Mr. Preusser is manager of the South Side Palace.

With the completion of the Orpheum and the new picture house in Madison, in which the Saxes are interested, over 5,000 seats will be added to the city in the fall. It will be one of the most highly competitive situations in the state.

The Strand Theatre at Kenosha is undergoing extensive redecorating and remodelling. The cost of renovating, it is estimated, will be about $5,000. The theatre will be again opened on March 15.

"Doc' Honeck, P.D.C. branch manager, left Tuesday for a trip through the Southern part of the state.

Paul Conley, manager of the Majestic, Reedsburg, was among out-of-town exhibitors in the city during the week.

G. H. Adams, Port Washington exhibitor, was in the city during the week, looking over vaudeville acts he is intending to use on the Ozaukee Theatre program.

L. L. Ballard, United Artists representative, started out early this week on a trip through the state, and was brought back suffering with a severe attack of acute appendicitis. It was not found necessary to operate, and Mr. Ballard is now convalescing rapidly. We all miss Mr. Ballard's genial good humor and witty remarks, and hope he will be back along the Row soon.

L. Thurwachter, of the Park at Waukesha, made a brief visit to exchanges.

Seattle

B. WALLACE RUCKER, for the last six years a film salesman in this city, was last week appointed manager of the Educational branch office by Max Stahl, special representatives of the New York home office, who arrived here a short time ago. Mr. Rucker succeeds J. A. Gage. Rucker is essentially a Northwest film man, personally acquainted with practically every theatre man in Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

C. E. Farrell, Colonial Theatre owner and manager from Ellensburg, Washington, spent a few days in this city last week.

J. R. Allen, formerly a salesman for Manager George P. Endert's local Famous Players-Lasky Exchange, returned last week with the road show of "Beau Geste," which played at the Metropolitan Theatre. Mr. Allen is business manager for the Northwestern unit of the "Beau Geste" companies.

Duncan G. Inverarity, at one time manager for Alexander Pantages in the Pacific Northwest, last week was announced as managing director of the Will Starkey Theatre Enterprises in Lewiston, Idaho. He succeeds M. Morris, whose resignation was tendered to the Spokane organization a short time ago.

A. J. Kennedy, exploiteer for Manager Jack Bower's local First National branch office, returned last week from Spokane, where he has worked for the last few weeks with Manager Frieday,. of the Clemmer Theatre. Des Moines

A SNOWSTORM which with another sudden change of weather turned to slush on the Des Moines streets, broke into the middle of the week's run of pictures and so influenced in a measure the success of the features billed for the houses here last week. "The Flesh and the Devil," which played at the Des Moines, opened exceedingly well and did very well for the week's run, showing with Gene Austin, Victor recording artist, who was a drawing card. Indications are that John Gilbert's popularity would blaze brightly in Iowa with a little fanning.

Considerable effort was made to give "Love's Greatest Mistake," at the Capitol, strong support and the attention was especially directed in the ads, etc., to the added attractions, playing up the Black Bottom favorites, which was accompanied with a Castle Film and "The Roaming Gypsies," one of the Publix attractions. The strong program with the picture undoubtedly was responsible for its doing a pretty good week.

"The Nervous Wreck," which opened at the Strand did not play up as strong as had "Charley's Aunt" and other similar comedy numbers, though it did very well. It was played up strong with ballyhoo, billboards, newspaper space and everything extra in publicity. "Easy Pickings," which finished out the week at the Strand, did exceedingly well.

A. N. Davies has bought the Star at Sioux Rapids. This house was previously operated by R. H. Romillard.

J. A. Ashmore has sold his house at Hornick to William Barrett. The theatre is named the Owl.

The Star Theatre at Exline recently changed hands. Ida McDonald sold to C. R. Davies.

The Rialto Theatre, at Sioux City, has been leased by Joy Sutphen who has been manager of the Brandeis Theatre at Omaha for the past fourteen years.

A. G. Miller, who recently bought the Gem Theatre at Little Rock, Iowa, will make a few changes in the theatre under his management. He bought the house from A. Hokuf.

Harry David left for New York for a conference with Mr. Katz. Mr. David is in charge of the Publix Theatres of the A. H. Blank-Publix chain. Mrs. David will return to Des Moines with her husband and they will make their home at the Fort Des Moines Hotel.

The theatre at Dumont, which is operated by Mr. O'Keefe, will be closed for a time. Bad roads are a contributory cause to lack of business at this house, which was recently cut from two nights a week to a one-night show. Later, the manager says, he may be able to make the theatre pay.

Jack Osserman has been on the Universal sales force for the past several weeks and will cover Zone B for them. He comes from the office of Universal, at Washington, D.C., where he was manager.

R. S. Ballantyne, who has been made western division sales manager for Pathe, with the territory comprising Butte, Denver, Los Angeles, Portland, Salt Lake, San Francisco and Seattle, was one of the most popular of the exchange managers while he was in charge of the Des Moines offices of Pathe. His promotion is of interest to many Iowa friends.

H. P. Wolsberg, district manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, came to the Des Moines office last week from the Omaha exchange.

Miss Ollie Reese, who is secretary to N. C. Rice, manager of the F.B.O. Exchange, is ill with the grippe. Another illness reported is that of L. L. Wells, salesman for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who has scarlet fever. Mr. Wells covers the state for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Robert Wynne, checker for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who has been ill, has left the hospital.

Albany

THE "Big Parade" demonstrated its drawing power in Albany, for the second time during a year, when it played to absolute capacity business for the first three days last week at the Capitol Theatre with an admission of $1.65 top. The picture could easily have been held over for the entire week. That there was sufficient business, however, to go around, was evident from capacity crowds during the week at the Mark Strand where "The Kid Brother" was the attraction. At the Leland "The Magician" played to fair business.

J. J. McDonald, an auditor from the home office of Famous Players, is in Albany, checking over the books.

It must be that the snows of Berlin are giving way to the advance of spring, for L. B. Tefft, who runs the motion picture theatre there, drifted into town last week and called on several of the exchanges.

Rae Candee, of Utica, formerly connected with Nate Robbins, has just opened an insurance office, and will hereafter be his own boss. Mr. Robbins, it is said, plans to build a new theatre this spring, in the residential section of Utica. He and Barney Lumberg another well known exhibitor of Utica, are seen lunching together these days.

Abe Van Dusen, booker at the Albany F.B.O. office, did such good work in a recent drive that he is now sporting a new watch, presented by Harry Weinberg, the exchange manager, George Goldberg, and Eddie McAvoy. The latter left last Friday for Washington, where he will be located for some time.
